

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

INTRODUCTION.

It is but right to warn the Reader that this does not pretend to be a History of Manchester; but only a collection of the raw material for its early history, so far as that material has been found in a written or permanent form. The History of Manchester, both in ancient and modern times, yet remains to be written.

The work, bearing that title, by the late Rev. John Whitaker (2 vols. 4to, London, 1771), consists for the most part of a general description of British, Roman and Anglo-Saxon polity, manners and customs, as they existed in England; with occasional local applications to the effect that such habits and customs "must have been" those of the inhabitants of Manchester, at the respective periods indicated. Moreover, it is an unfinished work, containing two only of the four books promised on its title-page, and terminating before the Norman Conquest. Hollinworth's Mancuniensis is a rough series of entries apparently intended for the compilation of annals; but these jottings are defective and imperfect, besides in various cases needing verification. It is only in the seventeenth century, when these notes are made from his own observation, that they become valuable.

He died in November 1656; and the last of these entries is dated September 11 in that year, when he was a prisoner in London.

Dr. Aikin's Description of the Country thirty to forty miles round Manchester (London, 4to, 1795), contains only seventy-one pages relating to Manchester, inclusive of a biography of John Byrom, M.A. Mr. J. Corry's History of Lancashire (2 vols. 4to, London, 1825), comprises its notices of Manchester in one hundred pages. Mr. Baines's History of Lancashire (4 vols. 4to, 1832), devotes two hundred and forty-eight pages to a history of the extensive parish of Manchester, including that of the town and manor, and various biographical notices and pedigrees of its eminent natives. Of later publications, the only one really ranking higher than a mere local Guide Book* is Mr. James

* Some of the older Guide Books are worth consulting, in reference to local historical facts, customs and usages, places and persons. Among these may be enumerated: 1. A Description of Manchester, by a Native of the Town. Printed and published by Charles Wheeler, June 1783.—2. The Charters of the Collegiate Church, the Free Grammar School, the [Cheetham's] Blue Coat Hospital, and the last Will and Testament of the late Catharine Richards [of Strangeways Hall]. Printed by T. Harper, 1791.—3. Aston's Manchester Guide. Printed by Joseph Aston, 1804.—4. A Picture of Manchester, by Joseph Aston, 3rd Edit. 1826. 5. Metrical Records of Manchester, by the Editor of the Manchester Herald [Joseph Aston]. London, 1822.—6. A Description of Manchester and Salford. Anonymous. Printed by Leech and Cheetham, no date, but probably in 1815 or 1816.—7. The Antiquities of the Town, and a Complete History of the Trade of Manchester, with a description of Manchester and Salford. By James Butterworth. Printed by W. C. Leake, Manchester, 1822.—Since 1830 there have been many Guides and Handbooks to Manchester, but

Wheeler's Manchester; but this is avowedly a collection of statistics exhibiting the progress of Manchester in population, manufactures, wealth and importance, chiefly during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries; and it merely glances at the early history of the place. The work of largest and most accurate information, and of the highest authority relative to the history of ancient Manchester and its institutions, is that entitled A History of the Foundations in Manchester, &c., chiefly by the late Dr. Hibbert-Ware, F.S.A. The work, still unfinished, is in four quarto volumes, of which the first three were published in 1834, and the fourth in 1848. The first three volumes consist of four parts: 1, A History of the Collegiate Church, which occupies the first volume and half the second; the other half being devoted to 2, An Architectural Description of the Collegiate Church and College, by the late Mr. John Palmer, architect. The third volume includes part 3, The History of Manchester [Free Grammar] School, and part 4. A History of the Chetham Hospital and Library. Both these parts are by the late Mr. William Robert Whatton, F.A.S. &c. Vol. 4 is by Dr. Hibbert-Ware, and is entitled The Ancient Parish Church of Manchester, and why it was collegiate; and this history is brought down to 1422, the year of that collegiate. Its venerable and learned author proposed, in a second book of this supplementary volume, to continue the history of the Collegiate Church, with notices of the munificent bequests made and sums expended, towards the erection of a new Collegiate Church and other buildings; the foundations of six chantries, in addition to the one or two previously existing; the alterations in the constitution of the collegiate body and staff of functionaries, as in 1527, and various other matters; all which purposes were arrested by the decease of Manchester's ablest historian and antiquary. This valuable work, however, even if it were complete, prefers no claim to be a general history of the place; but may rather be regarded as so many monographs relating to the parish church, two schools and a library. It contains, incidentally, many interesting facts connected with the general history of the manor; and the fourth volume especially is rich in notices of the early barons, the charter, and various grants, &c., then known to exist.* But most of the more important archives and documents contained in the present work were wholly unknown to Dr. Hibbert-Ware,

* There are many works which contain incidental notices of facts, events, persons and places, connected with the History of Manchester, an enumeration of which might be tedious to the reader. We may name, however, Matthew Gregson's Portfolio of Fragments, relating to the History and Antiquities of the County Palatine and Duchy of Lancashire. Folio. 1st Edit. Liverpool, 1817; 2nd, with additions, Liverpool, 1824. The Natural History of Lancashire, Cheshire, &c., with an Account of the Antiquities in those parts, by Charles Leigh, M.D. (Folio, Oxford, 1700). Baines's History, Directory and Gazetteer of Lancashire, 2 vols. Liverpool, 1824. Lancashire, its History, Legends and Manufactures, by the Rev. G. N. Wright and Thomas Allen, &c. 2 vols. 4to, no date. But the richest mine of materials for the History of Manchester will be found in the publications of the CHETHAM SOCIETY, scattered through nearly fifty of its volumes.

or had only been printed in an exceedingly inaccurate and imperfect form. The diplomas which he was chiefly careful to place on record, were those derived from the muniment chest of the Collegiate body, relating almost exclusively to the Parish and Collegiate Church.

The grants, charters and records, which are comprised in the present work, have been chiefly transcribed by its Editor from the original parchments, or from early copies, and have never before been printed. They embrace a period from the Norman Conquest to the latter part of the fifteenth century, comprising about four centuries of the earliest and least known history of that Manchester which has at length won for itself a place of mark in the history of the world. It follows from these facts that, while the latest published portion of the History of the Collegiate Church supplies all that can be desired as to the ecclesiastical history of Manchester in its earlier period, the present work, in its own distinct and parallel channel, carries the secular and feudal history of the place along its stream, so far as that history can be read in the written acts of monarchs, and of its own baronial lords. Side by side stand the warrior-lord and the clerkly priest. Each leaves his impress on the place; and if the Cleric, as might be expected, has found an abler recorder, the Seigneur has not been left wholly without a scribe. The future historian of Manchester can neither ignore the acts which, in the spirit of the purest Lollardism, reformed the older church government and discipline in the parish of Manchester, nor close his eyes to the ancient archives—now first rescued from the keeping of musty and fast-perishing parchments, in the obscure depths of muniment chests—which show how the Manor or Lordship of Mamecestre was held and ruled in ages past.

It is of the very nature of such a collection of documents as the present, that they should be unconnected, broken in series, disjointed; having little bond of union beyond their general relation to the same territorial possessions, and an interrupted chronological sequence. They form no flowing and continuous stream; but rather resemble the fragments of rock and stone scattered along its course. Or, if a regular series of local annals be regarded as a sort of moving panorama of connected views, these scattered and insulated documents may be compared to rude photographs, taken at various and distant periods; showing rather the extent of the changes of time than the identity of place. Such slight thread of connection as may be found is, however, offered to the Reader, on the assumption (however erroneous it may be in this instance) that an Introduction will be read before the text of the work which it ushers to the world.

Of British Manchester, if such a place ever existed, there is no record of the slightest value. It is, perhaps, the safest course to regard the Mancenion of modern writers as a myth. The occupation of part of the site of modern Manchester, as a Roman military station or fort, with a strong garrison, for a period of nearly three centuries, is, on the contrary, an historical fact, amply established by evidence. But this long period of our local history affords no materials for the present work. No written record, no inscribed stone, remains to tell the story, or even the name, of Roman Manchester. All that we know is, that in certain Roman "Itineraries" — the Road-Books or Distance Tables of that day — a "station" is named on the site of modern Manchester; but even there its name is variously spelled, and not only the significance but even the orthography of that name must remain in doubt. We do learn, however, by inscribed stones, that the garrison here consisted of the First Cohort or Regiment of Frisians, foreign auxiliary troops attached to the Twentieth Legion, which long occupied the Deva of that period, the Chester of our time.

Of Manchester in the Saxon period we have really but two trust-worthy records. From the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle we learn that in the autumn of A.D. 923 Edward the elder, son of Alfred the Great, having added the kingdom of Mercia to his dominions on the death of his sister Æthelfleda, and being at Thelwall, in Cheshire, three and a half miles E.S.E. of Warrington, sent thence a body of Mercian troops to Manchester, to "repair and man it," — in other words to rebuild it, environ it with walls, and themselves to constitute its garrison. One of the old chroniclers, evidently deriving his knowledge of the fact from this statement only, adds as his own comment in reference to Manchester, — "which sore defaced was, in the wars with the Danes." But there is no record that can afford us the slightest glimpse of the state of Manchester between its Roman-Frisian occupation and this rebuilding of it a century and a half before the Norman Conquest. For about five centuries of its existence the history of Manchester remains a blank. The twentieth legion is supposed to have finally quitted Chester about the close of the fourth century; and the next ascertained fact is this fortifying of Manchester in the beginning of the tenth. How it passed from Roman-Frisian rule into the hands of the Saxon or Anglian possessors of Northumbria; how often it was subjected to the ruthless incursions of Picts and Scots on the one hand, and of Scandinavian Vikings and their followers on the other; how utterly it was sacked and destroyed, dismantled or burned,—must remain amongst the numberless hidden things of a remote past. The only other fact of its Saxon period is that recorded in the Domesday Survey, that in the time of Edward the Confessor (1041–1066) that king held the hundred of Salford (of course including Manchester) in his own hands.

The earliest fact relating to Manchester after the Norman Conquest is derived from the ancient record just quoted; from which it appears that about A.D. 1086 there were two churches in that locality, St. Mary's and St. Michael's, and that they jointly held a carve or ploughland, free from all taxes and customs except the universal Dane-geld. The date of the constitution of the barony, or even of the manor or lordship, of Mamecestre, is unknown. A MS. (quoted p. 33) professes to give a list of the Barons of the County, holding their baronies of Roger de Poictou; but this MS. appears to have no satisfactory authority for its statement. Again, an Albert Grelle or Greslet, a favourite of Roger de Poictou, and of course a Norman, is generally supposed to have been the earliest baron; but it is not capable of proof that his possessions included the manor of Mamecestre. The first recorded fact connecting a Greslet with the place is, that in 1131 Robert Greslet, the son of the Albert just named, gave his mill at Mamecestre to the Cistercian Abbey of Swineshead, Lincolnshire. On the other hand, two early records place the foundation of that abbey, one in 1134 and the other in 1143! This confusion of dates pervades much of the early history of the manor and its lords.

Various grants of lands in and near Manchester, by the Greslets, successive lords of the manor, are recorded; chiefly in that ancient feodary the Testa de Nevill. But the first original documents connected with the manor, which are printed in the present work, are the two royal grants of a Fair in the manor of Mamecestre, made to Robert Greslet, the fifth in succession in Lancashire, in the years 1222 and 1227 (Chap. V.) The first was a temporary and provisional grant made during the minority of Henry III. by the Regent of the Kingdom, Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent and Chief Justiciary of England. The second and governing grant, made five years afterwards, when the king had attained his majority and assumed the rule of the kingdom, extended the duration of the fair to three days, the Eve, Day and Morrow of St. Matthew the Apostle — the 20th, 21st and 22nd days of September. Careful and exact copies of these records are printed from transcripts made for this work from the Fine Rolls.

As an indispensable preliminary to the notices of various feudal laws, customs and usages in the manor, Chap. VI. is devoted to a brief notice of the chief provisions of Magna Carta, the Carta de Foresta, and the law-making generally of the thirteenth century, especially of that portion of it which falls within the reign of Edward I. (1272-1307). The next Chapter contains a translation of such parts of the Testa de Nevill as exhibit the knights' fees and services held and renderable in the hundred of Salford, during the early period to which that ancient feodary relates. The entries include the grants and feoffments, the various sub-infeudations, made by successive Greslets to their knights, freeholders and other tenants and retainers. It is not always possible to distinguish, amongst several Greslets of the same Christian name, the individual grantor; and hence considerable confusion and discrepancy in some efforts of former writers to give a connected account of these Greslets. They have been well described as Norman Veneurs or Hunters; and we find that Thomas Greslet, the sixth of his family in succession, obtained a grant or charter of Free Warren in all his demesne lands of Manchester, as well as in another manor in Suffolk (Chap. VIII.) This royal grant (of the 33 Henry III. July 1249) imposed a penalty of 10*l.* on any one hunting or joining the chase over his lands without the leave and license of the lord of the manor. This grant has been printed from an official copy of the records in the Court of Chancery, preserved amongst the muniments of Sir Oswald Mosley at Rolleston.* On the death of this Thomas Greslet, leaving a widow whose maiden name was Christiana Ledet, three royal writs, of the nature of Escheats, were issued (Chap. IX.); of which one, dated 13th February

* From this MS. the present Editor first published a copy and translation of the grant, in the "Proceedings of the Historic Society of Lancashire and Cheshire" (vol. iv. p. 48).

1262, directs the king's escheator south of Trent to take and keep for the king, until he shall command otherwise, all the land and tenements of which the deceased baron was seised as of fee, on the day on which he died. A second (dated the 6th May following) directs the escheator to deliver to the widow full seisin of the manors of Swineshead and Sixhills (both in Lincolnshire), which the king had assigned to her for dower. The third, directed to the escheator north of the Trent, commands him to take and hold for the king the manor of Mamecestre, and to account for its issues and profits. This writ declares that the deceased Thomas Greslet held the manor of the king "in capite by barony;" and that the heir [Robert, grandson of the deceased, being about ten years of age] is "in the king's hand" [as ward].

We now come to a period at which more details are afforded as to the possessions of the baron or lord of the manor; the nature and extent of the tenures; the rents and services due from the tenants, and many other particulars of great local interest. As a necessary introduction to this part of the work, Chap. X. has been devoted to a translation of the statute (4 Edward I. 1276) entitled "Extenta Manerii," which is precise and minute in its directions as to the order and mode of surveying and estimating the value of a manor, — or, to use the language of the time, "extending," or making an "extent" of, a manor. To the text of each chapter or clause of the statute has been appended (with some abbreviations) an explanatory commentary, attributed to Sir Anthony Fitzherbert, a Judge of the Common Pleas in the reign of Henry VIII. from a scarce volume in the Editor's possession.

We have seen that writs were issued, and doubtless post mortem inquisitions held, on the decease of Thomas Greslet the sixth baron. The like proceedings were taken on the death of Robert Greslet the seventh baron. Chap. XI. contains copies and translations of no fewer than three royal writs; and as many returns (called variously Inquisitions and Extents), all made in the year 1282. The first inquiry was made by the king's escheator and a jury on Saturday, April 25; the second before the sheriff of Lancashire and a jury on Sunday, May 3; and the third before the sheriff and a jury on Saturday, September 12, 1282. A tabular summary of the two first of these inquisitions, in juxtaposition, showing the estimated value of each parcel of land, &c., has been added, so as to facilitate the examination and comparison of one with the other, and of both with later valuations. As affording the means of more clear comprehension of the general nature and provisions of the charter granted to the burgesses of Mamecestre, Chap. XII. has been devoted to a notice of the earlier royal and other charters to various Lancashire boroughs and towns. Amongst these, two documents especially deserve attention, — the ancient Custumal of Preston, which is without date, but is supposed to have been drawn up early in the twelfth century; and the Custumal of the city of Chester, also without date, but which was probably prepared from the charters of Randle de Blundeville, Earl of Chester, early in the thirteenth century. These are two of the most remarkable documents ever printed in reference to the municipal government of English boroughs under their feudal lords. The Editor regrets that at the time that portion of the work was sent to press—not having access to the old copy of the Preston Custumal, kept in the muniment chest of the corporation of that borough,—he was obliged to reprint its translation from a local history. He has since been favoured with the loan of this ancient and exceedingly curious document, and a careful collation has detected various errors and omissions in the printed version, which he has noted in the list of Errata et Corrigenda. The Custumal or Record of the Liberties of Chester was not known to the learned and venerable historian of that county; no copy existing among the archives of the city corporation. The present Editor first discovered it among the charters to the corporation of Clitheroe; it having been procured at some remote period from Chester, as the basis of various privileges and immunities granted to the burgesses of Clitheroe, in the charter of Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, about the year 1283; which grants to Clitheroe “all the liberties and free customs which the free burgesses of Chester have, and which at any time they have freely had, or have, or have used.” The student of early English municipal law and polity should compare these documents with the other charters in the same chapter; especially with that setting forth the liberties and free customs of the burgesses of Bristol, as granted by [King] John, while Earl of Mortaigne, to the burgesses of Lancaster, and with the Salford charter of 1230–31, granted by Randle de Blundeville, Earl of Chester, which is now for the first time accurately printed, from a careful examination of the original (preserved in the muniment chest of the Salford corporation) collated with an early and more legible copy, now in the Royal Borough Museum, Peel Park, Salford. The chapter containing these various charters closes the first volume.

The second volume opens with the thirteenth chapter, containing in the original Latin, and in English, Thomas Grelle's charter to his burgesses of Mamecestre, dated the 1st May, 1301. As the local Magna Carta, under which the manor and town were governed for more than five centuries, no pains have been spared to place on record a literal copy and a verbally accurate translation of this interesting and important diploma. It was transcribed, word by word, from the original, after minute examination of every letter under a magnifying glass; the transcript was then collated with the exemplification or official copy of the charter made and enrolled in 1623, and the slightest deviations from the original text were carefully noted; the old parchment charter was beautifully photographed, and forms the frontispiece to the first volume; the printed text was revised by this photograph, so as to guard against any error of transcription; and the whole has been copiously annotated, with due regard to the translation and suggestions of the Rev. J. Whitaker and the elaborate analysis of Dr. Hibbert-Ware. Further, it has been compared, clause by clause, with the corresponding provisions in the charter of the adjacent borough of Salford, granted about seventy years earlier; and thus considerable light is thrown on the obscurer enactments and regulations of both documents. And lastly, the remarks on this charter, made by the learned authors of The History of Boroughs (Mr. Serjeant Merewether and Mr. Stephens), have been reprinted; and every statement of authority having essential bearing on the subject has been embodied in this chapter, as environing the great central fact of the book. The fourteenth chapter treats of the circumstances under which the manor and its appurtenances passed by distaff from the family of Greslet to that of La Warre; and a translation of the grant of the manor from Sir Robert Grelle Knt. to Sir John La Warre Knt. and Joan his wife (Grelle's sister), dated the 14th March 1309, is followed by some account of the La Warres, the new lords of the manor. In the same chapter will be found translations of such portions of the great De Lacy Inquisition of 1311 and of the Birch Feodary (of uncertain date) as relate to the barony, manor and neighbourhood of Manchester; also some notice of the alienation of the manor by John la Warre to the Abbey of Dore in Herefordshire, and its reversion to the alienator; with other documents of the period.

Chapter XV. comprises an official Survey of the Manor of Mamecestre, made for its then lord, in the year 1320; now first printed, and indeed till now unknown. Both a copy and a translation are given, as well as a tabular summary of the yearly value of every item in the Survey. This is an exceedingly important document, not only in itself, as presenting a picture of the state of the manor, its tenantry, and its franchises, customs, tolls and privileges, at that early period; but also as affording a standard of comparison with the less detailed account in the Inquisitions of 1282, and with the still more full and complete statement contained in the Extent of 1322. There are thus brought under view three Inventories, as it were, of the manorial possessions within the space of twenty years. Chapter XVI. comprises the Extent, or Survey and Valuation of the Manor, according to the plan prescribed by the Statute for Extending Manors, given in an earlier chapter. This document is printed from a collation of various copies, chiefly of one made by Dr. Keuerden, and of others from Harleian MSS. Both the Latin text and an English translation are given, and the various readings of different versions are distinguished in foot-notes. A tabular summary of the Survey and Extent, in juxta-position, is added. Though these two Inventories were taken within the short space of two years, the form of taking them differs so widely as to add greatly to the interest of both. The Survey takes each township or district by itself; enumerates the various issues, rents, customs and services collectable by the lord's bailiffs; and at the end of each township gives its total amount of yearly value. The Extent, on the other hand (following the order prescribed by the Statute), first sets down the tenure of the barony and manor, and the services &c. due from its lord to his lord-paramount, the Earl of Lancaster, or to the Crown. It then classes together all the items of the same kind under one head, irrespective of their position in the various townships or hamlets; and enumerates, successively, all the Demesne Lands, the Pastures, the Demesne and Foreign Woods, the Pannage &c., the Mills, Fisheries and Ovens, the Pleas and Perquisites of the Courts, the Farm &c. of the Chief and other Bailiffs, the Forests and Foresters, the Markets and Fairs, the Advowson of Churches, and the nominal Renders for Tenures in grants from affection, as a red rose, a knife, a pair of gloves, a clove, or a pepper-corn. While the Survey shows the quantities of land under the various kinds of culture, in each township or mesne manor, the Extent sums up the total amounts under tillage, pasture, &c. throughout the manor. In this way the accounts are wholly independent, and yet elucidatory, of each other. In this chapter an attempt has been made, from a statement common to both the Survey and the Extent, as to the limits or bounds of the demesne or lordship, to ascertain what these ancient boundaries were. This chapter closes the second volume.

The third volume commences with a chapter (XVII.) which comprises various documents during nearly a century and a half (1325-1472), including portions of the account of the Ninths collected in 1340-41; the Lansdowne Feodary of 1349-51; and the Inquisition held at Preston in April 1359, resulting in the decision that Mamecestre was not, and never had been, a borough, but only a market town. This last document is now for the first time printed (with a translation) from the Rolls of the Duchy Court of Lancaster. Then follows some account of Thomas la Warre, clerk, rector of Mamecestre and twelfth lord of the manor; on whose death it passed again by distaff to the Wests, Lords la Warre; and brief biographical notices are given of the successive lords of the manor of that family.

The last chapter (XVIII.) contains another Inventory of the various tenancies and tenants of the manor, and their respective rents and services; being the Rental or Rent-Roll of Thomas West, Lord la Warre, in May 1473. This, of course, differs widely in character from the Inquisitions and Escheats, the Survey, and the Extent of the Manor, already noticed. It is simply an account of the yearly rent or render payable by each tenant; of the yearly value of such portions of the manor as are either in the lord's hands, or are usable by the tenants, as estovers, common of pasture or of turbary, &c.; of the sac-fee and castle-ward payable in respect of each knight's fee or portion of one; and, in short, it is the old form of what would now be a ledger account of rents due from tenants of various kinds to the landowner. It contains a unique account of all the burgage-holders in Mamecestre, and the number of burgages and half-burgages held by each, the yearly rent for a burgage being fixed at 12*d.* and for a half-burgage at 6*d.*; and it enables the reader to approximate to the number of burgages, — that is, of dwellings, retail shops and wholesale warehouses, — in Manchester, nearly four centuries ago. This document is printed (the Latin text with a translation) from the original parchment Rental, a narrow Roll six feet eight inches in length and six inches wide, one side of which and half the other are filled with the entries. An exceedingly defective and inaccurate translation of this Rent-Roll was printed in Corry's History of Lancashire; and it is now given fully and correctly for the first time. This chapter also contains a document without date, entitled the "Claim of Thomas West, Lord la Warre, to Liberties &c. at Mamecestre." The biographical notices of the Wests are continued to Sir Thomas, eighteenth and last baron of Mamecestre. His sale of the manor to John Lacye of London, on the 15th May 1579, and Lacye's re-sale of it to Nicholas Moseley of London and Hough's End, Manchester, on the 23rd March 1596, are briefly narrated; and, after some short biographical notices of the eleven Moseleys, successively lords of the manor, and of the principal manorial litigation during their rule, the text of the work concludes with a note of the sale of the manor by Sir Oswald Mosley, D.C.L., the present baronet and its last lord, to the Mayor and Corporation of Manchester, on the 5th May 1846.

The extent to which the work has grown during compilation, has compelled the Editor to withdraw a collection of about three hundred and forty abstracts of grants, charters, feoffments, fines and recoveries, inquisitions post mortem, and escheats, relating to the manor or to its successive lords, which had been prepared for insertion as an Appendix at the end of the book.

The nature of the work itself has precluded the Editor from discussing some of the many interesting questions raised by the documents now printed. Amongst these are the various land tenures, from the noblest knight-service to the most servile socage and villenage, with their boon labours, services and offerings; the true nature of the various degrees of slavery or serfdom existing before and after the Conquest; and the municipal law and polity of the older towns of England, and whence derived.

As a desirable addition to a book full of old local names, many of which have lost their significance to the modern reader, an attempt has been made to ascertain the true etymology and probable derivation of these names of places, within or near the manor of Mamecestre. For convenience of reference, they have been cast into the form of a Glossarial Gazetteer, an explanation of which is given p. 548. Lastly, facility of reference has been attained by a Table of Contents, which follows this Introduction, and by a copious Index at the end of the Work.

There remains to the Editor the pleasing duty of tendering his thanks and those of the Council and the Society to those gentlemen who have contributed to enhance the value of this work by the loan of manuscripts, or by their judicious counsel and advice. To Sir OSWALD MOSLEY, Bart., D.C.L. &c., of Rolleston Hall, Staffordshire, the last lord of the manor of Manchester, their joint acknowledgments are due, for the liberality with which he has placed at their disposal, from time to time, various documents from the family muniment chest; including especially the Grant of Free Warren, and the Inquisitions of 1282. Thanks are also justly due to SAMUEL KAY, Esq., of Manchester, for the courtesy with which he has aided in the search for these and other documents, and in the promotion of the general objects of the work. To STEPHEN HEELIS, Esq., of Manchester, the Society are largely indebted for the loan of his manuscript of the Survey of 1320. To more than one MAYOR of MANCHESTER, and to JOSEPH HERON, Esq., the Town Clerk, the Editor desires to express his grateful acknowledgments, not only for the loan of the original parchment Charter of 1301, and its Inspeximus of 1623, from the Corporation Archives, but also for the liberality with which permission was accorded to the Editor to illustrate his work by an admirable photograph fac-simile of the Charter (by Mr. A. Brothers, of Manchester), which forms the frontispiece to Volume I. To the BOROUGHREEVE and CONSTABLES of SALFORD of many years ago, the Editor has now the opportunity of offering his thanks for the loan of the Charter of that Borough from the Boroughreeve's Chest; also to Mr. JOHN PLANT, Curator of the Salford Royal Borough Museum, Peel Park, for the loan of a copy or exemplification of that charter. To the Rev. G. J. PICCOPE, M.A., of Brindle, Chorley, Lancashire, the thanks of all interested in our local history are due, and are tendered in their behalf, by the Editor, for the loan of the original Rent-Roll of the Manor in 1473, without which the work would have been still more imperfect and incomplete. To JAMES CROSSLEY, Esq., President, the Reverend Canon RAINES, Vice-President, and WILLIAM LANGTON, Esq., Honorary Secretary, of the CHETHAM SOCIETY, the Editor must express his obligations for valuable advice and suggestions, and for their general encouragement and aid, in the production of what must still, to some extent, be necessarily a fragmentary and incomplete work.

Page 29. The conjecture [within brackets] that a Warin, one of the five knights holding the manor or hundred of Salford, was a "Warin Banastre, Lord of Newton," has been found to have no warrant. — A similar statement, page 33, from Kenion's MS., is erroneous. The first Banastre of this Christian name was a grandson of the Robert who came in with the Conqueror. — (Rot. Parl. vol. i. p. 2.) The Domesday Survey shows that about the year 1086 the hundred or manor of Newton was not granted out to any one, but was of the king's demesne. The statement from Kenion's MS. pp. 29, 33, 34, enumerating fourteen minor barons under Roger de Poitou, is of no authority.

Page 140, note 79, and page 152, note 29. Some inaccuracies respecting the Byrons are due to errors in the Byron Pedigree in Baines's Lancashire. vol. ii. p. 617. More careful examination of the confused and uncertain pedigrees of the Byrons and the Hollands, — (the latter perhaps the most perplexing of any ancient Lancashire family), — leads to the belief that Joan, daughter of Sir Baldwin Tyas, was not, as stated, the wife, but the great grandmother of the Sir Robert Holland, who was secretary to Thomas Earl of Lancaster. That Alice, wife of Sir John Byron the younger, was the grand-daughter ["consanguinea," which should be rendered "next of kin" rather than "cousin"] and heir of Robert Banastre, who was the last Baron of Newton of that name. She afterwards married John de Langeton. That Sir Richard Byron was not the son, but the younger brother of Sir John Byron the younger, who died without issue.

Pages 182-186 contain the only version of the Preston Custumal which was at the time accessible to the Editor. He has since been favoured with an inspection of the original Latin document, and finds the errors and omissions of previous transcribers and translators so very numerous and important, that it has been necessary for him to supply a new translation throughout, as an easier task than to furnish a long and not always intelligible list of Errata. The following is believed to be a closely literal translation. It has been furnished by the Editor to a "History of Preston Guild, by William Dobson and John Harland :"—

"These are the liberties of Preston in Aumundrenesse :

1. So that they shall have a guild mercatory, with hanse, and other customs and liberties belonging to such guild; and so that no one who is not of that guild shall make any merchandise in the said town, unless with the will of the burgesses.

2. If any natives [born bondman] dwell anywhere in the same town, and hold my land, and be in the forenamed guild and hanse, and pay lot and soot with the same burgesses for one year and one day, then he shall not be reclaimed by his lord, but shall remain free in the same town.

3. The burgesses of Preston in Aumundrenesse shall have soc and sac, tol and them, and infangthef, and they shall be quit throughout all our land of toll, lastage, passage, pontage and stallage, and from lenegald and danegald, and grithewite, and all other customs and [ex]actions throughout all our land and dominion, as well in England as in other our lands; and that no sheriff shall intermeddle within the borough of Preston in Aumundrenesse concerning any plea, or plaint, or dispute, or any other thing pertaining to the aforesaid town, saving the [pleas of the] king's crown.

4. If any one wish to be made a burgess he shall come into court and give to the reeve [or mayor, prafecto], 12*d.*, and shall take his burgage from the pretors [or bailiffs]; afterwards he shall give to the pretors' servant one penny, that he may certify him to have been made a burgess in court.

5. Also, when any burgess shall receive his burgage, and it shall be a void place, the reeve shall admit him, so that he shall erect his burgage within forty days, upon a forfeiture; but if he does not erect it he shall be in mercy [i.e. shall be amerced, or fined] 12*d.*

6. Also, when any burgess shall challenge his burgage against another, and shall prove it to be his right, and the tenant who holds it shall prove that burgage to have been held without challenge several [plures] years and days, and by name for one year and one day, shall prove himself to have been possessed thereof, and shall prove the same in court by the oath of two of his neighbours, or several witnesses, to have been so held; he who has proved by these, may also make his own oath, and may hold it. Also he who shall by them so prove shall hold without contradiction of the claimant, whoever that claimant may be, for one year and one day within the sea of England.

7. Also, if any burgess complain of any matter, and another challenge against him, the plaintiff for judgment shall name two witnesses, and shall have one of them at the day and term, and he may have any law-worthy person for witness and another burgess; but the defendant against a burgess shall be put to his oath at third hand by his peers [i.e. shall have two witnesses besides himself].

8. Also, the amerciament in our court shall not exceed 12*d.*, unless for toll carried away, and then the amerciament shall be 12*s.*

9. Also, a burgess shall be bound to come to no more than three port-motes yearly, unless he shall have plea against him, and unless he shall come to one great port-mote he shall be amerced 12*d*.

10. The pretor of the court [bailiff or steward] shall collect the king's farm at the four terms of the year, and shall go once for the farm, and another time if he pleases, and shall take away [deponet hostium, pull down or displace] the door of such burgage, and the burgess shall not replace his door until he have paid his debt, unless at the will of the pretor.

11. Also, if any burgess shall buy any bargain or any merchandise, and give earnest, and he who sold shall repent of his bargain, he shall double the earnest; but if the buyer shall have handled the goods, he shall either have the merchandise or 5*s*. from the seller.

12. Also, if any burgess shall have drink for sale, he shall sell according to the assize [i.e. fixed price and measure] made by the burgesses, unless it shall be replaced by the tunnel [or funnel].

13. Also, a burgess shall not come to the pretor after sunset for any claim, if he is unwilling, unless the claim be made from a stranger.

14. Also, a burgess shall accommodate his lord concerning his bargain, and the lord shall pay for it to him within forty days; but if he doth not, the burgess shall not further accommodate him until he shall pay.

15. Also, no one can be a burgess unless he have a burgage of twelve feet in front.

16. Also, if a burgess shall sell for more than the assize, he shall be in mercy 12*d*., and he who bought, in nothing; the burgesses of the court aforesaid shall have duel [or] fire and water to make judgment.

17. Also, if any one be taken for theft or breach of trust, and be condemned, he who is sued shall do justice.

18. The burgess [? or pretor] of the said court may take for his toll, for one cart or cart-load twopence; for one horse-load one penny; and for a pack [or bundle, trusselus] on a man's back, one halfpenny; and for a man's load or burden, one halfpenny; for a horse sold, twopence; for an ox or a cow, a penny; for five sheep one penny; for five swine, one penny.

19. Also, if a burgess wound another, and they shall be willing to agree amicably, friends appointed between them may require for every hidden cut the breadth of a thumb, 4*d*., and for every open or visible wound, 8*d*.; and whoever is wounded may prove what he has lost by the wound, and the other shall pay him, and in like manner what the wounded has paid to the surgeon for healing the wound he shall repay; and the arms shall be brought to him, and he shall swear upon his arms that he has been wounded, and such things have been done to him, so that, if his friends consent and approve, he may take what is offered to him.

20. Also, if a burgess complain of another burgess that he owes a debt to him, and the other shall acknowledge the debt, the reeve or mayor shall command him to avoid the debt, and render the debt within eight days, upon pain of forfeiture, 8*d.* for the first week, 12*d.* for the second, and so for every week until he shall render the debt. But if he shall deny the debt, and the plaintiff hath witnesses, the other may deny by third hand upon oath, and then the plaintiff shall be amerced 12*d.* And if the defendant shall come with his witnesses, and the plaintiff shall not come, the defendant shall be quit and the plaintiff in mercy; and if the plaintiff shall not be able to come and shall place any one in his stead before the court, he may take [or receive] the defendant's oath. And that no plaint or forfeiture shall be set on any burgess in the court aforesaid, in other amercement than in 12*d.*, unless he shall [be] vouched to duel, and duel may be adjudged to him; but if duel be adjudged to him and waged, he shall be in mercy 40*s.*

21. Also, if a burgess marry his daughter or grand-daughter to any one, he may marry her without the license of any one.

22. Also, a burgess may make an oven upon his ground, and take for his furnage, for one horse-load [summa farine] of flour or meal, one halfpenny, and he whose meal or corn it shall be, shall find wood to heat the oven.

23. Also, the burgesses shall not go to the oven, or to the mill, or to the kiln, [of the lord] unless they please.

24. Also, if any one shall set another's kiln on fire, and it have one door, he shall give 40*d.*, and if it have two doors, half a mark [i.e. 6*s.* 8*d.*]

25. Also, if burgesses, by the common council of the neighbours, shall travel for any business of the town, their expenses shall be rendered to them when they return.

26. If any one cometh into our town, who ought to give toll, if he shall withhold it beyond the market day, he shall be in mercy 12*d.*

27. Also, a stranger may not participate in any merchandise with the burgesses of our town.

28. Also, when any burgess shall be desirous to sell his burgage, his next of kin is to buy that burgage of him before any other, and when it shall be sold and he hath not another burgage, when the other shall be seised [i.e. hath taken possession] he shall give 4*d.* from the issue; but if he hath another burgage, he shall give nothing.

29. Also, if a burgess shall be in mercy for bread and ale [not having sold according to the fixed weight or measure and price] the first, second, or third time, he shall be in mercy 12*d.*; but if the fourth time, unless he pay a better [i.e. a larger] fine, he shall go to the cuck-stool.

30. Also, if a burgess of the town die a sudden death, his wife and his heirs shall quietly have all his chattels and lands; so that neither his lord nor the justices may lay hands on the houses and chattels of the deceased, unless he shall have been publicly excommunicated; in which case, by the counsel of the priest and of the neighbours, they are to be expended in alms.

31. Also, the wife of the deceased may marry whomsoever she please.

32. Also, if any one shall demand a debt of another before the reeve [or mayor] if he will not pay, the pretor shall render to the plaintiff his debt from the king's purse, and shall distraint the other by his chattels that he pay the debt, or he shall seize the house into his hands.

33. Also, the burgesses shall not receive claim from the reeve [or mayor] on a market-day, unless the claim be made from a stranger.

34. Also, a burgess gives no transit.

35. Also, a burgess hath common pasture everywhere, except in corn fields, meadows, and hayes.

56. Also, if a burgess shall strike the reeve [or mayor], or the reeve a burgess, in court, and shall be convicted, he shall henceforth be in mercy for the offence.

37. Also, if the reeve [or mayor] shall strike any one out of court, he shall be in mercy, of his own acknowledgment.

38. Also, if a burgess shall strike the reeve out of court, he shall be in mercy 40s.

39. Also, if a burgess shall overcome another, if he confess it, he shall forfeit 12d.; if he deny it, he shall clear himself by his sole oath against witnesses; if beyond the court, nothing.

40. Also, if any one bearing false coins shall be taken, the reeve [or mayor] shall render to the king the false pennies, as many as there are, and shall account in the rent of his farm for the goods, and deliver his body to our lord the king for judgment to be done, and his servants shall take quittance and have the pledges (pannes).

41. Also, it shall not be lawful for regrators to buy anything which shall be sold on a market-day to a regrator, until the vesper bell be rung in the evening, nor on any day of the week until that which he bought shall have been in the town for one night.

42. Also, the aforesaid burgesses shall not go in any expedition unless with the lord himself, unless they may be able to return on the same day.

43. If he shall be summoned when the justice of the town shall be in the expedition [or circuit], and shall not go, and shall acknowledge himself to have heard, he shall give amends 12d.; if he denies to have heard the edict, he shall clear himself by his own oath; but if he shall have essoyn [excuse for non-appearance], to wit, either by siege, or his wife's lying in childbed, or other reasonable essoyn, he shall not pay. If he is going [i.e. ought to go] with the person of our lord the king, he can not have essoyn.

44. Also, it is the custom of the borough that no burgess ought to be taken for an accusation by the lord or by the reeve [or mayor], if he have sufficient pledges. So of claim made of a burgess by any knight, whosoever the knight may be; if duel be adjusted between the burgess and the knight, the knight may not change [mutare, ? fight by proxy], unless it be found that he ought not to fight.

45. If the reeve [or mayor] command any burgess by another than his known servant, and he shall not come, he shall make no amends.

46. Also, no justice shall lay hands on the house or chattels of any deceased.

47. Also, if any one call a married woman a whore, and complaint be made thereof, and witnesses be absent, he may clear himself by his own [or sole] oath, and if he cannot make oath he shall pay 3s.; and he by whom it was said shall do this justice, and he shall take himself by the nose and say he hath spoken a lie, and he shall be pardoned. There is the same judgment as to a widow.

CHAPTER XVII.

DOCUMENTS, A.D. 1325-1472.—THE WESTS.

As already stated, John la Warre, ninth baron of Mamecestre, had a son John, who (dying before his father in 18 Edward III. 1339-40) never held the barony. This John had married Margaret, daughter of Sir Robert de Holand, by whom he left two sons and two daughters: 1. Roger, who in his father's lifetime married Elizabeth, daughter of Adam third baron de Welles, by whom he had a son John, great grandson of his namesake the ninth baron; Roger succeeded to the barony on the death of his grandfather John; 2. John, afterwards Sir John, of Bokhampton, Berks, who died 28 Edward III. 1354; 3. Catherine, married to Sir Warine Latimer, Lord Latimer and Braybrooke; and 4. Eleanor, married to Sir Lewis Clifford, K.G., one of the chiefs of the Lollards: their son William left a son Lewis, who died s.p.

To return to John la Warre the ninth baron of Mamecestre. On the 13th June, 14 Edward III. 1340, he accompanied the fleet of 250 sail, commanded by the king in person, which defeated the French navy in the harbour of Sluys. In 1342 he took part in the king's campaign against the French, and assisted at the siege and blockade of Nantes, where the English army wintered. On the 26th August 1346, he was at the battle of Cressy, in the first division of the forces commanded by the Prince of Wales (Edward the Black Prince), and which comprised eight hundred lords, knights and esquires, four thousand archers, and six thousand Welshmen. John la Warre died on the Eve of Ascension Day (May 9) 1347, in the 68th or 69th year of his age.

Amongst the other documents connected with the manor or its lord, in the life of this John, ninth baron, a few may here be put on record : —

By a deed without date, John la Ware, lord of Mamecestre, gave to John Bybby two plots of land in the fee of Mamecestre. Witnesses : Tho. Marschall, John son of Matthew Cissor [the Cutter], John his brother, Tho. Cordy. — [Seal a lion rampant.]

In the pleas before the king at Westminster, Trinity term, 18 Edward II. (June 1325) Roll 68, from Rutland, sets forth that by an assise and jury in the 11th year of that reign (1317-18) Gerard de Braybrok and Lora [? Laura] his wife recovered their seisin of 20*l.* yearly rent issuing out of the manor of Brigge-Casterton, against John la Warre and five others, according to the charter of Thomas de Grelle made therein to them and their heirs, in this case pleaded and recited. — (Abbrev. Placit. p. 352.)

In 20 Edward II. (1326) John de la Ware is stated to hold for [pro] the abbot and convent of Dore, one acre of land in Albriton and the advowson of the church of that vill, parcel of the manor of Albrighton, co. Salop., the castle of Ewias Harold in the marches of Wales, the manor of Mauncestre, co. Lancaster, the manors of Swineshead and Woodhead, co. Linc., the manor of Wykewar, co. Gloucester, and the manor of Wakurleye, co. Northampton. — (Cal. Inq. p.m. vol. i. p. 333, No. 22.)

In 1 Edward III. (1327) the king granted a license to John la Warre to demise to the abbot and convent of Dore, Herefordshire, the manor of Albrighton, with appurtenances, co. Salop, to have, &c., to the abbot and his successors to the end of ten years, paying therefore to the said John and his heirs forty marks [2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*] yearly, for all services. — (Abb. Rot. Orig. vol. ii. p. 11.)

In 3 Edward III. (1329) John la Warre claimed to have in his manor of Wakerle, view of frank-pledge, and that which belongs thereto; infangethef, gallows, the amending of the assise-breach of bread and ale, weyf, them, and tumbrel. And the said John, by Thomas Wyke his attorney, came into court and said that the manor of Wakerle, to which the said liberties belong, was formerly in the seisin of a certain Tho. de Grelle, who enfeofed this John of the same manor with its liberties, to hold of him and his heirs for ever. That he (John) from the time of such feoffment, and the said Thomas and his predecessors, from time beyond memory, were seised of the said liberties so much as belonged to the said manor. And thereon John claims warrant to have the aforesaid liberties. John, being asked if he have [right of] pillory and tumbrel, saith that he hath tumbrel, but not pillory. Richard de Aldeburgh, who opposed the claim for the king, saith that the said John claimed to have view of frank-pledge, &c., and that among the articles which to that view belong, ought to be the assise-breach of bread and ale, any transgressors whereof ought to suffer judgment of pillory and tumbrel. But John had acknowledged that he had no pillory by which transgressors against the assise of bread could be punished in the manner due. And he therefore prays, for the king, that the view aforesaid be taken into the king's hand. And further, that it be inquired into how much and in what manner John de la Ware, Thomas de Grelle and his predecessors were used to exercise the said liberties. The parties were ordered to come here on the Saturday after the Ascension; on which day came John by his said attorney. Also came the jury, who say on their oaths that John, and in like manner Tho. de Grelle, and all the predecessors of Thomas, from the time to which memory doth not go, enjoyed the said liberties. And that John took in his time, of transgressors against the assise of bread and ale, delinquents in cases to which the judgment of pillory and tumbrel ought to be adjudged, to the amount of 2s. as they understand. And that John acknowledged that he had not the pillory, which is the judicial punishment for transgressions against the assise of bread and ale. And in like manner it is proved by oath that John punished this kind of transgressors by fines and amerciaments, in cases to which the judgment of pillory and tumbrel ought to be adjudicated. It is considered, therefore, that the said view should be taken into the hand of the king, and that the same John is in mercy. Afterwards John prayed to be allowed to have the view again, by fine, and offered the king 6*s.* 8*d.* to let him have it. And it is granted, by surety of William de St. Maur. Therefore, as to the other liberties claimed by John, he may go without day [i.e. he is discharged] saving the right of the king. — (Plac. de quo War. 3 Edward III. p. 541.)

In 4 Edward III. (1330) John son of Roger la Warre, made fine of six marks (4*l.*) to have license to enfeoff John de Cleidon, parson of the church of Mamecestre, of the manor of Alington, with appurtenances, &c. — (Abb. Rot. Orig. vol. ii. p. 47.)

In 5 Edward III. (1331) John de Honton, Escheator beyond Trent, is commanded to take the land of John, son of John la Warre, into the king's hand.⁸¹ — (Ib. p. 52). In the same year he made fine of five marks (3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*) to have license to enfeoff John de Cleydon, parson of the church of Mamecestre, in the manor of Wakerlegh, with appurtenances, co. Northampton, which is in the hand of the king. — (Ib. p. 60.) In the same year John son of Roger la Warre, enfeoffed John de Claydon, parson of the church of Maunnecestre, in the manor of Wakerlegh, in Castle Ewyas Herald (Wales) with remainder to the said John, and in the manors of Middleton, Fokington, Isefeld and Porteslade, co. Sussex, with remainder to the said John. — (Cal. Inq. p.m. vol. ii. p. 41.)

The following is a grant of half a burgage in Mamecestre in January 1334: —

Know all, &c. We John de la Warre, lord of Mamcestre, have granted to Richard Ffauc⁸² and Cicely his wife one half-burgage which lies near [?in] our manor, &c. These being witnesses: Sir John de Claidon, parson of Mamcestre, William de St. Maur, John de Salford, John de Hulton, Henry Doterind, and others. Given at Mamecestre on the Saturday next after the Feast of St. Hillary, 7 Edward III. (January

⁸² This is probably Richard Faukes or Fawkes, and it may possibly have undergone subsequent corruption to Faux, or even to Fox. Or, if obscurely written, it may be Richard Fferer (Ffer').

13, 1334). — (Penes Rev. Canon Raines. A copy printed in Dr. Hibbert-Ware's Foundations, vol. iv. p. 97.)

In 12 Edward III. (1338) John la Warre, son of Roger la Warre and [of] Elizabeth his [first] wife, was found to have held the manor of Albrighton, co. Salop, the castle and manor of Ewyas Harald, and Keynchirche, co. Hereford; and the manors of Middleton, Fokington, Porteslade and Isefeld, co. Sussex; with remainder to the said John. — (Cal. Inq. p.m. vol. ii. p. 85.)

In 13 Edward III. (1339) John la Warre [ninth baron] fined 40s. to have license that he might give and grant the manor of Albrighton to Roger la Warre [? his son] and Elizabeth his wife, &c. — (Abb. Rot. Orig. vol. ii. p. 134.) — In the same year [Sir] Warin le Latymer fined five marks (3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*) for license to give to John la Warre [his wife's nephew] whatever he could grant of the manor of Cheleworth, co. Somerset, which was in the king's hand. — (Ib. p. 133.) In that year John la Warre was found to hold for Warin le Latimer that manor of Cheleworth, Ewyas Castle in Wales, and the manor of Alington, co. Wilts, with remainder to the same John la Warre. — (Cal. Inq. p.m. vol. ii. p. 90.) — In the same year John la Warre fined 10*l.* for license to enfeoff John de Cleidon, parson of the church of Mammecestre, in the manor of Middleton, co. Sussex. — (Abb. Rot. Orig. vol. ii. p. 134.)

THE NINTHS COLLECTED IN 1340-41.

In a parliament held in 14 Edward III. (1340) for the purpose of voting supplies for carrying on the wars with France and Scotland, a subsidy was granted to the king, of the ninth lamb, the ninth fleece and the ninth sheaf, to be exacted for the two years next ensuing, to which all cities and boroughs were liable; while foreign merchants, not dwelling in cities or boroughs, were assessed on their goods and moveables at no more than a fifteenth. To enforce this collection of ninths, another statute was passed in the 15 Edward III. (1340-41), by which three commissions were issued, the first of which charged certain persons with the assessment and sale of the ninths and fifteenths. In Lancashire the assessors and venditors of the ninth of lambs, fleeces, and sheaves of corn, were the Abbot of Furness, Edmund de Neville, Richard de Hoghton, and John de Radeclive. In each hundred or wapentake an inquest was held, and the following is the return for the hundred or wapentake of Salford : —

WAPENTAKE OF SALFORD. — Inquisition of the wapentake of Salford held at Preston on the Thursday before the Feast of St. Matthew the Apostle [24th February] in the fifteenth year of the reign of King Edward the Third from the Conquest [1341] before the Abbot of Furness and his fellows, to inquire into the true value of the ninths and the fifteenths granted for two years to our lord the king in the county of Lancaster, assigned by the oaths of John de Assheton, Henry de Trafford, Henry de Workeslegh, Adam de Hulton, John de Hulton, Robert de Trafford, Richard de Radclyf, John de Aynesworth, Adam de Hopwode, Adam de Leme, John de Heton, Robert de Pilkington, Richard de Rediche, Roger de Pilkington, John de Trafford, and Roger de West-Leigh. Who, being sworn and required by their oaths [to make return] of the true value of the ninth of sheaves, fleeces and lambs, the produce of the several parishes in the said wapentake, for the first year of the said two years, and of the rest of whatsoever articles touching that ninth, and of the true value of the fifteenth part of the moveable goods of the merchants and other men, with the exception of the citizens and burgesses not living by agriculture, —

Say on their oath that there are not in the said wapentake any city or borough, nor merchants or any other men, who ought to respond to the fifteenth. They say also that there are ten parish churches in the said wapentake, viz., the churches of Mamecestre, of Midelton, of Bury, of Flyxton, of Radeclif, of Assheton, of Prestwyche, of Bolton, of Rochedale, and of Eccles.

In the Verus Valor of 1292 the church of Mamecestre was rated at 80 marks (53*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*) The ninths of the year 1340 were, however, founded on an assessment reduced from 80 to about 35½ marks : —

THE CHURCH OF MAMECESTRE,

Which was taxed at four score marks, whereas the ninth of the sheaves, fleeces and lambs of the same parish, coming near to the true value, were worth nine marks (6*l.*) whereas the villages of Mamecestre ought to furnish twenty-two marks (14*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*); Salford with Burghton ought to supply 52*s.*; Chetham 10*s.*; Hulme, near Mamecestre, 10*s.*; Chorleton 10*s.*; Stretford 46*s.* 8*d.*; and Redwyche (Reddish) 52*s.* 4*d.* The church of Asheton was taxed at fifteen marks (10*l.*) The ninth of the sheaves, fleeces and lambs, of the same parish, near the true value, are worth eight marks, 8*s.* 10*d.* (5*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*)

The ninth fell far short of what had been expected, and the commissioners were so dissatisfied with the assessment of the parishes in the wapentake of Salford that they refused to accept the amount without the royal sanction.

The said sworn men will assign no cause why the said ninth does not reach to the sum of the taxes of the said churches [i.e. in the Verus Valor of 1292]; therefore the said abbot and his associates have protested that they cannot accept the sums which the aforesaid sworn men have presented before in any manner, unless they should be authorised to accept them by the lord the king and his council.

In 17 Edward III. (6th October 1343) Sir John la Warre granted a lease for their lives to Henry de Smythelee and Margery his wife and Henry their son, of six acres of pasture land in Blakelegh, to be made into arable land (of which Roger Avissonne [i.e. Roger, son of Avice,] formerly held two acres). Rent for the first thirty years 6*s.*, or 1*s.* per acre; afterwards 12*s.* yearly, or 2*s.* per acre. There are the usual covenants of re-entry in case of arrears, warranty and sealing. Witnesses: Sir John de Cleidone, parson of the church of Mamecestre; John de Radeclif, Thomas de Wyke, John de Hulton, John de Wakerlee, and others. Given at Wakerlee [co. Northampton] octaves of St. Michael the Archangel [Monday, October 6, 1343] 17 Edward III. — (From the Mosley Muniments at Rolleston Hall, co. Stafford.)

In 20 Edward III. (1346) it was found that John de la Ware [ninth baron] held the manor of Mamecestre, Clayton, Chorlton with its members, to wit Barton, Withington, Flixton, half of Romsworth and Pilkington in the wapentake of Salford; — Cumersley [? Cuerdley] within the wapentake of Derby, the corn ["bladis"] of Wrightington and Worthington, within the wapentake of Leyland, and Brockels within the wapentake of Amounderness, for five knights' fees, and a yearly rent of 4*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* — (Keuerden's MS.)

In 21 Edward III. (1347) John la Warre [then deceased] and Joan [Greslet] his wife were found to have held the manors of Mauncestre and Keuerdeley, co. Lanc.; Wakerle manor (extended), co. Northampton; Burstal vill, two parts, co. Leicester; Wodheved manor, co. Rutland; manors of Swynesheved, Sixhill, Bloxham, and 8*s.* rent in Stannford, co. Linc.; and the manors of Middleton and Fokington, with Fleeching and Porteslade, co. Sussex. — (Inq. p.m. vol. ii. p. 136.)

John la Warre, ninth baron, died at an advanced age on the Eve of Ascension Day (April 9) 1347; and the above inquisition was held in that year, as was another on the Eve of Holy Trinity [Saturday, May 27], in which the jurors found that John la Warre held nothing of the king in chief, but that he was possessed jointly with Joan his wife, of the manor of Wodheved, co. Rutland, — with which he had been enfeoffed by John de Claydon, rector of Mamecestre.

In 22 Edward III. (1348) the king confirmed to Joan [formerly Greslet], widow of John la Warre, that she might impark her wood of Wakerley, &c. — (Cal. Rot. Pat. p. 157.)

In 23 Edward III. (1349) by a post mortem inquisition, Margaret [Holand], widow of John la Warre [son of John and father of Roger, ninth and tenth lords] was found to have held lands and tenements at Bochampton and Estburye and in the hundred of Chipinge Lamborne, co. Berks; the extended manor of Wykewarre, co. Gloucester; the extended manors of Brustlington, co. Somerset, Alynton, co. Wilts, and Isefeld, co. Sussex. — (Cal. Inq. p.m. vol. ii. p. 154.)

In 27 Edward III. (1353) the king committed to John Beynyn of Henton St. George, the custody of one messuage, seventy-six acres land, and three acres meadow and pasture, with appurtenances in Henton St. George, and Craft, co. Somerset, which had belonged to John la Warre def [defunct], and which he held of the king in chief, as of the Marshalsea of England, which were then in the king's hand, to have to the lawful age of the heir; paying therefor yearly 6*os.* — (Abb. Rot. Orig. vol. ii. p. 226.) — In the same year it was enjoined Walter Parles, the king's escheator in co. Northampton, that he should accept security from Roger, son and heir of John la Warre deceased [and tenth baron] for his reasonable relief; and also of the same Roger, of the manor of Wakerley, with appurtenances, which he held of the king in chief, by the service of one-fourth of a knight's fee, for giving him full seisin. — (Ib. p. 227.) In the same year it was found by a post mortem inquisition that Joan, widow of John la Warre [ninth baron], had held the extended manor of Wakerley, co. Northampton, and the manor of Swynesheved (with Burtoft, a certain tenement parcel of that manor), co. Lincoln. — (Cal. Inq. p.m. vol. ii. p. 182.)

In 28 Edward III. (1354) it was found by a post mortem inquisition that John le Warre and John Ralee, knights, held seven acres land, &c., at Henton St. George, as of the castle of Strogoyl; the manor of Hampstede Mareschal, with appurtenances, of fee; one carve of land in Cras; the manors of Nettelcombe and Roudon, as of the manor of Hampstede Mareschal; all in co. Somerset. — (Ib. p. 186.)

In 34 Edward III. (1360) it was found by inquisition that John la Warre had held one messuage and one carve of land, &c., at Bochamp-ton, co. Berks. — (Ib. p. 218.)

We have next to notice the documentary facts occurring during the rule of Roger la Warre, tenth baron, grandson and heir of John, ninth baron of Mamecestre. In the 23 Edward III. (1349-50) this Roger did homage and had livery of the possessions which Margaret his mother held in demesne; including (amongst former possessions of Thomas de Greslet) Withington, Worthington, Heton-subtus-Horwich (the forest), the manor of Stayning (from the Duke of Lancaster, and held by the Abbot of Whalley) and Charnock. Henry Earl of Lancaster died in 1346, leaving a son and heir Henry, who succeeded to the earldom in that year, was the second knight companion of the order of the garter (instituted 1349), and was created Duke of Lancaster (the first of that title) on the 6th March, 1361. It was during his earldom of the county palatine and the early years of his dukedom and of the duchy, that the following Feodary was compiled: —

THE LANSDOWNE FEODARY OF 1349 [AND 1351.]⁸³

The following Feodary of 1349 is from one of the Lansdowne MSS., and is often styled the Lansdowne Feodary. As it has been printed in the original abbreviated Latin in Baines's Lancashire (vol. iv. pp. 756-764) a translation only is given, and that of such portions merely as relate to the lords and the barony of Mamecestre:—

KNIGHTS' FEES.—1349.

(From Lansdowne MSS. Cod. 559, fol. 23 [s.s.])

Knights' fees which were those of Henry late Earl of Lincoln, and which, after the death of the said earl, were those of Thomas late Earl of Lancaster, and now—namely in the twenty-third year of Edward the Third from the Conquest [1349]—are those of Henry Earl of Lancaster,⁸⁴ Derby and Leicester, and Steward of England.

SALFORDSHIRE.—TOTTINGTON.

MIDELTON.—Roger de Midelton holds four carves and two oxgangs of land in Midelton, for one knight's fee.

BURY.—Margery de Radclive and Henry her son hold four carves and six oxgangs of land in Bury, for one fee.

CHADDEBTON.—Henry de Trafford holds two carves of land in Chadderton, by the fourth part of one knight's fee, eight, &c.

ALKBINGTON.—Alice, who was wife of Adam de Prestwyche, holds the manor of Akkeryngton by homage and service, and there is there the twenty-fourth part of one knight's fee.

PARTICULARS OF KNIGHTS' FEES, FORMERLY OF THE EARL OF LINCOLN, IN THE
DUCHY OF LANCASTER.⁸⁵

BURY.—Roger de Pilkington holds of the said Duke [of Lancaster]

⁸³ Compare the holders of the fees generally in this Feodary with those of the Testa de Nevill (chap. vii. p. 69 ante) and of the Birch Feodary (chap. xiv. p. 257 ante).

⁸⁴ Lancashire was not created a duchy, and consequently this Henry did not become Duke of Lancaster, till the 6th March 1351.

⁸⁵ This part of the inquest must have been taken two years after the former, the duchy not being created till 25 Edward III. (1351).

one knight's fee in Bury in Salfordshire, which Adam de Bury formerly held of the aforesaid fees [of the late Earl of Lincoln].

MIDELTON. — John de Rydale holds one knight's fee of the said duke in Midelton with members, which Robert de Midelton formerly held of the said fees.

CHADDERTON. — Henry de Chatherton holds a fourth part of one knight's fee of the said duke in Chatherton, which Gilbert de Barton formerly held of the said fees.

TOTTINGTON. — Henry Duke of Lancaster holds a fifth part of one knight's fee, of the aforesaid fee in Totyngton, which the Earl of Lincoln formerly held.

PARCELS OF THE FEES FORMERLY OF THOMAS DE GRELLE.

BARTON. — The heir of Gilbert de Barton holds of John de la Ware one knight's fee and a half in Barton with its members, which Gilbert de Barton formerly held of Thomas de Grelle, and he of the Earl Ferrers, and he of the king in chief.

VARIOUS PLACES. — Thomas de Lathum knight, Robert de Holand knight, and Thomas de Sotheworth, hold of John de [la] Ware one knight's fee, of which Thomas de Lathum knight [has] three acres of land in Childewall, one carve in Asphull, one carve of land in Turton, [half a carve of land in Childewall, half a carve of land]⁹⁶ in Brockholes, and the said Robert and Thomas de Southworth hold one carve in Harewode in Salfordshire; together with six and a half carves of land, making one fee, which Robert de Lathum holds of the said John. One knight's fee in Dalton, Parbold and Wrightington, which Robert de Lathum formerly held of the aforesaid fee.

RUMWORTH AND LOSTOCK. — The heir of John son of Henry de Hulton holds of the said John a third part of one knight's fee in Romworth and Lostok, which Richard Perpond formerly held of the said fee.

PILKINGTON. — Roger de Pilkington holds of the said John a fourth part of one knight's fee in Pilkington, which Roger de Pilkington his ancestor formerly held of the said fee.

⁹⁶ The clause in brackets is erased in the original.

FEES OF LINCOLN.

Henry Duke of Lancaster and all the tenants holding in demesne and by service, within the duchy of Lancaster, — twenty-two knights' fees and half a fee, the fourth part and the twentieth part of one knight's fee, which the Earl of Lincoln formerly held within the said duchy, and he the Earl of Lincoln never held more, nor any parcel of the same, which same fee the said earl formerly held of the honour of Lancaster, as appears above by the above-named particulars and parcels.

John de la Ware holds in demesne and by service five fees and a half and the twelfth part of one knight's fee within the said duchy; which a certain Thomas de Grelley held, which same Thomas formerly held of the king as of his honor of Lancaster, as estimated twelve fees, to wit, within the said duchy to this day the said Thomas held five and a half fees and the twelfth part of one knight's fee, which the said John la Ware now holds, as appears by the particulars and parcels above stated. And all the rest of the said twelve fees are held by the said Thomas in other various counties beyond the said duchy, to wit, where and by what parcels they [the jurors] are wholly ignorant.

* * * * *

PENDLETON. — The Prior of St. Thomas, near Stafford, holds of the said duke the tenth part of one knight's fee in alms, as it is said, in Penhulton, in Salfordshire, which the heirs of Richard de Hulton formerly held of the said honor of Lancaster.

LITTLE BOLTON. — Roger of Little Bolton holds of the said duke the sixteenth part of one knight's fee in Little Bolton in Salfordshire, which his ancestors formerly held of the honor of Lancaster.

BRIGHT-MEDE. — The heirs of Robert de Holand knight and Nicholas Devyas hold of the said duke the eighth part of one knight's fee in Bright-Mede, a hamlet of the vill of Bolton, which their predecessors formerly held of the Earl Ferrers, and he of the king in chief.

CROMPTON AND BURGHTON. — Richard de Langley and Joan his wife hold of the said duke the fortieth part of one knight's fee in Crompton [and] Burghton, which Adam de Tetlowe held of the Earl Ferrers.

PARCELS OF FEES, FORMERLY
THOMAS DE GRELLEY'S.

Nicholas Langeforde knight holds of John la Ware one knight's fee in Wythington, which Matthew de Haversegge formerly held of the said fee.

Hugh de Worthyngton and John de Heton hold of the said John half of one knight's fee in Worthyngton and Heton-under-Horwich [the forest], which William de Worthyngton formerly held of the said fee.

The Abbot of Whalley holds the manor of Stayning of the duchy of Lancaster by half of one knight's fee.

The Countess Durmund [d'Ormonde] holds the tenth part of one knight's fee of the fee of Lincoln.

The heir of Henry del Cherton holds the twenty-second part of one knight's fee in Chernok.

[The remainder of this part of the Feodary is a copy of the Testa de Nevill, fol. 396. Vide p. 69 et seq. ante.]

By his first wife, Elizabeth, Roger la Warre had issue John la Warre, born before 1339, and Thomas la Warre, afterwards a priest, who in his later years, when rector of Mamecestre, founded the college. After the death of his first wife, Roger la Warre married for his second Eleanor or Alianora, daughter of John, Lord Mowbray, whose maternal great-grandfather was King Henry III.

This Roger la Warre, by an indenture in counterpart, dated Swineshead, co. Lincoln, Trinity Sunday, 29 Edward III. [May 31, 1355], granted to "our beloved Thurstan Holand, our kinsman" for life "our pasture of our park of Blakelegh, with the arable land of Bothumle [Bottomley], with the meadow in the same park thereto belonging, for feeding in the said pasture, his own cattle as well as those of others in the same place, on agistment, by his leave, and for the ploughing of the said land, and also for inclosing the end [caude] of the said park, as it was wont to be inclosed; and also for assarting and approving of ten acres in Asshen-hurst, so that no covert be claimed as free, or destroyed, because thereof. And to these acres, and also to the said pasture, he may inclose as much as he pleases of a certain waste beyond the inclosure, in which wild animals may freely come and go. Saving to us and our heirs all the wood and sufficient pasture for our wild animals, and their issue, and sharing, by our leave [or will] in the profits accruing from the said wood and wild animals. So nevertheless that the said Thurstan may participate in, and have the mediety of, the pannage to his own use, whenever it falls [or happens, acciderit.] To have, &c., for the whole of his life. Paying therefor yearly to us and our heirs 100s. sterling at the feast of St. Michael, and keeping the said park, as well in timber as in venison [or hunting, venacione] to the benefit of us and our heirs. [The usual warranty and sealing in counterpart; the seal bearing on a heater shield a lion rampant and the legend — “. . . gillv [sigillum] . . . la Warre.”] Witnesses: Tho. de Wyke, Roger de Assewell, Tho. de Bothe, and others. Given at Swynesheved on the feast of the Blessed Trinity, 29 Edward III. — (Rev. J. Booker's Chapelry of Blakeley.)

The next few years are unmarked by any event of interest in the history of the manor and its lords, if we except the gallantry of Roger la Warre at the battle of Poitiers, September 19, 1356, where he claimed to be one of the captors of John, King of France, and in memory thereof afterwards bore in his coat of arms the crampet, chape, or cross-guard of the French king's sword, as a badge of that honour, — “a crampet, or.”

We come next to notice certain fines for writs of agreement, &c., relating to the manor and to the advowsons of the churches, of which the following are entries in the rolls of the Duchy of Lancaster: —

Eighth year Duchy, 1358-9. — Divers fines for writs de conventione and concerning lands in Culcheth, Mamcestre manor and the advowsons of the churches of Mamcestre and Assheton, &c.

Ninth year, 1359-60. — The duke on behalf of Roger la Warre. Commissioners appointed to inquire into the said Roger's petition, showing that he held the town of Mamcestre as a borough and market town, and enjoyed certain liberties there, and in the manor and hamlets, and that the duke's bailiffs had interfered to levy amerancements, &c.

Tenth year, 1360-61. — Pardon of a fine, pro Licentia Concordandi, as to the tenure of Mamcestre.

Inquisition and letters patent touching the manor of Mamcestre as a market town and borough, with the hamlets thereto.

WAS MAMECESTRE A BOROUGH OR A MARKET TOWN?

The last three entries in the above extracts from the Duchy Rolls relate to a most important question raised between the Duke of Lancaster (whose bailiffs had amerced certain resiants of Mamecestre) and the Baron of Mamecestre, — no less than whether that place was really a borough, with all the privileges of a free-borough, or only a market town, with the smaller privileges thereto appertaining. As the subject was one of great moment at the time, and is still not without its interest for the antiquary and the local historian, transcripts have been procured expressly for this work, of the duke's writ and commission to inquire respecting the petition of Roger la Warre, and of the inquisition held by the commissioners at Preston, in April, 1359, and their decision of the question. The whole of these documents are set forth in an Inspecimus, of which the following is a literal transcript: —

DUCHY OF LANCASTER. — Roll E of the 4th to the 11th year of the dukedom of Henry, Duke of Lancaster. — 1356-1363. — ⁸⁷ (A. 3a. No. 45, on the back of the roll.)

For Roger la Mare. } THE DUKE to all to whom, &c., greeting. We have inspected the tenor of our letters to our beloved and faithful Thomas de Seton,⁸⁸ John Cokayn,⁸⁹ and Roger de Faryngton,⁹⁰ directed, in these words: —

⁸⁸ Thomas de Setone or Seton, the first of the three judges or triers in this case, was a lawyer practising for ten years before he was raised to the bench. He was one of the king's sējeants in 19 Edward III. (1345), and as such was summoned to parliament. Dugdale places him as a judge of the King's Bench in 28 Edward III. (1354), and of the Common Pleas in 29 Edward III. (1355), without any date of appointment to either. He was certainly a judge of one of them in April 1354 (28 Edward III.), for he was one of the triers of petitions in the parliament then held; and he was a judge of the Common Pleas in Michaelmas 1355 (29 Edward III.), for fines were then acknowledged before him; and it appears probable that he was appointed to this court between the previous Hilary and Trinity terms, as the list in the Yearbook omits his name in the former, and includes it in the latter year. On the 3rd July 1357 (31 Edward IV.) he was made Chief Justice of the King's Bench, in the room of William de Sharesheull, then retiring; but it would seem from the words "ad tempus," in the mandate, that it was at that time a mere temporary appointment. His name appears on fines up to Midsummer 1359 (33 Edward III.), so it may be inferred that up to that date he acted as a judge of the Common Pleas also; especially as in the same year he is so designated, when he was admitted of the king's secret council. There is no doubt that he was Chief Justice of the King's Bench till the 34 Edward III.; when, on the 24th May 1360, Henry Green was

HENRY, Duke of Lancaster, Earl of Derby, Lincoln and Leicester, and Steward of England, to his beloved and faithful Thomas de Seton, John Cokayn, and Roger de Farynton, greeting. Know ye that our beloved Roger la Warre, by his petition, before us and our council exhibited, grievously complaining, showed that it was lawful for him that he should hold the town [villam] of Mamecestre, as a borough and market-town, and that he and his predecessors, the lords, — had in the same town the amends [or fines] for the assise-breach of bread and ale, and the punishment of victuallers of the markets in respect of their merchandise, sold contrary to the assise, the law and the custom of the kingdom of England; and toll, as well on every day of the week as on the market day, together with other liberties to a borough and market town belonging, — has and ought to have; and he and his predecessors, the aforesaid kind of liberties have used for a time to which memory does not extend. And in the said town and in the manor of Mamecestre and in the members and in the hamlets to the same manor belonging, the liberties of Infangetheof, peace-breach, the amends of the [assise-] breach of bread and ale,⁹¹ and the punishment of butchers⁹² appointed his successor. — (Foss's Judges of England, vol. iii. p. 502.) As however the duke's writ in the text is dated in March 1359, and gives no judicial title to Seton, it is probable that he had then ceased to be Chief Justice of the King's Bench.

⁸⁹ (Page 450.) Of this John Cokayn we can find no notice; but he may have been father of Sir John Cokayne, a native of Ashbourne, Derbyshire, who was Recorder of London 18 to 22 Richard II. (1394-1397). He was raised to the office of Chief Baron of the Exchequer 15th November 1400, and 17th June 1406 a puisne judgeship in the Common Pleas was granted him, and he performed the duties of both offices for some years. Having sat on the bench nearly thirty years, he retired to private life in 1429, and died in 1438, leaving several children. — (Foss's Judges of England, vol. iv. p. 303.)

⁹¹ See note 15, p. 399 ante.

and tanners⁸³ for their merchandise sold contrary to the aforesaid assise, the law and custom; and other liberties of gallows, pit, pillory, and tumbrel,⁸⁴ and as much as to these liberties belongeth, he and his said first time he shall be grievously amerced. 2. The second time he shall suffer judgment of the pillory. 3. The third time he shall be imprisoned and make fine, and the fourth time he shall forswear the town. And in this manner shall it be done of cooks, and all that offend in like case. By the 3 and 4 Edward VI. cap. 19 (1550) if any butcher shall buy any fat oxen, steers, ronts [small oxen], kine, heifers, calves or sheep, and sell the same again on live [alive] he shall forfeit the same. But he shall and may at his pleasure buy any fat oxen (&c. as above) or any of them, out of any open fair or market, so that he sell them not again on live. By the 24 Henry VIII. cap. 9 (1532) any butcher killing a weanling, bullock, steer or heifer, under two years old, for sale, forfeited 6s. 8d.

⁸³ The principal statute as to leather, its tanning, currying, tawing, &c., was not passed till the 1 James I. (1603). But the offences of tanners are probably indicated in the provisions of an act of 5 Edward VI. (1551) by which every one having the king's license to carry over sea any tanned leather may buy in open fair or market, so much as he shall be licensed to transport, on having the quantities endorsed on his license by the chief officer of such fair or market. If any one buy or ingross any kind of tanned leather, to the intent to sell the same again (except saddlers, girdlers, cordwainers and other artificers making wares of leather, buying such kind of leather as is necessary for being wrought by them) he shall forfeit the same or its price. But the said artificers may sell their wombs, shreds and necks, which they cannot occupy about their wares.

predecessors were used from the time aforesaid. Notwithstanding which our bailiffs, for the assise-breach of bread and ale, and for peace-breach, also for butchers selling contrary to the assise, the resiants of the said town and manor have amerced, and the same amerciements to our profit, unjustly ["minus juste"] have levied, as he says, not a little to the injury and grievance of him Roger and the resiants. Upon which the same Roger supplicates us for himself, that we provide a remedy herein. We, willing to do in this respect what is just to the same Roger, have assigned unto you, jointly and severally to inquire, by the oaths of honest and lawful men of the aforesaid duchy, by whom the truth of the matter may be better known, if the said Roger hold the said town as a borough and market-town. And if he and his predecessors aforesaid so held it, and were used to have the liberties aforesaid from the time aforesaid. And we desire that they may be permitted to inquire respecting all the circumstances touching the said liberties. And the inquisition therein made, to us in our chancery, under your seal, or under the seal of one of you, and the seals of those by whom it was made, to be sent without delay and this writ; that afterwards we may cause to be done therein what of right should be done. We therefore command our sheriff of our aforesaid duchy that at a certain day and place, which you or one of you shall make known to him, he shall cause to come before you all, such honest and lawful men of his bailiwick, by whom the truth of the thing in the premises may be better known and inquired into. In testimony whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent. Witness me myself at Preston, on the 8th day of March, in the ninth year of our duchy [1359].

We have also inspected the tenor of the inquisition by the aforementioned Thomas, John and Roger, in pursuance of our letters aforesaid, taken, and sent into our chancery, in these words:—

INQUISITION taken at Preston before Thomas de Seton and his fellows, Justices of the Lord the Duke, on Monday in the second week of Lent, in the thirty-third year of the reign of King Edward the Third after the Conquest [March 11 or 18, 1359] by the oaths of—head in water.) It was also a punishment inflicted upon brewers [brewsters, i.e. women-brewers] and bakers transgressing the laws, who were thereupon in such a stool plunged over head and ears "in stercore"—stagnant and stinking water.—(Blount and Jacob.)

Jurors; — Who say by their oaths, that Roger la Warre knight, lord of Mamecestre, does not hold the town of Mamecestre as a borough; nor did his predecessors hold the town as a borough. But they say that the same Roger and his predecessors, from a time to which memory goeth not, held the said town, as a market town;⁹⁶ and that he and his prede-

⁹⁵ Of these jurors, John de Radeclif appears to have been the eldest son and heir of Sir John Raddliff of Ordsall knight, who died a year before this inquisition, this John succeeding him as head of that branch of the family. He married Margaret, cousin and heiress of Clementine, daughter and heir of Roger de Chedell, but died s.p. — Oto de Halsale was the son and heir of Gilbert de Halsale (? near Ormskirk), who died about 1322. This Oto survived till 1395. — Roger de Bradshagh of Haigh was the eldest son of Sir William Bradshagh and his wife Mabel, the daughter and heiress of Hugh Norris of Blackrod, and the heroine of the tradition of Mab's Cross. Roger held Blackrod from the Earl Ferrers in 1322, and married a Margaret —, who survived him, and by whom he had a son Hugh. — Robert de Trafford of Garratt was the third son of Sir Henry of Trafford and Margaret his wife. Robert married and left three sons, Henry, Robert and Nicholas. — Adam de Hopwode, if we may rely on a pedigree obviously defective in its earlier part, was (perhaps) a son of Thomas; Adam was living in 1342 and 1359, and left a son Thomas, who was the father of Geoffrey, living 1369–1421. — Roger de Barlow of Barlow was the son of Roger and his wife Alice, daughter of Sir Richard Worsley knight. He married Alice, daughter of Thomas Entwistle Esq., and left a son, John, living 1396–7. — Robert de Hulme was probably the son of Robert and the father of Laurence Hulme of Manchester, who was living in 1421. — John de Chetham was probably one of the Chethams of Nuthurst, with whom the Christian name of John was a favourite one about this period. — Thomas de Strangwas was perhaps one of three brothers, John, Thomas and Henry de Strangways, who in October 1385 entered into an engagement to serve Sir John Pondus, captain of Cherburg, to enter for the guard of the donjon of that place, for a year, receiving John 20 livres or 20*l.*, Thomas and Henry each 20 marks or 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, together with “sufficient victuals, such as are fitting for esquires of their condition.” — Most of these jurors seem to have been resident within a few miles of Mamecestre, the three exceptions being Halsall, Bradshaw and Bickersteth.

⁹⁶ A market town (vill mercatorium), is a town possessing a market by prescription or charter. Mamecestre clearly held its market by custom or usage beyond the cessors, lords of the same town, had the amends of the assise-breach of bread and ale, and the punishment of victuallers of the markets, for whatsoever merchandise be sold against the assise, law and custom of the kingdom of England; and toll, as well on every day of the week as on the market-day; with all other liberties to a market-town belonging. And they say also, that the same Roger and his predecessors in the aforesaid town of Mamecestre, and in the manor of Mamecestre, with the members and hamlets of the same manor, to wit, in the town of Assheton [under-Lyne] in Salfordshire, Wythington, Heton Norrays, Barton near Eccles, Halghton, Heton-with-Haliwall, Pilkinton, and in the hamlets to the same towns in the same manor belonging,⁹⁷ — the memory of man. A market (mercatus, from mercando, buying and selling) is the liberty by grant or prescription, whereby a town is enabled to set up and open shops &c. at a certain place therein, for buying and selling, and better provision of such victuals as the subject wanteth. It is less than a fair, and is usually kept once or twice a week. The market of Mamecestre was (and is still) held on Saturday. One market ought to be distant from another six miles and a half and a sixth of a mile ("Sex leucas (vel milliari) et dimidium, et terciam partem dimidiæ.") — (Bracton.) If one hath a market by charter or prescription, and another obtains a market near it, to the nuisance of the former, the owner of the former may avoid it [i.e. may make void or null the new market.] — (1 Inst. 406.) Where a man has a fair or market, and one erects another to his prejudice, an action will lie. — (2 Roll. 140; 1 Mod. 69.) Formerly it was customary for fairs and markets to be kept on Sundays; but by the statute 27 Henry VI. cap. 5 (1449) no fair or market is to be kept upon any Sunday or upon the Feasts of the Ascension, Corpus Christi, Good Friday, All Saints, &c., except for necessary victuals and in time of harvest. They ought not to be held in churchyards. — (13 Edward I. cap. 6. — 1285.) All fairs are markets; and the market must be in an open place, where the owner may have the benefit of it — (4 Inst. 272.) Persons that dwell in the country may not sell wares by retail in a market town, but in open fair or market. But countrymen may sell goods in gross there. — (Stat. 1 and 2. Philip and Mary, 1554-5, cap. 7.) Every one that hath a market shall have toll for things sold, which is to be paid by the buyer, and by ancient custom may be paid for standing of things in the market, though nothing be sold; but not otherwise. Proprietors of markets ought to have a pillory and tumbrel, &c., to punish offenders. — (1 Inst. 131; 2 Inst. 221.)

⁹⁷ Here are seven or eight villa or townships enumerated, all of which are called "members" of the manor of Mamecestre, with the hamlets thereto belonging. It has been already stated (pp. 41, 42 ante) that a manor may contain several villa, villages and hamlets; but though we do not anywhere in the old law books find the term "members" applied to portions of manors, the following passage from Bracton (lib. 4, fol. 212) makes the matter clear: — "A manor may exist by itself, without many liberties of Infangenthef, peace-breach, of the amends of assise-breach of bread and ale, and punishment of butchers and tanners as to their merchandise sold against the aforesaid assise, the law and custom. And other liberties of gallows, pit, pillory and tumbrel,⁹⁸ and so much as to buildings added together, or adjacent vills and hamlets; it may also be a manor both by itself and together with many vills and many hamlets adjacent; none of which, however, can be a manor by itself, but only a vill or a hamlet. There may also be a capital or chief manor by itself, and it may contain under itself many manors not capital [i.e. many meane or inferior manors], and many vills and many hamlets, as under one head or lord." Of the vills enumerated as "members" of the manor of Mamecestre, Ashton-under-Lyne, the principal, was a meane manor, and also a separate parish of itself. The town is seven miles east of Manchester. Withington is a township in the parish of Manchester, three and a half miles south of Manchester. Heaton Norris is a chapelry in the parish of Manchester, six miles S.S.E.; Haughton or Houghton, a township in the parish of Manchester, is six miles S.E.; Heaton and Halliwell are now distinct townships, both in the parish of Dean, the former two miles west from Bolton, the latter two miles N.W. from Bolton. Pilkington is a township in the parish of Prestwich, six miles N.W. from Manchester. The manor must have included other townships or vills not here named.

⁹⁸ See notes pp. 231, 399, 452 ante. There are here enumerated a pair of capital punishments, and a pair of lesser penalties; and of each pair one was usually applied to one sex, the other to the other. Thus the gallows, or hanging, was for male, — the pit, or drowning, for female, criminals. The pillory was usually for male offenders, and the tumbrel or the ducking-stool (with the brank or iron bridle), for female delinquents, as prostitutes, drunkards and scolds. One seeming exception, — the punishment of brewers by tumbrel, — may be explained by the fact that women were almost the only brewers. Three different machines of punishment are often confounded, — the cuck or cucking-stool, the ducking-stool, and the tumbrel. The first was simply a stool, on which the female offender was placed before her own door, or in the market-place; the punishment consisting solely in this public exposure. The ducking-stool was a chair suspended over a pond, for plunging the delinquent in the water. The tumbrel was a wheeled cart, in which delinquents were carted round the town, and sometimes whipping was added. When a ducking-stool was placed on the tumbrel, and the culprit wheeled from her home or the market-place to the ducking-pond, then the machine took either name, or both. Mr. Ormerod, the historian of Cheshire, speaks of the cucking-stool as applied only to female scolds, and says that the ducking-stool was a distinct punishment, superseding it, and sometimes usurping its name. Cowel, in v. Thew, quotes Pl. in Itin. apud Cestr. 14 Henry VII. (1498-9) to show that in the manors of Bushton and Ayton delinquents against the assise of bread and ale were punished three times by amerciamment, but the fourth time, "bakers by the pillory, brewers by the tumbrel, and scolds by the thewe, that is by putting them upon a stool [scabellum] called a cucking-stool." At a court of the manor of Edgeware in 1552, these liberties belongs, they have, and have been wont to have, from time to which memory goeth not. In testimony whereof, to this inqui-

the inhabitants were presented for not having "a tumbrel and cucking-stool." Du Cange, in v. Tumbrellum (French tombereau) describes it as an instrument used for carrying brawling and scolding women to be punished [castigandas], by which they were cast into water, immersed, and drawn out drenched and half-choked. Cowel says it was a cart, in which fornicators and adulterers, for disgrace, were carted around the city or borough. Bracton calls it "Pana Tymboralis;" Fleta, "Pana Tumbrelli." The laws of the Scottish burghs enact that if any one shall be in forfeiture, as to bread or ale, the baker shall be put upon the neck-stretch, which is called the pillorie; the maltstress, breweress or brewster, or ale-wife (brasiatrix), upon the tumbrel, which is called the castigatory. So Fleta calls it "Timburale vel Castigatorium." Kitchin says that "Every one having View of Frank-pledge ought to have a pillory and a tumbrel." Blount says that the cucking or ooke-stool, or tumbrel, was in use in the time of the Saxons, by whom it was called Scealfing-stol, (Scealfor, Anglo-Saxon, a diver). Somner, and Dr. Bosworth in his Anglo-Saxon Dictionary, render this term by "ducking-stool, a chair in which quarrelsome women being seated, are submerged in water." Blount adds that it was a punishment anciently inflicted upon [female] brewers and bakers [?] transgressing the laws, who were thereupon, in such a stool or chair, to be ducked and immersed "in stercore," in some muddy or stinking pond. In Domesday it is called "Cathedra stercoreis," the chair of the dung-heap, or more correctly dung-pond. There is a curious passage which gives another etymology to the word, viz. goging-stool, which is found in a Latin MS. of the laws, statutes and customs of the free-borough and town of Montgomery temp. Henry II. In the original the word given for the delinquent is Pandosatrix, which may best be rendered ale-wife, i.e. a woman who both brews and sells ale. "If such ale-wife [or brewster] shall brew ale, and shall break the assise of our lord the king in the borough and town, as fixed and proclaimed, then she shall be amerced by the bailiffs at the will of our bailiffs, and not by her peers [parcs suos, i.e. by a jury] the first and second time; and if she shall break the assise a third time, she must be taken by the head bailiffs and publicly carried or led to the place where the goging-stole is situate, and there she must choose one of two things, viz. whether she will go upon [ascendere] the goging-stole, or whether she will ransom or redeem herself from that judgment [illud iudicium redimere] at the will of the bailiffs." As to other names for this stool, it is stated that a woman, convicted of being a common scold, shall be sentenced to be placed on a certain engine of correction, called the trebucket (French trébuchet) castigatory, or cucking-stool, which in the Saxon language signifies the scolding-stool [?]; though now it is frequently corrupted into ducking-stool, because the residue of the judgment is, that when she is so placed therein she shall be plunged in the water for her punishment. — (3 Inst. 219: Black. Com. 4 v. 169.) Though this punishment is now disused, the editor [of Jacob's Law Dictionary, Mr. John Morgan] remembers to have seen the remains of one on the estate of a relation of his in Warwickshire; consisting of a long beam or rafter, moving on a fulcrum, and extending to the centre of a large pond, on which end the stool used to be placed. Some think cucking-stool a corruption from ducking-stool; others from choking-stool: because by this mode of immersing in water one is almost suffocated. — (Jacob.) In the Leet Book of Coventry in 1423, is an entry of "the cokestowle made upon Chelsmore Green, to punish scolds and chiders, as the law will." In 1555 Mary Queen of Scots enacted that itinerant singing-women should be put on the cuck-stools of every burgh or town; and the first Homily against contention, pt. iii. (published 1562) sets forth that "in all well ordered cities, common brawlers and scolders be punished with a notable kind of pain, as to be set on the cucking-stole, pillory, or such like." In Skene's "Regiam Majestatem," in the chapter on "Brewsters, or women who brew ale to be sold," if one such make evil ale, contrary to the use and custom of the burgh, and is convict, "she shall pay an unlaw (fine) of 8s., or shall suffer the justice of the burgh, that is, she shall be put upon the cock-stool, and the ale shall be distributed to the poor folk." An original cucking-stool, of ancient and rude construction, was preserved in the crypt under the chancel of St. Mary's, Warwick, where may still be seen the three wheeled carriage [? tumbrel], upon which was suspended by a long balanced pole a chair, which could readily be lowered into the water, when the cumbrous vehicle had been rolled into a convenient situation. This chair is still in existence at Warwick. Another cucking-stool, differently contrived, may be seen at Ipswich, in the Custom House; it appears to have been used by a sort of crane, whereby the victim was slung into the river, and is represented in the History of Ipswich (1830) and the Gentleman's Magazine (January 1831). At Kingston on Thames a woman was placed in the stool and ducked in the Thames for scolding, by order of the magistrates, so lately as April 1745. The Editor of Mamecestre has seen, in a chamber in the Manchester Royal Infirmary, an old high-backed oak chair, with some carving, which he was assured was the ducking-stool formerly suspended over the Daub-holes or Infirmary Pond. The poet Gay describes such an engine in "the Dumps": —

"I'll speed me to the pond, where the high stool
On the long plank, hangs o'er the muddy pool,
That stool, the dread of ev'ry scolding queen," &c.

In his MSS. (written about 1780) Mr. Cole says that in his boyhood he saw a woman ducked for scolding at Cambridge. The chair hung by a pulley fastened to a beam about the middle of the bridge, in which the woman was confined, and let down under the water three times, and then taken out. The ducking-stool was constantly hanging in its place, and on the back panel of it were engraved devils laying hold of scolds, &c. Misson, in his Travels in England, minutely describes the cucking-stool and its operation. In some verses written early in the eighteenth century, we have its action thus portrayed: —

We also direct to be exemplified the tenor of our aforesaid letters, and the tenor of the said Inquisition, at the request of the aforesaid Roger la Warre, and the tenor of these presents. In testimony whereof, &c. Witness the Duke, at our Castle of Lyverpull, on the 26th day of April, in the ninth year, &c. [April 26, 1359.]

Ibid. No. 44.

For Roger la Warre. } The DUKE, to all his Bailiffs and faithful men, to whom, &c. Know ye that whereas our beloved kinsman [or cousin] Roger la Warre, lord of Mamecestre, lately made in our Chancery a certain fine of ten marks [6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*] to have our writ as to the tenure of Mamecestre, and one other fine of forty marks [26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*] before our justices at Preston for license to agree as to the aforesaid tenure: We, willing to do special grace therein to the same Roger, have pardoned him the aforesaid fines. So that by us or our heirs he shall not therein be troubled. In testimony whereof, &c. Witness the Duke at Preston, the 8th day of January in the ninth year, &c. [January 8, 1360.]

By letters of the Duke, under the privy seal.

"There stands, my friend, o'er yonder pool,
An engine call'd a Ducking-stool:

* * * * *

Down in the deep the stool descends,
But here, at first, we miss our ends:

She mounts again, and rages more
Than ever vixen did before.

So, throwing water on the fire
Will make it but burn up the higher.

If so, my friend, pray let her take
A second turn into the lake,

And, rather than your patience lose,
Thrice and again repeat the dose.

No brawling wives, no furious wenches,
No fire so hot, but water quenches."

For further illustrations of these engines and modes of punishment, see the Glossaries of Ducange, Spelman, Blount and Cowel, the Promptorium Parvulorum, and Brand's Popular Antiquities.

It being thus formally decided that Mamecestre was only a market town and not a borough, it would no longer be free from suit to the county and wapentake. The result was in fact to reduce the Port-mote to a mere subsidiary court to the lord's Court-baron; and to set up again the jurisdiction of the wapentake of Salford, and that of the sheriff's tourn, within the town of Mamecestre, in all cases except such as related to the lord and his tenants, which, according to ancient usage, would be determinable by the Court-baron. It may suffice to add that ultimately the several local courts merged into the half-yearly Court Leet, Court-baron and View of Frank-pledge, held about Easter and about Michaelmas; at which latter time the Boroughreeve and Constables of Manchester for the ensuing year were elected.

Amongst other proceedings arising out of the Preston Inquisition a final agreement was made in the Duke's Court at Preston, between Roger la Warre knight and Alianora [or Eleanor] his wife, plaintiffs or complainants, and John la Warre knight (the son of Roger's first marriage) and John Wyke, deforciant of the manor of Mamecestre and the churches of Mamecestre and Ashton. As copies of the original have been printed in its contracted form in Baines's Lancashire (vol. ii. p. 190) and at full length in Dr. Hibbert-Ware's History of the Foundations (vol. iv. p. 107), we need only subjoin a translation of this document:—

FINAL AGREEMENT AS TO THE MANOR OF MAMECESTRE AND THE ADVOWSONS OF MAMECESTRE AND ASHTON.

(Rot. Ped. Fin. Hen. Duc. Lanc. ann. 8 [1358.]—In records of Chapter House at Westminster.)

This is a final agreement made in the court of the lord the duke at Preston, on Monday, the morrow of St. Mary Magdalene [i.e. July 23] in the eighth year of the duchy [or regality] of Henry Duke of Lancaster [1358] before Tho. de Seton, Henry de Haydoke,⁹⁹ John Cokayne, and ⁹⁹ Was this Henry de Haydoke a son of Gilbert de Haydoke, who in 1344 obtained from the king license to inclose Haydock Park, and to have free warren in Bradley? Henry, son of Henry de Haydok, gave to Richard, son of Roger de Assheton, land in Aston [? Ashton-in-Makerfield] in 23 Edward I. (1294-5).

Roger de Faryngton, justices, and others of the faithful men of the lord the duke then and there present.

Between Roger la Warre knight and Alianora [or Eleanor] his wife, complainants [or plaintiffs], and John la Warre knight and John Wyke,¹⁰⁰ deforciant of the manor of Mamecestre with the appurtenances, and of the advowsons of the churches of Mamecestre and Ashton. Upon which plea an agreement was entered into between them in the same court. To wit—That the aforesaid Roger acknowledges the aforesaid manor with the appurtenances and the advowsons aforesaid, to be the right of him John la Warre, as to which the same John and John de Wyke have it of the gift of the aforesaid Roger. And for this acknowledgment, fine and agreement, they John and John have granted to the aforesaid Roger and Alianor the aforesaid manor with the appurtenances and advowsons aforesaid. And they will return them in the same court, to have and to hold to the same Roger and Alianor and to the heirs of him Roger, of the chief lord of that [fee] by the services which to the aforesaid manor and advowsons belong for ever.

LANCASTER'.

In 36 Edward III. (1362-3) an Inquisition post mortem as to Henry, the first Duke of Lancaster, found that his Lancashire possessions were the following; here printed, as showing what the la Warres held of him as of his duchy, and as of his honour of Tutbury:—

Lancaster Castle and honor; pleas of the county; bailiwick of West Derby; wapentake of Lonsdale; town of Lancaster; the river Lune fishery near Presthwait; Overton manor; Slyne town; Skerton lands, &c.; Quernmore Park; Wiresdale vaccary; Bleasdale, Caldre, Grisdale, ditto; Amounderness wapentake; Preston, Singleton, Biggeby vill with the Wray; Hydil Park; Cadilegh, Fulwood wood; Kylaneshalgh,

Broughton, Mirescogh Park, Wiggehalgh, Baggerburgh, Clyderhoo Castle, Blakeburnshire wapentake, Ightenhull manor, Colne manor with members, Woxton, Penhulton vill, Chateburn vill, Accrington vill, Huncotes, Haslingden vill, Penhull chace, Troghden chace, Rossendale chace, Totington manor and chace, Hoddesden wood, Rachedale manor, Penwortham manor, Widnes manor, Ulleswalton manor, Eccleston vill, Leylond vill, Lyverpoll Castle, West Derby manor and Salford manor (both as of the honor of Tutbury), Hornby Castle and manor, Werington maner and Laton manor.

Lanc. — Walton in Blakeburnshire, Crointon, Apulton, Sutton, Eccleston, Rainhull, Knowslegh, Torbok, Hyton, Maghull, Crosseby Parva, Kirkebye, Kirkedale, North Meles, Argameles, Ulneswalden, Bretherton, Hoghton, Claiton, Whelton-cum-Heparge, Wytherhull-cum-Bothelsworth, Hoton, Longeton, Leiland, Eukeston, Chenington, Chernoke, Walshewhitull [Welsh Whittle], Warton in Amounderness, Prees, Newton, Frekelton, Witingham, Ethelswike, Bura in Salfordshire, Middleton with members, Chatherton, Totinton, Mitton Parva, Wiswall, Hapton, Townlay, Coldecotes, Snoddeworth, Twiselton, Extwisell, Aghton, Merlay, Lyvesay, Donnom, Fobrigge, Merlay Parva, Rossheton, Billington, Alvetham, Clayton, Harewode, Crofton, Hornebye, Ulsdeston[?], Warton in Lonsdale, Gairstang with members, Thistleton, Prees, Kelgrimesargh, Bryninge, Merton Magna, Middleton in Lonsdale, Newton, Makerfeld, Lawton, Keinan [Kenyon], Erbury, Goldeburne, Sefton, Thorneton, Kerdon, Halghton, Burgh, Lee, Fishwicke, Dalton in Furness, Stayninge, Midhope, Chernoke.

Fees held of the honour of Tutbury. — Hagh Parva, Bolton, Breightmet, Compton, Burghton, Childerwell, Barton in Salfordshire, Asphull, Brockholes, Dalton, Perbald, Withington [Wrightington], Lostoke, Romworthe, Pilkington, Worthington, Heton-under-Horewiche, Tildeslegh, Sulthethe [?], Bixton, Astley, Atherton, Sonkey, Penketh, Ines Blundell, Barton, Halsale, Windehulle, Lydegate, Egergarthe, advowson of the priory of Lancaster, the church of St. Michael on Wyre, Preston church, St. Mary Magdalen chapel, Chypin church, Ribcaster church, Whalley abbey.

During the next few years, Sir Roger la Warre was serving with the king's army in France. In 34 Edward III. (1360) he was taken prisoner. In 1362 he was summoned to parliament; and in 1364 he was again in the wars, serving in the retinue of Prince Edward. In 1368, Roger la Warre was sent to Calais with the Earls of Warwick and Salisbury, having under them 500 men-at-arms and 500 archers. In 1369, 400 Lancashire archers were required to accompany John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, to Aquitaine. By a will dated 28th April, 42 Edward III. (1368) Roger la Warre directed his body to be buried without pomp in the Abbey of Swineshead, co. Lincoln. He died in 44 Edward III. (1370), leaving by his second marriage only a daughter, Joan or Joanna, who married Thomas, third Baron West.

In 44 Edward (1370) it was found by inquisition that Roger la Warre (tenth baron) and Alianora his wife had held in co. Lanc. the manor of Mauncestre and the advowson of the church, the advowson of the church of Asheton, and the extended manor of Keuerdelegh, as of the honour of Halton; besides other manors and lands in cos. Berks, Wilts, Leicester, Rutland, Somerset, Salop, Hereford, Northampton, Sussex and Lincoln. — (Cal. Inq. p.m. vol. ii. p. 305.)

In 50 Edward III. (1376) the Abbot and Convent of Dore, co. Hereford, gave 20s. for the confirmation of a grant made to them by John la Warre [ninth baron] of one acre of land with appurtenances in Albriton, co. Sussex, and the advowson of the church of the same vill. — (Abb. Rot. Orig. vol. ii. p. 347.)

¹ It is not easy always to distinguish Sir John la Warre, eleventh baron of Manchester, from his uncle Sir John la Warre, of Bockhampton, Berks, who died however in 1360, according to one account s.p., leaving his estates to his brother Roger. But in Blore's Rutland we find it stated (vol. i. p. 106) that in April 1360 this latter John was knighted at Paris; that he was taken prisoner by John de Haubert; and that he died on the 27th August, 44 Edward III. (1370), and by his will, dated Wakerley, 28th April, 42 Edward III. (1368) he directed that his body should be buried in the Abbey of Swineshead, co. Lincoln; that his best horse should be his principal [i.e. mortuary], without armour, according to the custom of mean people; that 100*l.* sterling should be given to the poor in sums of not less than half a mark [6*s.* 8*d.*] at the discretion of his executors; that the daughters of John la Warre, his grandfather and the lady Joan [Greslet] his wife, should be paid [?]; that Alianor should have the vestments, books, &c. of his chapel; and after payment of his debts

ceeded to the barony; but at the time of his father's death he was with Prince Edward in France, and therefore his homage was respite till his return. In 1371, John being still absent, his brother Thomas de la Warre, a priest, was presented to the vacant living of Ashton-under-Lyne, on the death of Thomas del Wyke, by Sir Lewis Clifford his uncle (by marriage with Eleanor, one of the sisters of Sir Roger la Warre), who had wardship of the manorial estates of his absent nephew.

A record without date, probably from some feodary, states that John la Warre and William Botiller, knights, and their tenants, hold of the duke [duce] of Lancaster³ nine knight's fees, and $\frac{1}{3}$ rd and $\frac{1}{4}$ th of a fee, in the underwritten villis:—Hagh, Little Bolton, Brightmade, Crompton, Brighton, Barton (in Salfordshire), Childwell, Aspall, Brocholis (in Amunderness), Dalton (in Derby), Parbold, Wrightington (in Leylandshire), Rumsworth, Lostock, Pilkington, Withington, Worthington, Heton-under-Horewich, Tildesley, Culchet, Rixton, Astley, Atherton, Sonkey, Penket, Ince Blundell, Barton (in Derby), Halsall, Windhull, Lydiate and Egerwith [Edgeworth]:—Which fees, together with certain lands and tenements which are of the honor of Tutbery, the lord the duke granted to Richard Earl of Arundel, John Bishop of Lincoln, Robert (?) de la Warre knight, John Buckland knight, John de Char-nols, Walter Power, Simon Simcox, John de Newmarch, and their heirs, by a fine in the court of the lord the king before the justices at Westminster, on which a fine was levied by which each of the said fees was valued at 5*l.* yearly. And the said honor of Tutbery, together with the same fees, is held of the honor of Lancaster.—(Dr. Keuerden's MSS. in Her. Coll. and Palmer's MSS. vol. D. p. 27.)

and legacies, the residue of his goods should be divided in three parts; one to be disposed of for the benefit of his soul; another to Alianor his wife; and the third to his sons—Thomas, Edward and John. He appointed his sons John and Thomas his executors.

³ As there was no Duke of Lancaster before March 1351, and as John la Warre, ninth baron, died in 1347, it is clear that the John la Warre here named was the eleventh baron, who ruled in the years 1370–1398, and that the Sir William Botiller was the son of Sir William Butler of Warrington and Sibilla his wife; he married Elizabeth —, and died in 3 Richard II. (1379–80), leaving two sons, Richard and John; Richard the eldest married a Joanna —, and died s.p. 23 Edward IV. (1482–3).

On the return home of John la Warre, he did homage to John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, for the following lands and estates in Lancashire places: — Haigh, Little Bolton, Brightmet, Crompton, Brughton, Barton in Salford (Barton-on-Irwell), Childwall, Aspull, Brockholes in Amounderness, Dalton in Derby hundred, Parbold, Wrightington, and Heton-subtus-Horwich. After being thus put in possession of his barony, John la Warre returned the same year to France. He subsequently granted to Robert de Holland the manor of Dalton, and one-sixth of the manor of Harwood, to be held as of the manor of Mamecestre. He also confirmed to Nicholas de Longford the manor of Withington, which he held by the service of helping to find one judge for the lord's court at Mamecestre.

A short abstract of a grant of land in Mamecestre is given in the Harl. MSS. (Cod. 2112, fol. 171) as follows: —

Ego Johannes de la Warre, dñs de Mamecestř dedi &c. Hawisie, atte Castle-hull, quand' plac' ter' cont' vigint' sept' pedes, sup Irke, et in lat' 50 pedes, à falda nřa sup Irwell &c. Test' Thurstan de Holland, Ričō de Radcliffe de Ordesall, Rañ Ward, et aliis. Dat' apud Wakerley, a° 49 Edward III. (1375).

I John de la Warre, lord of Mamecestre, have given &c. to Hawise atte Castle-Hull, a certain plot of land containing twenty-seven feet upon Irke [bank], and in breadth fifty feet from our fold upon Irwell [bank], &c. Given at Wakerley, 49 Edward III. (1375).

In 19 Richard II. (1396), Robert Collayne, chaplain [of Mamecestre], gave to Richard de Holand, knight, lands and tenements in Mamecestre, called Ousecroft, Le Knolles, and Rype-feld [or Kyper-feld], which Robert had of the gift of Hawise, of Castlehull; the said Richard to hold them for life. — (Harl. MS. 2112, fol. 146.)

In 6 Richard II. (1382-3) the king granted by patent that John de la Warre (eleventh baron of Mamecestre), lord of Wakerley, was not to be required to come to parliament during the remainder of his life. — (Cal. Bot. Pat. p. 206 b.)

Burke says that the special dispensation exempted him from attending any future parliaments, or serving the king in his parliaments or otherwise, against his own good will. This exemption could hardly be in consideration of his age, for he could not be fifty at this time; and he lived sixteen years afterwards. He may, however, have had some great physical infirmity, disabling him from active service.

In 22 Richard II. (1398-9) by an escheat on inquiry before Roger Brockels, escheator, it was found that John de la Ware knight [eleventh baron] held the manor of Mamecestre, together with the advowson of the church [of Mamecestre and also the advowson of the church] of Ashton-under-Lyne, of the lord the duke [of Lancaster] in chief, by the service of one knight's fee and one-fourth of a knight's fee; and the manor of Keuerdelegh of the lord the duke, in chief, by the service of one-eighth of a knight's fee, as of his manor of Halton. — (Dr. Keuerden's MS. Chetham Library, p. 437.)

About 1373 Thomas la Warre seems to have resigned the rectory of Ashton-under-Lyne, and to have been inducted into that of Mamecestre. John la Warre, eleventh baron, according to one account, had but one son, who pre-deceased him; but as we can nowhere find his wife named, we are inclined to accept the statement of Burke and others, that he died unmarried. He died 27th July, 1398 (22 Richard II.), and was succeeded by his brother Thomas la Warre, then rector of Mamecestre. There would seem to have been several inquisitions after the death of John la Warre: —

In 6 Henry V. (1418-19) it was found that John de la Ware held the manor of Mamecestre with appurtenances, by homage and service, and 5*s.* 6*d.* at the feast of St. John Baptist for castleward of Lancaster, and 4*l.* 4*s.* for sac-fee at the Nativity of the Lord [Christmas], the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin [March 25], St. John Baptist [June 24], and St. Michael [September 29]; and by the service of five knights' fees and half a knight's fee and one fourth of a knight's fee. — (Harl. MS. 2085, fol. 418.) In the same year it was found that he also held one carve of land in Chorlton [Hardy] by the service of 20*s.* yearly at the four terms, and one carve in Hulme, by the service of 5*s.* at the four terms. — (Dr. Keuerden's MS. Chetham Library, p. 438.)

Again, in the same year it was found that he held the manor of Keurdeley with appurtenances, by service, doing suit to the county and wapentake, for all services. Also, that he held the manor of Dalton, by homage and service, and suit to the county and the wapentake, by the hand of Robert de Holand, who then held one-fourth of that manor. — (Ib. p. 438.)

XII. — Thomas la Warre, clerk, rector of Mamecestre, was not styled baron, but master, as an ecclesiastic, and hence he was named twelfth lord of Mamecestre. The great event of his rule was the collegiating of the parish church. The following are brief records of some of the acts of this worthy priest-lord, the last male of his line : —

In 13 Henry IV. (1411-12) by an inquisition post mortem Sir John de Ashton held (by sub-infeudation) the manor of Ashton-under-Lyne, of Sir Richard de Kirkeby, by fealty and a rent of one penny — which Richard was found to have held the manor of Assheton, with all its appurtenances, of Thomas Lord la Warre, lord of Mamecestre, by fealty and the service of rendering yearly 22s. and one gos-hawk or 40s., as well as putary to the maintenance of the foresters of Horwich and Blakeley, or as it is termed “of his bailiwick of Mamecestre.” — (Ibid.)

In 9 Henry V. (1421) a patent was granted for the founding and endowing of the College of Mauncestre, by Thomas la Warre, clerk. — (Cal. Rot. Pat. p. 268.) In the same year he had another patent for inclosing the way through the middle of his close of Offington, co. Sussex. — (Ib. p. 272.)

In 5 Henry VI. (1426-7) it was found that Thomas Lord la Warre was seised for the term of his life . . . whereof are discharged [except:] John de Ashton and his heirs for ever, of the gift of one rod of parkland, of the manor of Mamecestre, in the field called Smithfeld, together with the church of Ashton. — (Imperfect abstract in Keurden's MS. in Chetham Library, p. 435.)

As on the death of Thomas la Warre without issue, the manors and estates of which he was possessed would have descended to his heir-at-law, one of the Griffin family, a distant relative, to the exclusion of his half-sister Joanna, wife of Thomas Lord West, and her issue, — Thomas la Warre appears to have vested his estates in trustees, — in trust for himself for his life, and after his death for his half-sister Joan or Joanna (or it may be Jane, for all three are different forms of the same name) and her issue. The mode of accomplishing this alienation from the legal heir was termed "deforcando levatum" — deforcing a levy, — somewhat resembling the later process of levying a fine. In 12 Henry IV. (1410–11) Thomas Lord la Warre, clerk, did actually levy a fine of the manor of Wickwar, for the use of himself in tail, the remainder to Reginald West, son of Thomas West, by his wife Joan or Joanna, Thomas la Warre's half-sister.

The erection of the rectory of Mamecestre into a college, in other words the collegiating of the parish church, by Thomas la Warre, who was both lord of the manor and rector of the church, in the year 1421, is told so fully and clearly by Dr. Hibbert-Ware in his History of the Foundations (vol. iv.) that it is only necessary to name it here. The parish of Mamecestre was then of great extent; being from seven to nine miles from east to west, and from eight and a half to nine miles from north to south. Mamecestre and Salford, separated only by the Irwell, formed a part of the north-westerly bounds of the parish. To the north of Mamecestre were Chetham, Broughton, Crumpsall, Blakeley and Harperhey. On the east were Bradford (and Beswick), Failsworth, Droylsden, Moston, Newton, Openshaw, Gorton and Denton. On the south, south-west, and south-east were Hulme, Stretford, Moss Side, Rusholme, Chorlton-Row [-on Medlock], Chorlton-cum-Hardy, Didsbury, Levenshulme, Withington, Burnage, Heaton Norris, Reddish and Haughton.

The endowment of the old rectory of Mamecestre consisted of a carve of land in Kirkman's Hulme, granted to the church of Mamecestre prior to the Conquest; of four oxgangs of glebe land in Deansgate, granted to the church by Albert Greslet (senex), third baron of Mamecestre; and of the tithes of the whole parish, including those of its various hamlets. Thomas Lord la Warre, for the endowment of the new collegiate foundation, besides suffering a fine to be levied on the family estates of 200 marks

(133*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*), gave five messuages and ten acres of land in Mamecestre, Aldport, Gorton and Heaton, being parcels of the manor, and also of the advowson of Mamecestre, to the warden and fellows and their successors for ever. These lands included 1 a. 34 p. of land, named the Baron's Hull and Baron's Yard, which was destined for the college house;³ 10 p. of land between the "place" of Ralph Stanley knight and the Bull Oak (apparently a piece of ground between the Baron's Hull and the present church);⁴ 8½ a. 13 p. of land in Nether Aldport (between the Irwell and Water-street);⁵ a messuage and 11½ p. of land at Gorton

³ The boundaries of the college and its yard are thus given in the grant (dated 8th November 1 Henry VI. 1422):—"Beginning at the foot of a common lode [or way] at the bank of a certain stream called Irke, near the burgage of Master John Wrichtynghon, and so ascending by the aforesaid lode as far as to a burgage of Robert, son of John of the Holt, and so by the same burgage ascending by one burgage of Laurence de Hulme, and by the common oven of the town of Mamecestre, which John Challoner of Mamecestre holds; and so by another burgage of the aforesaid Laurence, and by the place [or plot] of Ralph Staneley knight, as far as to the Bulle oke; and so from the said Bulle oke descending by the Hunt Hull, which Edmund Parker holds, as far as to the midstream of the aforesaid water of Irke, near a certain bridge called Irke Brygge; and so always ascending by the midstream of the aforesaid water of Irke as far as into the foot of the aforesaid lode, which was the first bound." [Dr. Hibbert-Ware supposes the "lode" to be the ancient lane still called "Mill Brow." The boundary, he thinks, then took a direction south of the present Long Millgate, as far as the angle formed by the intersection of a narrow road stretching east and west, named "a Vennel," now corrupted into Fennel-street. Near this angle, he conjectures, may have stood the mansion or "place" described as belonging to Ralph Staneley knight. Then from that point he thinks the boundary line was diverted in direction from east to west, parallel with the Collegiate Church, as far as the "Bull Oke" on the south of the "Hunt Hull" or Hill, now Hunt's Bank. This bull-oak, where, according to ancient usage, bulls were baited by dogs, may very possibly have given to the surrounding ground the name of the Hunt Hull. From the Bull Oak the boundary line descended northward by the present Hunt's Bank to the Irk Bridge (near the confluence with the Irwell), and thence proceeded eastward up the midstream of the Irk to the old "lode" or Mill Brow.]

⁵ "Lying within these bounds, viz.: Beginning at the end of a certain hedge [or

inclosure] which begins upon the bank of the river Irwell, towards the west, and so following the said hedge by [or along] the limits of a certain field called 'The Acres,' towards the east, as far as into the highway which leads from Mamcestre to Trafford, and so following the said highway towards the south, for the breadth of a perch and a half of land, and thence descending towards the west, always of the same breadth, as far as opposite to a certain headland [forere] of the said field called 'the Acres,' which abuts towards the south, and thence making an angle directly towards the south, for the breadth of half a perch of land, and from that angle descending athwart [or transversely] towards the west as far as to the said river Irwell, opposite the north end of the land of Edmund de Prestewyoh, lying on the west side of the same water, and so ascending the aforesaid river Irwell as far as to the end of the aforesaid hedge which was the first bound." [On this plot of 8½ acres 13 perches of land in Nether Aldport (which was formerly called "Lithake," and also Aldport Park) Dr. Hibbert-Ware observes that it would be somewhat difficult now to identify its minutely marked boundaries; but the site may be described generally as a margin of land between the Irwell and an ancient road (the present Water-street) leading to Old Trafford, which bank was intended to command a fishery for the use of the inmates of the college.]

⁶ "Lying in a certain place called Gorton Grene, between the tenure [or holding] of John Bageley the elder, on the east side, and a certain gate [or outlet] which leads from the said Gorton Grene, as far as to Redich on the south side." [This house and small quantity of land on Gorton Green would seem by no means to have been the only property at Gorton given by Thomas la Warre to his newly collegiate church. There is amongst the Mosley muniments at Rolleston a grant in 1422 by Thomas Bishop of Durham, John Henegge, Nicholas Motte (clerk), Richard Lumbard (clerk), and Richard Fryth, which recites a fine in the Duchy Court at Lancaster of Thursday before St. Lawrence, 12 Henry IV. (August 6, 1411), by which Thomas la Warre, as deforciant of the manor of Mamecestre, acknowledged the right in the manors of Mamecestre and Keuerdeley and the advowson of the church of Mamecestre, to be the right of William Ronceby, clerk, as he held it of the bishop and others, of the gift of the said Thomas la Warre, who remits and quitclaims the same to the said bishop, &c., for ever. Afterwards William Ronceby, by a writing given at Swyneshed on the Feast of St. Matthew the Apostle 12 Henry IV. (September 21, 1411), released all his right and claim to the bishop, &c. By this grant the bishop, &c., for the good and lawful service, bestowed and to be bestowed by Robert of the Bothe to the foresaid Thomas la Warre, confirms to the said Robert of the Bothe and Douce [Dulcia] his wife, all our messuages, lands and tenements, rents and services, in the hamlets of Gorton and Grene-lowe-marsshe, in the vill of Mamcestre, within the metes and bounds of Ardewyke, Opynshagh, Aldewynshagh, Denton, Rediche, Levens-holme, and Grene-lowe-heth, parcels of the said manor of Mamcestre, except one plot of land in Gorton with a certain grange built thereon, and inclosed by a hedge, for receiving certain tithe of corn. To have, &c., to them and the heirs of Robert by the service of charter of colligation was dated at Heywood, 5th August, 1421.

Thomas Lord la Warre only lived four or five years after completing the colligation of his parish church. He died in 5 Henry VI. (1426-7); and was buried in the abbey of Swineshead, co. Lincoln. He was found by the inquisition of 1427 to have died seised (besides manors and estates in other counties), of the manor of Mamecestre, which was then "fully extended" as follows:—

INQUISITION OF 1427.

ASHTON.—The advowson of the church.

SHARPLES.—The hamlet and land there called "the Fouldes," containing 4,000 acres.

1,000 acres held in the same place, called "Hordern Solyns."

HETON WITH HALEWAL.—1,000 acres of land called "Egburden," in this vill.

KEUERDLEY.—The manor, as of the manor of Halton.

HETON NORRIS.—Lands, &c.

GRENE-LOW-ETH.—Three messuages, with lands there, denoted by metes.

MAMECESTRE.—Lands there called "Jonesfeld de Hulton" and "Ingelfeld," described by metes.

A tenement there called "Over-draught-gate," by metes.

A tenement there called "Nether-draught-gate," by metes.

Remainder to Thomas brother of Robert and his lawful heirs—in default, &c., to revert wholly to the bishop, &c. The suit to Manchester mill is set forth, both for corn and malt; and if they or the tenants of the messuages, &c., should grind at any other mill, the bishop, &c., have power to distrain on any part of the premises. [Dr. Hibbert-Ware says in reference to the two small bits of land in Gorton and Heaton, that "it has been conjectured that these gifts were incidental to one or two chapels of ease, which had been built for the accommodation of the more distant parishioners of Manchester."] The five parcels of land, make up a whole of exactly ten acres, as stated.

MOSTON. — In this hamlet messuages and lands, &c., called "Brideshaghe," near Bouker-leghe, indicated by metes.

CURMESHALL. — 800 acres of land in the hamlet of Curmeshale, in Mamecestre, by metes.

THE WESTS.

We have seen how the manor passed from the Greslets to the la Warres, and now it went, with the large family estates in Lancashire and other counties, to the Wests, who were thenceforward styled Lords la Warre.

As "curious coincidences" we may notice that Thomas Greslet, the last baron of that race, gave a charter of liberties to the burgesses of Mamecestre; and that Thomas de la Warre, the last lord of Mamecestre of that race, procured a charter, by which its ancient parish church was reformed and collegiate. There were eight Greslets, lords of the manor of Mamecestre, and (including the Wests, whose barony merged in that of de la Warre) there were eight la Warres, lords of that manor. When the male line of the Greslets failed, the manor was taken by the last baron's sister Joan to the la Warres, and when their male line failed, the manor was again taken by the last lord's sister Joan to the Wests.

The Thomas West who married Joan la Warre was son of Thomas West, at whose death in September 1386, he succeeded as third baron West. He was summoned to parliament 21st June, 3 Henry IV. 1402, and again 25th August, 4 Henry IV. 1404. He died 19th April, 1405, and was succeeded by his eldest son Thomas West (born in 1391), who married (in 1406 when he was only fifteen) Ida, daughter and coheir of Almaric Baron St. Amand; but, dying in France in September 1415, s.p. (aged twenty-four), he was succeeded by his brother Reginald West, who was summoned to parliament in July 1427, as "Baron de la Warre" in right of his mother Joanna, and the barony of West became merged in that of De la Warre, or, as it is now written, Delawarr. As to the manor of Mamecestre, a release having been executed by Nicholas Griffin of all his right and claim to it, in favour of Sir Reginald West,—the latter, in 8 Henry VI. (1430) directed a letter of attorney to Sir Edmund Trafford and others, to take seisin of the manor for him. Neither Sir Thomas West, who married Joan la Warre, nor his son Thomas, who married Ida St. Amand, enjoyed the barony of Mamecestre. Thomas la Warre, the last male of his race, twelfth lord of Mamecestre, survived them both, and when he died in 1426 or 1427, the barony of la Warre and that of Mamecestre devolved as remainder on his half-sister's second son, Sir Reginald West, who thus became thirteenth lord of Mamecestre.

XIII. — Sir Reginald West was born in 1394, and was about thirty-two years of age when he became the first lord of Mamecestre of his family. On the 5th January 1428, —

By letter of attorney, he appointed Sir Edmund Trafford knight, William Chaunterell and Thomas Overton of Swynesheved [co. Linc.] his attorneys, to receive seisin for him of and in the manor of Mamecestre, with all and singular appurtenances; also of and in the advowson and patronage of the College of the Blessed Mary of Mamecestre aforesaid. And also of and in all other lands and tenements, rents, services and reversion, whatsoever, to be held of us, with their appurtenances, in the vill and hamlets of Mamecestre, Gorton and Horewich in the said co. Lanc. And also of and in the rent and service of Robert de Both and his heirs for divers lands and tenements which he holds of us in Mamecestre and Gorton, together with the reversion of the aforesaid lands and tenements, when it shall happen, except all and singular the lands and tenements, rent and service, with their appurtenances [held] by William Thirnyng knight, John de Meeres, John de la Launde, Roger Welby, Nicholas Motte, late parson of the church of Swynesheved; Thomas Barnaby, late parson of the church of Rothewell; Simon Laffenham, William Auncell, John Overton, Thomas Bishop of Durham, John Henege, Richard Lumbard, late parson of the church of Holtham; and Richard Fryth, — feoffees of Thomas, late Lord la Warre, &c. Also excepting all lands and tenements, rent and service, in the hamlet of Curmeshale [Crumpsall] within the town of Mamecestre aforesaid, which to the aforesaid William Thirnyng, &c., by the said Thomas, late Lord la Warre and his legitimate heir, were lately given and granted. To remain thenceforward in the aforementioned bishop, by the name of Thomas Longeley, clerk, and Henry Longley his brother, and their heirs for ever, according to the force, form and essence of the same tripartite indented charter, conveyed to me the said Reginald la Warre and my legitimate heir by the said bishop, Henege, Lumbard and Fryth. Given at Mamecestre 5th day of January, in the 6 Henry VI. 1428. — (Mosley Muniments at Rolleston.)

In 8 Henry VI. (1429-30) the king confirmed to John la Warre, kinsman and heir of William Chauntermerle, one fair at the vill of Dulwood, co. Derby. — (Cal. Rot. Pat. p. 275.)

On Mayday 1430, Sir Reginald, by indented deed or charter, gave, granted and confirmed to William Chaunterell,⁸ sergeant-at-law, and Master John Huntyngdon, clerk,⁹ the whole of his park of Blakeley, and all his lands, woods and tenements called Blakeley-feldes, with all woods and underwoods in the said park, lands and tenements growing and being, to them and their heirs and assigns for ever. Paying to Reginald and his heirs yearly for the first twenty years 39 marks, 6s. 8d. [39½ marks, or 26l. 6s. 8d.] Afterwards 50 marks yearly [33l. 6s. 8d.] There are covenants providing for contingencies, as if during the first twenty years, or afterwards, the said park should be seized into the hands of the king, &c. Witnesses John de Stanley, John le Botiller, Roger de Longeford, Thomas de Assheton, knights; Thomas de Stanley, Gilbert de Radclyf, Esquires; and others. Given on Monday before the Feast of the Invention of the Holy Cross, in the 8 Henry VI. [Monday, May 1, 1430]. — (Mosley Muniments at Rolleston.)

Sir Reginald West died on the 27th August 1451 (29 Henry VI.), aged about fifty-seven years. He had made one pilgrimage to Rome, and one, if not two, to the Holy Land. He left his son and heir Richard to succeed him at the age of nineteen.

⁸ This name is variously spelled. Chaunterell may mean a little songster; but the French compound Chante-merle — sing or song thrush — appears to be its original form.

⁹ The first warden of the church, which had then been collegiated eight or nine years.

XIV. — Sir Richard West was an active partizan of the house of Lancaster, in the Wars of the Roses, and was in the Tower of London when it sustained a siege by the Yorkists. In consideration of "his singular services," he had, in 38 Henry VI. (1460) a grant of 40*l.* per annum during life, payable out of the issues of the manor of Old Wotton, co. Wilts, — part of the possessions of Richard Duke of York, then attainted. When the White Rose of York flourished, Sir Richard resolved to quit England, and in 3 Edward IV. (1463) he obtained a grant, authorising him to go beyond the seas, with twelve servants and as many horses, not exceeding the value of 40*s.* each, and there to continue. He was, however, summoned to parliament from 38 Henry VI. to 12 Edward IV. inclusive (1460-1473). He was twice married, but appears to have left issue only by his first wife, Catherine, daughter of Robert Lord Hungerford, — viz. five sons and two daughters. — (Collins.) There is a strange discrepancy as to the date of his death. In Sir Harris Nicolas's Synopsis of the Peerage he is said to have been summoned to parliament as late as the 16th January 1497; though (as Sir Harris remarks) he is stated on the authority of an Escheat to have died twenty-one years before, viz. 10th March, 16 Edward IV. 1476. — (Esc. 16 Edward IV. No. 62.) The latter, which Collins adopts in his Peerage, is more probably the fact, and the writ of summons to parliament might have been continued by inadvertency to Richard, when it ought to have been altered to Thomas. Similar and even more perplexing discrepancies arise as to the age of his son Thomas, the dates of his two marriages, and the death of his first wife.

It was in the lifetime of Thomas West, Lord la Warre, fifteenth Baron of Manchester and son of Sir Richard (and also during the life of Sir Richard himself), that a complete Rental was made of his possessions in the manor of Mamecestre, &c., on the 15th May 1473. This important and interesting document will receive due notice in the following chapter.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE RENTAL OF THE MANOR, &c.
IN MAY 1473.

THE difficulty already referred to, in connection with the death of Richard West, Lord la Warre and fourteenth Baron of Mamecestre, increases in connection with this document. It is entitled in the heading "Rental of Thomas West, lord of Mamecestre, son and heir of Lord la Warre, and Ellinor his consort:" and it is "made at Mamecestre, May 1, 13 Edward IV.," which is in the year 1473. Yet in that year his father Richard appears to have been living and [?] baron of Mamecestre, and, at the earliest, died in March 1476,—nearly three years after this Rental. Then, in Collins's Genealogical Account of the Wests, Lords Delawar (vol. v. p. 22, ed. of 1756), we are told that Thomas was only eighteen years old and in France in 1474, and that he obtained special livery of his lands, though still under age, on the 1st September 1475,—more than two years after the date of this Rental. "Ellinor his consort" only increases the difficulty; for he was twice married, first to an Elizabeth, by whom he had four sons and two daughters, and second to an Eleanor, by whom he had three sons. How can the second wife be reconciled with his being only seventeen years of age at the date of this Rental? Again, by his will of October 1524, it appears that his first wife Elizabeth had been buried in the church of the Whitefriars, London, on St. Peter's Day, twenty-three years before—i.e. June 29, 1501; so that he could not have married Eleanor before the year 1502, and yet the name appears as "his consort" in this Rental of 1473. An assumption that for the 13th we ought to read the 23rd Edward IV. (1507-8) might remove all these difficulties; but, having stated them, we are compelled to leave the matter as we find it.

We have been favoured by the Rev. G. J. Piccope, M.A., of Brindle, Chorley, with the loan, for the purposes of this work, of what appears to be the original Rent Roll,—a long, narrow parchment, 6 feet 8 inches (three skins) in length, and about 6 inches in width. The whole of the recto side is covered with writing, which also extends about half way down the dorso (about 2 feet 7 inches); so that the length of the written portion is upwards of 9 feet in length. The entries are written on ink-ruled lines, with a margin at the beginnings of the lines for the names of places, by way of index; while the margin at the ends of the lines is a blank column left for the amounts of the rents or payments. This parchment roll, 389 years old (1862), was for many years in the possession of its present owner's father, the late Rev. John Piccope, M.A., formerly incumbent of St. Paul's, Manchester, and afterwards rector of Farndon, near Chester.¹⁰ As this roll has never been either wholly or correctly printed, we shall put on record both the original and a translation; indicating variations from it in foot notes, as occurring in another copy, Harl. MSS. (cod. 2112 fol. 166 b. et seq.), and occasionally noticing an imperfect English version of a portion of it, in Corry's History of Lancashire (vol. ii. pp. 451-455).

[This ends the Rental as written on this Roll. At the foot in

RENTAL OF THOMAS WEST,

Lord of Mamecestre, son and heir of the Lord de Laware, and Alianor [or Eleanor] his consort; made at Mamcestre aforesaid, the first day of May, in the thirteenth year of the reign of King Edward IV. [Saturday, May 1st, 1473] before the said Lord Thomas, and others of his council, then and there being, as is specified below:—

[? SOCAGE TENANTS.]¹¹

Flixton. — Thomas Vallantine¹² holds the lordship of Flixton with appurtenances, of the Lord de Lawarre, as of his lordship of Mamecestre, in socage, and pays to the same lord yearly, at the four terms, viz. at the feast of the Nativity of the Lord, at Easter, at the Nativity of St. John Baptist, and at St. Michael [i.e. Christmas, Easter, Midsummer and Michaelmas] by equal portions, the underwritten rent, and one putary-serjeant, and suit of the court of Mamecestre 8*s.* 2*d.*¹³

Ralph Radcliffe Esq., kinsman and heir of Ralph Radcliffe knight,¹⁴ holds of the said lord the fourth part of the said lordship of Flixton by the aforesaid service, and pays yearly 20*d.*

Alexander Radcliffe de Ordishull [Ordsal] Esq.¹⁵ holds another fourth

¹⁴ These two Raphe, Knt. and Esq., were probably Sir Raphe of Smithills, and Raphe his son or grandson.

¹⁵ This Alexander was the eldest son and heir of Sir John Radclyffe of Ordshall part of the said lordship, of the said lord by the aforesaid service, and pays yearly at the aforesaid terms 20*d*.

FARNEWORTH.—John Hilton [or Hulton] de Farnworth,¹⁶ near Bolton-on-the-Moors, who took to wife Joan, late wife of Adam Lever of Great Lever, which Adam held of the said lord by the aforesaid service, two messuages which Henry Grondie (12*d*.) and Richard Halliwell (18*d*.) now hold of the said John Hilton, for the term of his wife's life, which are assigned to the same wife for her dower, after the death of the aforesaid Adam, to be paid yearly, at the four terms aforesaid 3*s*. 6*d*.

The same John Hilton [Hulton] holds the manor of Farnworth aforesaid of the said lord by the aforesaid service, and pays yearly at the said &c. 4*s*. 6*d*.

Adam Presthall holds his capital messuage with appurtenances, worth 10*l*. yearly, in the same vill, by the aforesaid service, of the said lord, paying yearly¹⁷ 6*d*.

Knt. by his first wife, daughter of Hugh Standish of Duxbury Esq. He succeeded his father about 20 Henry VI. (1442), married Agnes, one of the two daughters of Sir William Harrington of Hornby Castle Knt., and became the ancestor of the Radclyffes of Ordsall, Foxdenton, London, Hitchen, and other branches. He died in 1476, and was succeeded by his son William Radcliffe of Ordsall Esq.

There seems to be some omission or error respecting Flixton. If Vallantine held the whole of the lordship or demesne, we do not see how the two Radcliffes held each "one-fourth of Flixton." Perhaps the "dūm" in Vallantine's case should be "dim" for dimidium; so that instead of lordship, we may read "half." This would account for all the township; but then for his half Vallantine would be charged 8*s*. 2*d*., while the other half only paid 3*s*. 4*d*.

¹⁶ John Hulton, or Hilton, as the name was variously spelled and pronounced (being derived from the Anglo-Saxon Hul, a hill), was the son and heir of William Hulton of Farnworth by Margaret, daughter and heiress of Hugh Tildesley. He married before 1473 Joan, daughter of William Garnet and widow of Adam Levre, by whom he had no issue; and secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of — Pilkington, and their only child Alice married her relative Adam Hulton of Hulton Park. The license by dispensation for the marriage was dated 22nd May 1489. The post mortem inquisition on John Hulton was held in 1505-6.

¹⁷ There is a wearisome repetition in these entries — legally necessary, no doubt, in a rent-roll; but which we may avoid in this translation, referring the reader to the original, in which every entry is given at full. We therefore omit all such phrases as "holds of the said lord," "by the aforesaid service," "and pays yearly at

Richard Sedon [Seddon] one messuage and three tenements there, with appurtenances, worth five marks [3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*] yearly 6*d.*

LITTLE LEVER. — John Lever, half the manor of Little Lever, with appurtenances, by the service of the twentieth part of a knight's fee and suit of the court and one putary-serjeant..... 3*s.* 4*d.*¹⁸

Richard Tempest knight, half the said manor with John Lever. 3*s.* 6*d.*

ANDERTON. — Thurstan Anderton, the manor of Anderton, with appurtenances, in Salfordshire, in socage and putary-serjeant and suit of court 9*s.* 6*d.*

BURNEHILL. — Peter Gerrarde knight, the lordship of Burnehill, with appurtenances, and the advowson of the church of that place, in socage, and putary, and suit of court 15*s.*

ANLASARGH. — Thomas Lord Standley,¹⁹ the lordship of Anlasargh with appurtenances, in socage and putary, and suit of court 3*d.*

SHARPLUS. — Richard Sharplus of Sharplus, near Bolton-on-the-Moors, one messuage and six tenements with appurtenances there, worth yearly 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*,²⁰ in socage, with putary-serjeant and suit of court 18*d.*

Robert Sharplus, of the same place, one messuage there with appurtenances, worth yearly 40*s.*, same service 10*d.*

Richard Holland of Denton, three tenements with appurtenances in Sharplus, worth yearly ten marks [6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*]..... 10*s.*

SUNDERLAND. — William Heaton, the manor of Sunderland, by the said service..... 12*d.*

the four terms, or the aforesaid terms," — all which may be reasonably inferred by the reader.

¹⁸ H. and C. both make this rent 3*s.* 6*d.*, and that of Sir Richard Tempest the same.

MELLER. — Charles Brereworth,²¹ one tenement with appurtenances, in Meller in Blackburnshire, by the same service 6*d*.

Total..... 2*l*. 1*9s*. 8*d*.

[? KNIGHTS' FEES.]²²

CHILDWALL. — Thomas Lord Standley, the lordship of Childwall, for half of one knight's fee,²³ paying for sakfee 4*s*. 6*d*. and for castleward 5*s*.

DALTON AND PARBOLD. — Robert Lathom and the Prior of Brus-coghe [Burscough], the lordship of Dalton and Parbald, for the half of one knight's fee;²⁴ sakfee 3*s*. and castleward 5*s*.

WORTHINGTON. — Hugh Wortington, the lordship of Wortington, for the half of one knight's fee and putary-serjeant, paying [sakfee] 3*s*. 8*d*. and for castleward 5*s*.

WRIGHTINGTON. — Richard Kirkebie and others, the lordship of Wrightington, for half a knight's fee²⁵ and puture; rent 3*s*. and castleward 5*s*.

TURTON. — William Orrell, the lordship of Turton, for the eighth part of a knight's fee and puture; rent 18*d*. and castleward 18*d*.

HARWODE. — Christopher Sotheworth,²⁶ half the lordship of Harwode, for the sixteenth part of one knight's fee and suit of court; rent 4½*d*. and for castleward 4½*d*.

John Trafford Knt.,²⁷ the other half of the same lordship, by the same service and suit of court; rent 4½*d*. and for castleward 4½*d*.²⁸

²¹ H. has Brereton; C. Brereworth. Meller is four miles north-west from Blackburn.

²² This class of tenancies corresponds with that in the survey of 1320 under the title "Knights' Fees," and it will be seen that the fees follow in the same order in both documents, at an interval of 153 years. — (See p. 337 ante.)

²³ C. has "the moiety of the eighth part of a knight's fee," i.e. one-sixteenth.

²⁴ H. "the half of the eighth of two knights' fees;" C. "half of two-eighths of a knight's fee."

²⁵ C. "for a knight's fee."

²⁶ This Christopher Southworth was knighted in March or April 1483. He married Isabel, daughter and coheirress of John Dutton, and died in 1502-3, leaving to succeed him Sir John Southworth, knt.

²⁷ This Sir John Trafford was knighted about 1444, and succeeded his father, Sir

BRADSHAW. — Elias Bradshaw, the vill of Bradshaw, for the fourth part of one knight's fee²⁹ and suit of court; rent 9*d.* and castleward 9*d.*

HALLIWALL. — Robert Hilton [Hulton], the lordship of Halliwall, for the tenth part of one knight's fee and puture; rent 8*d.* and castleward 8*d.*

BROCKHALL. — The wife of Nicholas Singleton, the lordship of Brockhall [Brockholes], near Ribble, for the thirteenth part of one knight's fee³⁰ and puture; rent 8*d.* and castleward 9*d.*

HEATON-UNDER-THE-FOREST. — William Heaton, the manor of Heaton-under-the-Forest, for the tenth part of one knight's fee³¹ and puture; rent 8*d.* and castleward 12*d.*

LOSTOCKE. — John Atherton of Atherton Esq., the lordship of Lostocke, for the third part of one knight's fee and puture, and suit of the court of Mancestre 11*d.*

Ralph Radcliffe, parcel of the same lordship, by the same service, with the said John 7*d.* [Together they pay] castleward 14*d.*³²

RUMWORTHE. — John Hilton [Hulton] Esq., the lordship of Rumworthe with appurtenances, by the same service; rent 3*s.* and castleward 2*s.* 4*d.*

WESTHAGHTON [Westhoughton]. — The Abbot of Cokersande, the lordship of Westhaghton [Westhoughton] with appurtenances, for the fortieth part of one knight's fee and puture; rent 2*d.* and castleward 3*d.*³³

Edmund Trafford in 1457. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas Ashton, of Ashton-under-Lyne, knt., resigned his estate to his son Edmund in 1484, and died in 1488.

²⁹ (Page 495.) The Harl. MS. has an entry here: — "On the first rolle shewed before us att Bolton, 2 of Majj 1662. Jo: Langley, Hen: Aswort; Commiss'rs." — This shows that the Harl. MS. copy was not made from the roll furnishing our text; for so far from the preceding entry of John Trafford Knt. finishing the roll, it does not even close the first skin of parchment; there being three other entries below it on that skin.

³⁰ C. "the tenth part of a knight's fee." An error caused by copying a part of the entry as to Bradshaw and the latter part of the entry as to Halliwall, of which the former part is wholly omitted.

³¹ H. "the fourteenth part." C. "the thirteenth part."

³² H. "the eighth part."

³³ H. gives the 1*s.* 2*d.* castleward as wholly paid by John Atherton.

³⁴ C. rent 2½*d.* and castleward 2½*d.*

ASMAIL [ASPULL]. — Robert Hindley, one messuage and divers tenements with appurtenances in Asmail [Aspull],³⁴ worth yearly twenty marks [13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*], for the eighth part of one knight's fee; rent 2½*d.* and castleward 2½*d.*

Henry Bradshawe of the same place, one messuage with appurtenances there, worth yearly ten marks [6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*], with the said Robert Hindley for half the service;³⁵ rent 2*d.*, castleward 2*d.*

Thomas Gerrarde, the lordship of Aspmoll [? Aspull] with appurtenances, by the same service with the said Robert Hindley; rent 8*d.* and castleward 8*d.*³⁶

Robert Law,³⁷ one messuage there with appurtenances, worth yearly five marks [3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*], by the same service with the said Robert Hindley; rent 3*d.* and castleward 3*d.*

Thomas Lathom of Knowsley, one messuage with appurtenances in Asmoll [Aspull] in right of his wife, late daughter and heir of Henry Atherton of Prescott,³⁸ by the same service 3*d.* and for castleward 3*d.*

MIDDELSWOOD IN HULTON. — Rodger Hilton [Hulton] the manor of Middelswood in Hilton, for the twentieth part of one knight's fee and puture; rent 4*d.*, castleward 7*d.*³⁹

PILKINGTON. — Thomas Pilkington Esq. the lordship of Pilkington for the fourth part of one knight's fee and puture; rent 2*s.* 8*d.* and castleward 2*s.* 4*d.*⁴⁰ aggregates of the parts of knights' fees, as stated in the Survey of 1320, the Extent of 1322, and the Rental of 1473, we find differences that cannot be explained. Reducing the amounts to decimals, they stand thus: In 1320, "5½ knights' fees;" the portions enumerated only add up to 4·8094 fees. In 1322, "4½ knights' fees, one-fourth of a fee and one-fortieth of a fee," only amount, as the total of the various parcels, to 4·775, or less than in 1320 by 0·344 of a fee. In comparing the items, Sharples, taken at 1·24th of a fee in 1320, is altogether omitted in 1322; but this (decimally 0·416) if added, would exceed the total of 1320 by ·0072. In 1473 there are some subdivisions of portions of knights' fees, as in Bradshaw and Harwood; while other places appear to have changed from knight-service to an inferior tenure, as Barton, then held in socage, and Sharples, held in socage and putary-serjeant. On the whole, however, the difference in the 153 years from 1320 to 1473, viz. rather more than half a fee (decimally 0·5416) is less than might be expected.

⁴³ H. 6*s.* 6*d.*

⁴⁴ H. demesne of Hulme. C. does not call it either manor or demesne. The following places are recorded in the old Court-Leet Books of the Manor, as doing suit and service at the Court Baron and Court-Leet of the Manor, at the Michaelmas or October court in 1651:—Ardwick Higher and Lower, Ashton-under-Lyne, Aspall, Bradford, Droylsden, Failsworth, Flixton, Gorton, Halliwell, Heaton (near Halliwell), Heaton Norris, Harwood, Hulton, Lostock, Moston, Openshaw, Pilkington, Prestwich, Rumworth, Stretford, Turton, Westhoughton and Wroughtington. In all twenty-three townships.—The following thirty-one townships did suit and service at the Manchester Court-Leet in 1687:—Ardwick Higher and Lower, Ashton-under-Lyne, Aspall, Blakeley, Bradford, Bradshaw, Crumpsall, Coppull, Dalton, Droylsden, Failsworth, Flixton, Gorton, Halliwell, Harwood, Heaton (near Halliwell), Heaton Norris, Horwich, Hulton, Lostock, Moston, Openshaw, Pilkington, Prestwich, Rumworth, Stretford, Turton, Westhoughton, Withington, Wroughtington and Wroughtington. [The townships of Salford, Pendleton, Broughton, Cheetham, Audenshaw, Chorlton-on-Medlock, Hulme, are not named; perhaps some were included in the demesne.]

⁴⁵ These holdings correspond with those in the Survey of 1320, under the title of CLAYDEN. — Richard Clayden, the manor of Clayden, by the same service, in socage 5*s*.

ANTECOTES. — John Biron Esq., the half of two messuages, and two and a half oxgangs of land in Antecotes near Manchester,⁴⁶ and grinds his grain at the mill of Mancestre; by the same service and in socage 3*s*. 4*d*.

CHORLETON. — Henry Trafford, son and heir of Thomas Trafford, divers messuages⁴⁷ with appurtenances in Chorleton, by the same service, socage, and grinds (as above) 6*s*.⁴⁸

Bartin Trafford,⁴⁹ other messuages there⁵⁰ by the same service, and grinds his grain at the said mill 3*s*. 4*d*.

GATECOTE FIELD. — The same Henry Trafford, one close called Gate-cote-field,⁵¹ by the same service 2*s*.

GLINFIELDE [? CLAYDEN FIELD] AND DOGFIELDE, MANCHESTER. — The same Henry two other closes called Glin-fielde [? Clayden Field] and Dog-fielde,⁵² in Mancestre, by the same service 4*s*.

ASSHEBIE [OR. ASHLEY].⁵³ Geoffrey Hulme, one close of land, called Asshebie [? Ashley] in Manchester, containing by estimation six acres of land, by the same service 10*d*.⁵⁴

MYLWARDECROFTE. — The same Geoffrey one close of land called Myl-warde-crofte, containing by estimation twenty acres of land, by the same service 5*s*.

John Rudd, one close of land, containing by estimation two acres of land 4*d*.

CHORLETON. — Elias Entwisle one messuage with appurtenances in Chorleton, by the same service 3*s*. 4*d*.

"Free Tenants near Manchester." (See p. 307 ante.) In the interval of a century and a half the tenants seem to have been reduced from freeholders to socagers.

⁴⁶ C. a moiety of Ancotes.

⁴⁷ H. the half of two messuages.

⁴⁸ H. 3*s*. 4*d*.

⁴⁹ H. Bartrin Trafford. C. Bertrand de Bamford.

⁵⁰ H. the other half of the two aforesaid messuages.

⁵¹ The Survey of 1320 calls this Gate-cote-field.

⁵² H. Gling-feld and Doge-feld. C. does not name any of the three closes, but merely says "other closes." The Survey of 1320 gives the correct names, Claiden-felde and Dogge-felde.

⁵³ This is Asse-leie in the Survey of 1320.

⁵⁴ H. a yearly rent of a penny.

THE FORTY ACRES, IN RISSUM [RUSHOLME]. — Barten de Bamford, one messuage called "The Forty Acres," with appurtenances, in Rissum⁵⁵ [Rusholme] by the same service 12*d*.⁵⁶

ASHTON AND MOSTON. — John Assheton knight [chr.], the manor of Aysshton and another, Moston [or High Moston; "alt' Moston"] with the advowson of the church of Ashton, by the same service, socage.. 1*d*.

CRONESHALL [CRUMPSALL]. — James Radcliffe Esq., the lordship of Croneshall⁵⁷ [Crumpsall] by the same service..... 10*s*.

CLAYTON. — John Biron Esq., the lordship of Clayton, with appurtenances, by the same service, [for one] knight's fee 7*s*.

GRENELOWE [IN GORTON]. — Thomas Whitehead, chaplain of a chantry in the church of Mamecestre, for one tenement with appurtenances in Grene-lowe, which he held freely of the said lord 20*s*.

BLAKEACRE, IN MANCESTRE. — The same Sir Thomas [Whitehead], one parcel of land in Mamecestre called Blake-acre, freely 2*s*. 4*d*.⁵⁸

HARPERHEYE. — John Hilton [Hulton] Esq. of Farneworth, one messuage near Mamecestre, called Harper-hey, by the same service, socage..... 1*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*.

⁵⁵ Corry places this entry under Chorleton, and gives it as ten acres of land there called "Ryffind."

⁵⁶ H. 2s. C. 12d.

⁵⁷ H. John Radclyffe; Cromeshall.

⁵⁸ On reference to the Survey of 1320 (p. 309 ante) it will be seen that Greenlowe, there called Grend-lawe, in Gorton, and Blake acre or acres, in Manchester, were then (as 153 years afterwards) held by a chaplain, as lands of the Chantry of the Blessed Mary in Manchester, at precisely the same rent to the lord of the manor, viz. 1*l*. 2*s*. 4*d*., of which the 2*s*. 4*d*. was for Blake-acres.

⁵⁹ H. William Hulton of Farneworth.

⁶⁰ H. Esterley. All the entries between the second Chorleton and Estley are omitted by Corry, who calls this place Esteley.

LE FORIS, IN MANCESTRE. — George Mancestre, a messuage with appurtenances in Mancestre, called "Le Foris" [? The Markets or the Courts], by the same service 3*s*.

GODDYRISWIKE. — John Hilton [Hulton] of Farneworthe, one messuage with appurtenances, called Goddyris-wike there⁶¹ 12*d*.

MANCESTRE. — John Harrison, one messuage and eight acres of land with appurtenances, free, in Mancestre, by the same service ... 5*s*. 8*d*.

Total 6*l*. 3*s*. 11*d*.

Edward Hulme, six messuages with appurtenances, in Hor-wiche aforesaid, called "Oken-ley," for a term of years 10*l*. 4*s*. 2*d*.

⁶¹ Goddyris-wike is called in the Survey of 1320 Gotherse-wike. The same rent of 12*d*. was paid at an interval of a century and a half.

⁶³ H. calls these places Blakeley, Blakeley Fields, and Pillingsworth Fields.

⁶⁴ H. lately at 28*s*. yearly.

⁶⁵ H. 8*l*. 12*s*. 8*d*.

⁶⁶ H. Grynehaugh. C. Greenhaugh.

William Heaton, three messuages with appurtenances in Hor-wiche, called "Rydd-ley-Wood," by the same service 1*l.*⁶⁷

Total [of Horwiche]. 23*l.* 14. 2*d.*

RIDDINGEBRUK. — John Mulnegate, one close of land called Riddinge-bruke,⁷³ there, at will 1*s.* 8*d.*

John Rudd, one tenement near the mill there 1*s.* 6*d.*

⁶⁷ C. again copies the first part of Edward Hulme's entry, and tags to it the second part of Heaton's, so as to make Hulme's six messuages &c. be called Ridleywood instead of Okenley, and his rent 1*l.* instead of 10*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* William Heaton's name is thus omitted.

⁶⁸ H. Sir Nicholas Reynold. C. Master Nicholas Ramald. The same with Sir or Master Nicholas Reveald, stated in the list of burgage tenants to be a chaplain.

⁶⁹ H. has Nether Alte-port, and gives the rent as 2*l.* 13*s.*

Total 6l. 1s. 10d.

MARKET TOLLS OF MANCESTRE. — John Foxe, the tolls of the [? fairs] and markets of Mancestre, late at eight marks [5l. 6s. 8d.] yearly, and now demised [? d̄i d̄r] to the same John, for the term of four years next coming, for 20l. by Edward Trafford Esq., for 3l. 6s. 8d. yearly 3l. 6s. 8d.⁸⁰

⁷⁴ H. Le Galese. ⁷⁵ H. Henfield. ⁷⁶ H. Hole-Crofte. ⁷⁷ H. Corohouse.
⁷⁸ H. 8d. ⁷⁹ H. Thomas Farrall; 8s.

⁸⁰ H. has here the title or heading "At the Will of the Lord, 1473." All the entries in the text between Nether Aldport and the tolls of the market and fair, are omitted by Corry. The latter he states thus:—"The tolls of the fairs of Manchester were held by John Hayheld, as sub-tenant to Edward Trafford Esq., who held them from the lord at 3l. 6s. 8d. annual rent." With this closes the very imperfect and defective abridgment or abstract of the Rental of 1473 given by Corry, in his History of Lancashire, vol. ii. pp. 449-455.

THE CORN-MILL. — Richard Hill, the grain mill there, which lately was wont to be rented at 10*l.* yearly, but now pays..... 6*l.*

RENTS OF BURGAGES [&c. IN MAMECESTRE].⁸⁹

A SHOP ON THE WASTE. — John Trafford knight [chr.], one parcel

⁸¹ H. Geoffrey Needham. ⁸² H. Hakanson. ⁸³ H. Basingley. ⁸⁴ H. John Olden. ⁸⁵ H. Thomas Master. ⁸⁶ John Bradford. ⁸⁷ H. yearly 6*d.*

⁸⁸ H. omits this entry. The word we have rendered singeing-house is in the original "ostrina," literally purple, from ostrea an oyster. But it seems to be an error for ustrina (from uro), a burning or conflagration (Apuleius); a place in which anything, and especially a dead body, has been burned (Festus); or a melting-house for metal (Pliny). But besides these meanings of classic times, the word had other mediæval significations; one of which is, a place where hogs are singed — "ubi porci ustulantur." (See Ducange, in voce.) This seems to be the most probable meaning of ostrina in the text.

⁸⁹ Here H. has the title "Rents of Burgages, 1473." By a record of award of 1461, of a jury of three knights, five esquires, and five gentlemen, it is declared — "That every burgess within the town of Mamecestre have and of right ought to have

DALTON AND PERBALD.

The Prior of Burscoghe 6d.; William Orrell jun. 12d.;¹⁰ Richard Bradshawe of Letherland 12d.; William Arowesmithe of Warrington 6d.; Lord Lovell 6d.;¹¹ Dalton 6d.; Edward de Lathom 4s. He holds an oxgang of land in Dalton and Parbold, for homage and fealty, as for half a knight's fee; which was late the said Robert Holland's, and he pays yearly at [the four terms] for sak 3s., and for castleward of Lancaster at the Nativity of St. John Baptist, and putary-serjeant. 8s.¹²

As with the Survey and the Extent of 1320 and 1322, we present a tabulated account of this Rental of 1473:—

	£	s.	d.
Flixton , Thomas Vallantine (? $\frac{1}{2}$) lordship	0	8	2
— Ralph Radcliffe Esq., $\frac{1}{4}$ ditto	0	1	8
— Alexander Radcliffe of Ordsal Esq., $\frac{1}{4}$ ditto	0	1	8

¹⁰ H. 6d.

¹¹ This was Francis Lovel, at the time of this Rental ninth Baron Lovel of Tichmarsh (by tenure). He was created Viscount Lovel 4th January 1483. He was slain in 1487, and being attainted, all his honours (viz. the baronies of Lovel, Holland, Deincourt and Grey of Rotherfield) became forfeited. He seems to have derived these lands in Dalton and Parbold from the Hollands; his ancestor John Lovel, fifth Baron Lovel, having married Maud, daughter or grand-daughter and heir of Robert Baron Holland. — (Nicolas's Synopsis, vol. i. pp. 326 and 393.)

¹² After this last entry on the parchment roll, there is the following endorsement or entry on the copy in the Harl. MS.:—

“(The last Roll:)

“Manchester: Examined with the ancient Rental of the lord of Manchester, and with which this Roll agreeth, the 12th day of September in the 19th year of the reign of King James, and the year of our Lord 1621. By us, whose names are subscribed—

(Signed)

Henry Walmesley.

George Peele.”

This is forty-one years prior to the certificate of the commissioners at Bolton, as to the first Roll, in this same Harl. MS., and the persons subscribing are different. See note 28, p. 496 ante.

Such is the account which the Roll itself presents, as to totals; which as usual differ from those which the addition of all the separate items would present. From the various items of burgage rent paid, at the rate of 1*s.* for a whole burgage and 6*d.* for half a burgage, there would seem to have been about 150 burgages in Mamecestre in 1473.¹³

In the MS. volume (Harl. MS. Cod. 2085, fol. 525), which contains a copy of the Extent of 1322, there are some fragments of an account or Survey of the manor of Manchester, which are stated to be "in a loose paper, torne." They do not appear to belong to the Extent of 1322, though they immediately follow that account, but to some later Survey. They relate to the value of that Richard's post mortem inquisition should be held twenty years after his death. If from the date of this inquisition we assume the death of Richard to have occurred circa 1500, we find that his son Thomas would be born about 1477, and not 1457, as stated by Collins. But Collins makes the father die in March 1476, which would be nineteen years before the son was born! On the other hand Burke gives the date of the father's death as 1497; according to which Thomas was born in 1473, the very year in which this Rental is stated to have been made. There is a strange confusion of dates pervading every account of the lives and deaths of these Wests. Subjoined are a few notes respecting their succession, derived from Collins, in continuation of the account in the last chapter, pp. 472-475:—

XV. — Thomas West, eighth Baron de la Warre, and fifteenth lord of Mamecestre, is stated by Collins (vol. v. p. 29) to have been in his father's life time, when only in his eighteenth or nineteenth year, in the expedition into France in 14 Edward IV. (1474), on which account he received 95*l.* 11*s.* for a quarter's wages, for four men-at-arms and thirty archers, who were of his retinue. — (Rymer, vol. xi. p. 876 b.) He obtained a special livery of his lands 1st September 1475, though then a minor. — (Pat. 16 Edward IV. p. 2, m. 6.) He was in great favour with Henry VII., whom he aided in obtaining the crown, and who in 1485-6 gave him a large grant of castles, baronies, honours, lordships, boroughs and towns in Sussex, &c., which had fallen to the crown by the attainder of John Howard, Duke of Norfolk (Shakspeare's "Jockey of Norfolk") slain in the battle of Bosworth Field. — (Pat. 1 Henry VII. p. 4.) In 1489-90 he was made K.B. at the creation of Arthur Prince of Wales; and in 7 Henry VII. (1491-2) was one of the chief commanders of the army then sent into Flanders in aid of the Emperor Maximilian against the French. In 12 Henry VII. (1496-7) he had a chief command of the forces raised for repressing the rebellion in Cornwall. In 2 Henry VIII. for his great services he was elected K.G. with the King of Portugal, and installed at Windsor 11th May 1510. He attended

Henry VIII. in his expedition to Therouenne and Tournay, and was at the battle fought 16th August 1513 between the English (allied with the troops of the Emperor Maximilian) and the French, named "the Battle of the Spurs;" and for his valour there was made a knight banneret. He attended the Princess Mary, sister of Henry VIII., at her marriage with Louis XII. of France in 1514, at Abbeville; having in his retinue thirty horsemen, well accoutred, and 26s. 8d. [two marks] per day was allowed him by the king to defray his expenses. He conducted the Emperor Charles V. from Gravelines into England in May 1522. By his will, dated 8th October 1524 (16 Henry VIII.) he made Eleanor his wife sole executrix, and settled most of his estates on his eldest son and heir apparent, Sir Thomas West and his heirs male; in default to Owen West, his son (by his second wife) and his heirs male; remainder to George and Leonard West, his sons, and their heirs male. He bequeathed to his daughters, Mary, Catherine and Barbara, to and for their marriages 500 marks [333*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*] each. It appears also by his will that "Dame Elizabeth, his first wife, was buried in the church of the Whitefriars in London, on St. Peter's day, and that twenty-three years were since expired from the date of the will." He was twice married; first to Elizabeth, daughter of Hugh, and sister and heir of Sir John, Mortimer of Mortimer's Hall co. Southampton; and secondly to Eleanor, daughter of Sir Roger Copley of Gatton, co. Surrey, knight. He died probably in January 1525-6, as the probate of his will is dated 12th February 1525-6. By the inquisition p. m. 17 Henry VIII. (1526) it was found that Thomas West knight held the manor of Mamecestre, the advowson of the church &c. of the king, as of his Duchy of Lancaster, by knight's service; and that Thomas West, his brother [son] and heir, was of the age of thirty years. He was succeeded by his eldest son, XVI. Thomas, ninth Baron de la Warre and sixteenth Baron of Mamecestre. He died 25th September 1554, leaving no issue, and by an inquisition June 6 (1 and 2 Philip and Mary) 1555, it was found that he died seised (inter alia) of the manor of Mamecestre and the advowson of the church. In 35 Henry VIII. (1543-4) this Sir Thomas executed a deed of entail of the manor of Manchester, with its appurtenances, to himself for life; remainder (in default of issue male) to his [half] brother, Sir Owen West knight and his issue male; remainder to the heirs male of Leonard West Esq. his [youngest] brother, remainder to the right heirs of Sir Thomas West, late Lord la Warre, his father. — (Corry's Lancashire, vol. ii. p. 457.) He seems to have had the purpose and object of this deed, legalised and authorised by legislative enactment. By act of parliament of 4th November (3 Edward VI.) 1552, the manor of Manchester and advowson of the church, with various other estates, were settled upon himself in tail, with remainder in default of male issue to his half brother Sir Owen West, and his issue male; remainder in default thereof to the heirs male of his late brother Sir George West; remainder to the heirs male of Leonard West Esq., his brother; remainder to the right heirs of Sir Thomas West, late Lord la Warre his father. Under these circumstances, the next baron (not by writ but by patent) was

XVII. William West (seventeenth Baron of Mamecestre), son and heir of Sir George West, second son of Thomas eighth Baron de la Warre, and half brother of Thomas the last baron. This William, having attempted to poison his half-uncle Thomas, was by an act of 2 Edward VI. (1548) disabled from succeeding in honours and estate. But he was created Baron de la Warre by patent 5th February 1570, and was restored in blood. He died on the 30th December 1595; and was succeeded by

XVIII. Sir Thomas West knight, his son and heir, then aged forty, eighteenth Baron of Mamecestre, who was restored to the precedence of the old barony of La Warre. He was the last of the Wests connected with Manchester; for on the 15th May (21 Elizabeth) 1579,¹⁴ by indenture he and his son and heir apparent

¹⁴ It seems strange that Sir Thomas West should be Lord of Mamecestre, and dispose of that manor and lordship in May 1579, more than sixteen years before the death of his father. It may be that in some partition of the estates of the Wests, William West, in consideration of the sum of 3,000*l.*, did grant, bargain and sell to John Lacy, citizen and cloth-worker of London, and to his heirs and assigns for ever, "all the Manor, Lordship and Seignory of Manchester in the county of Lancaster, with its appurtenances, with all and all manner of Court Leets, Views of Frank Pledge, and all fines [? fairs], markets, tolls, liberties, customs, privileges, free warren, jurisdiction, &c., to the same manor belonging." It appears that John Lacy had lent to Sir William West and his son 3,000*l.*, for which they gave as security the deed just cited, which contained a condition of redemption upon the repayment of the sum by a day named. The Wests failed to fulfil this condition, and Lacy, by a deed of 16 July, 22 Elizabeth (1580), appointed Christopher Anderton, gentleman, and Nicholas Mosley, citizen and cloth-worker of London (his own intimate friend), his attorneys, to take possession of the manor, which they did on the 6th August 1580. But there was some delay on the part of the Wests; for it was not till the 16th July 23 Elizabeth (1581) that Sir William West, Lord la Warre, directed his letter of attorney to Nicholas Mosley and Lawrence Trafford to grant livery of seisin to John Lacy; and 7th August 1581 a recovery was suffered and a fine levied by Sir William West to John Lacy. Notwithstanding these proceedings, it appears by the Court Leet Books that Sir William West was still styled Lord of the Manor, and that John Lacy was not therein recognised as Lord of the Manor, till the Easter Court, 19th April 1582.

On the 23rd March 38 Elizabeth, 1596, John Lacy Esq. sold to his friend Nicholas Mosley Esq., citizen and alderman of London, and to Rowland Mosley, his son and heir apparent, and to their Lords la Warre, the father should have been content to enjoy the barony and estates of La Warre, and have conveyed to his son the lordship and manor of Mamecestre. This supposition might also account for the Rental of 1473 being taken as of Thomas West, "Lord of Mamecestre" in the lifetime of Richard West his father, Lord la Warre. Indeed, in his complaint in the Chancery of the Duchy of Lancaster in 17 Henry VII. (1501-2) he states that the manor of Mamecestre and the hamlets its members "had been settled on him and Alianor his late wife," and their heirs male, in fee tail, &c.

heirs and assigns, all the said Manor, Lordship and Seignory of Manchester, with all its appurtenances, as aforesaid, for the sum of 3,500*l*.¹⁵ For about two centuries and a half the manor was held by the Mosleys, and a brief enumeration of the successive Lords of the Manor of that family, may fitly close this sketch of its documentary history.

THE MOSLEYS,¹⁶ LORDS OF THE MANOR.

1. Sir Nicholas Moseley knight, second son of Edward Moseley of Hough End, Didsbury, gentleman, was Lord Mayor of London in 1599, three years after his purchase of the manor, and was knighted by Queen Elizabeth during his mayoralty. He rebuilt Hough End on the site of the old mansion, assumed for his motto, punning on the name, "Mos legem regi" (Custom or Precedent rules the Law), and thereon dropped the central e in his name, which has ever since been written Mosley. He was Sheriff of Lancashire in 1604, and lived at Hough End till his death 12th November 1612, aged eighty-five. He was succeeded by his eldest son and heir —

2. Rowland Mosley of Hough End, Esq. The chief manorial

¹⁵ It has been suggested as probable that Nicholas Mosley was the real purchaser in 1779, and that John Lacye was merely acting as his trustee. It is remarkable that in the transfer of the manor from the Wests to Lacye, Nicholas Mosley should be appointed an attorney to both parties, both to give and to take seisin and possession of the manor. But between 1579 and the sale by Lacye to Mosley in 1596, an interval elapsed of about seventeen years; or, if we date from the recognition of Lacye as lord in April 1582, still there are fourteen years during which he acted as lord of the manor. Then the sale is for 500*l*. more than he gave for it, and on the whole we are inclined to think that Lacye for at least fourteen years was the real and bond fide lord of the manor. — In an account of the Manor and Seignory of Manchester, furnished by Sir Oswald Mosley in September 1822 to Mr. J. Corry for his History of Lancashire, Sir Oswald states (vol. ii. p. 458) that "Since this period [23rd March 1596] the Manor and Seignory of Manchester, with its appurtenances, have continued in my family, and all the places named in the afore-recited Rental of Sir Thomas West are still held of the Barony or Seignory of Manchester by the respective annual payments therein mentioned; but some of them, on account of the smallness of the amount, have not been collected for some years."

¹⁶ The Moseleys derived their name from their ancient abode in the hamlet of event in his life was the termination of a law-suit, commenced during his father's life. Sir Nicholas had attempted to enclose and cultivate what he deemed his waste of Collyhurst, then a wood two miles from Manchester, in which the burgesses had by prescription the right of "pannage" or pasturing their swine; for which (according to the records of the Court Leet of October 3, 1594) 6s. 4d. was wont to be paid to the lord and 2d. to the swineherd, towards his maintenance. On Sir Nicholas proceeding to inclose Collyhurst, William Radcliffe and other principal inhabitants and burgesses commenced legal proceedings in the Duchy Court, to restrain him, and these were pending when he died. Ultimately, by an amicable decree on 21st November, 15 James 1. (1617), it was ordered that Rowland Mosley Esq., lord of the manor, and his heirs, &c., should enclose and improve the waste ground called Collyhurst, and have it free from common of pasture; and that the inhabitants of Manchester notwithstanding, at all times when any infection of the plague should happen in Manchester, should have the right and liberty to erect and build cabins, for the relief and harbouring of infected persons, upon six acres of Collyhurst aforesaid next to Manchester; and to bury the dead there. Also, that Rowland Mosley should convey and assure to William Radcliffe and others the inhabitants a yearly rent of 10l., for the use of the poor of Manchester for ever, to be issuing out of all the said Collyhurst land, payable at Lady Day and Michaelmas by equal portions, with clause of distress, &c. This rent-charge has been regularly paid to the successive borough-reeves of Manchester for the time being, and since the incorpora-

Moseley, about four miles from Wolverhampton. But a branch of the family, for more than a century before the purchase of the manor, had been connected with Manchester, living at the old house called Hough End, in the township of Didsbury. In 1465 a Jenkyn Moseley lived at the Hough End. His great grandson Oswald, in 1595, purchased the Garret Estate from Sir John Gerrard bart. Oswald's younger brothers Nicholas and Anthony were woollen manufacturers, and for the promotion of their business Nicholas went to reside in London, and became the purchaser of the manor. Queen Elizabeth gave him some oak furniture for his new house at Hough End.

tion of Manchester to the Mayor. Rowland Mosley died while High Sheriff of Lancashire in 1616; leaving (by his second wife) a son and heir, who succeeded him, — viz.

3. Sir Edward Mosley, created a baronet July 20, 1640, by Charles I., and as a royalist he suffered heavily in the civil war. His seat of Aldport Lodge was occupied by Lord Strange in the attack on Manchester in September 1642, and was burned down by the inhabitants, and never afterwards rebuilt. He is said to have lent the king 30,000*l.*; he was taken in arms by Sir William Brereton at Middlewich, in March 1643; his estates were sequestered, but restored to him in October 1647 on payment of 4,800*l.*; and he died at Hough End in 1657, in his forty-second year; and was succeeded by his son, then eighteen years old —

4. Sir Edward Mosley, the second baronet of that name; who in 1661 obtained an act of parliament, confirming a sale made to him by Sir Thomas Prestwich and others of the manor of Hulme, and certain lands in the parish of Manchester. He built some additions to Hulme Hall, which for some time afterwards was one of the principal residences of the family. In April 1665, he married Catherine, daughter of William Lord Grey of Wark, upon whom he settled his house and estate at Rolleston. His will, dated 18th October 1665, was the cause of much subsequent litigation in the family, which was ultimately terminated by an agreement or compromise. He died in the first year of his marriage, aged only twenty-seven years, without issue; and the title became extinct. His widow married Charles, son and heir of Dudley, Lord North, who resided with her at Rolleston. They had one son, who died without issue in 1734. During three years, October 1666 to October 1669, the records of the Court Leet of the Manor are wanting; but at the latter date the Court is said to be held by "the Lady Anne Mosley and Edward Mosley Esq., executors of the will of Sir Edward Mosley Bart., lately deceased." Then at the Court Leet of October 11, 1670, it is styled that of "Sir Charles North Bart. and of Catherine his wife;" Oswald Mosley Esq. being then steward. These entries show that litigation was pending; for by the will of Sir Edward (No. 4) the manor was bequeathed to his nephew Edward (No. 5), who nominally succeeded in 1665, but who did not really hold the manor till about 1672.

5. Sir Edward Mosley of Hulme knight was the second son of Oswald, who was the eldest son of Anthony of Ancoats, the younger brother of Sir Nicholas, the purchaser of the manor. This Sir Edward was a barrister, a commissioner for the administration of justice in Scotland, and afterwards a judge in Ireland. By the family compromise the manor of Manchester was to be left to him and his heirs by the will of his uncle Edward, subject to a life interest in favour of his daughter Ann (afterwards wife of Sir John Bland), in case he should die without male issue; whilst the rest of the property—including Hulme Hall and manor, Hough End Hall, and all the lands in Didsbury, Withington, Heaton Norris and Chorlton—were still to remain at the free disposal of Edward Mosley Esq., who was then residing at Hulme Hall. All his sons died; only one daughter survived, Ann, who married in March 1685 Sir John Bland, then a minor, who died in October 1715. Edward Mosley, her father, was knighted 4th June 1689, and died four years afterwards (1693) in his seventy-seventh year. He was succeeded by his sole daughter and heiress—

6. Ann, Lady Bland, who having only a life interest in the manor, it did not descend to her son Sir John Bland. After the death of her parents and husband, she resided at Hulme Hall; and in her later years entrusted the chief management of the manor and Manchester estates to Sir Oswald Mosley Bart., her second cousin; who, under the will of her father, and by the family arrangement, succeeded to that portion of her property after her death. She died in her seventieth year, and was buried in Didsbury Church 3rd August 1734. The next Lord of the Manor was

7. Sir Oswald Mosley (eldest son of Oswald Mosley of Ancoats Esq.), who was created a baronet by George I. in 1720, in the lifetime of his father (who declined the honour on account of his age, being then eighty-one). On his father's death in 1726, Sir Oswald inherited both the Ancoats and Rolleston estates, and at the death of Lady Bland in 1734, he succeeded, under the will of her father, to the manor of Manchester. While managing it for his relative Lady Bland, he got into litigation with the burgesses. In 1693 he set up a prescriptive right of charging a duty or toll of 2*d.* per pack on all goods called "Manchester wares," within the manor (not "the markets"); but this attempt was defeated, on the ground that prescription to charge the king's subjects ought to be founded on a benefit or recompense, which in this case could not be shown.¹⁷ Another source of litigation was the Grammar School mills — three mills on the Irk granted by Sir Thomas West, Lord la Warre, and Lord of the Manor in 1515, to trustees for the support of the Free Grammar School; at which all the tenants and residents within the manor were compelled to grind their corn and malt. These mills had been in lease for some years to the grandfather and father of Sir Oswald, who had been subjected to much trouble and expense in defending his exclusive right. The lease having expired, the Feoffees of the Grammar School declined to renew it to Sir Oswald, and let the mills to other parties, whom they supported in exhibiting a bill against Sir Oswald, in the Duchy Court of Lancaster, for erecting a malt mill in Hanging Ditch, where malt was ground for the inhabitants of the town. Sir Oswald contended this malt mill had been erected by his ancestors, and that it was no infringement on the exclusive right of the School Feoffees; but in 1736 (two years after his becoming Lord of the Manor) it was decreed and ordered that Sir Oswald should discontinue the use of the said malt mill, and that all the inhabitants should faithfully observe the payment of the tolls and customs to the School Mills. By an act passed in 1759, the inhabitants of Manchester were freed from their obligation to grind corn at the School Mills, malt only excepted. In 1732 Sir Oswald opposed a bill for erecting a workhouse to employ the poor of the parish, and it was lost. He erected a large building near ¹⁷ See Warrington v. Mosley, 1st Holt 673, 674; and from Modern Reports 319.

Miller's Lane for this purpose; and after much opposition the guardians of the poor paid for the cost of the building. He also built an Exchange near the Market Place, which, becoming too small, was taken down in 1790. Sir Oswald died at Rolleston on the 10th June 1751, and was succeeded in his titles and estates by his eldest son —

8. Sir Oswald Mosley Bart., who chiefly resided at Rolleston. It is stated in the privately printed Family Memoirs (to which work we gratefully acknowledge our obligations for many facts and corrections in these brief notices of the Mosleys) that he entered into a treaty with Mr. Egerton, of Tatton, for the sale of the manor of Manchester; and in January 1756 that gentleman paid him a visit at Rolleston Hall, for the purpose of concluding the purchase; but it was then found that Sir Oswald had put it out of his power to sell, by the settlement which he had made of his estates, and the sale was consequently abandoned. Sir Oswald died 26th February 1757, in his fifty-second year, and was buried at Rolleston. Being unmarried, he was succeeded by his only brother —

9. The Rev. Sir John Mosley Bart., rector of Rolleston; of whose eccentricities some curious anecdotes are told. He died unmarried in May 1779, in his seventy-seventh year, and thus the second baronetage in the family became extinct. He was buried at Rolleston, and was succeeded in his Staffordshire and Lancashire estates (in pursuance of the will of his brother the last Sir Oswald) by his second cousin —

10. Sir John Parker Mosley, created a baronet 24th March 1781. He was the fourth and youngest son of Nicholas Mosley, of Manchester, woollen draper and merchant. Sir John was for some years engaged in the hat manufacture in Manchester, and resided at Ancoats Hall before his accession to the estates. During his manorial rule the right to markets within the manor was contested. Taking advantage of an acknowledged want of market accommodation, Messrs. Chadwick and Ackers, two influential proprietors, erected upon a plot of their own freehold land in Pool

Fold, well situated for the purpose, a new market, with butchers' stalls, &c. Sir John Parker Mosley brought an action of trespass against them, which was tried at the Lancaster Lent Assizes 1782, before Mr. Justice Willes and a special jury; when a special verdict was given. Ultimately the Earl of Mansfield delivered judgment in the Court of King's Bench, in April 1782; to the effect that the Lord of the Manor being seised of a franchise for holding a market, the defendants erected about 140 stalls very near his market, taking no toll, but only rent for the stalls; by which the plaintiff sustained damage, as found by the verdict, to the extent of 90*l.* a year. The court was of opinion that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. On this decision in his favour the New Market was immediately offered to, and purchased by, Sir John Parker Mosley, and continued to be used as a market during his life. His eldest son, Oswald Mosley Esq., of Rolleston and of Bolesworth Castle, Cheshire, died in Sir John's lifetime, 27th July 1789, leaving two sons and two daughters, of whom Sir John took charge, their mother dying within three months after their father. Sir John died on the 20th September 1798, in his sixty-seventh year, and was succeeded by the eldest son of his deceased eldest son —

11. Sir Oswald Mosley Bart., D.C.L., of Rolleston Hall, the present baronet and last Lord of the Manor of Manchester of his family. In 1815 he offered to the inhabitants of Manchester the manor and manorial rights for the sum of 90,000*l.*; which they met by a counter-offer to give 70,000*l.* After some negociation, both offers were rejected; and barely thirty years afterwards the acquisition of these manorial rights by the municipal representatives of the town was only obtained at a cost of considerably more than double the sum for which they might have been secured in 1815. By an agreement, dated 24th June 1845, Sir Oswald sold the manor and manorial rights to the Mayor and Corporation of Manchester (the town having been incorporated by royal charter in 1838) for the sum of 200,000*l.*, and they were finally conveyed to that body by deed dated May 5, 1846, just 250 years after their first purchase by Sir Nicholas Mosley for 3,500*l.* Since their purchase the corporation of the borough, now the city of Manchester (by royal charter of the year 1853), have possessed all the rights of "Lords of the Manor;" but they have allowed quietly to lapse the half-yearly Courts Leet, with the appointments of Steward and Bailiffs, Boroughreeve and Constables, beadles, ale-tasters, dog-muzzlers, and all the merely feudal functionaries of the old manor. They exercise the right, however, of taking market-tolls, &c.; while the governing powers formerly held by the boroughreeve and constables are vested either in the Mayor alone or in the Mayor and Corporation,—that is, in the City Council and its various Committees. Several public charities, formerly entrusted for distribution to the boroughreeve, or boroughreeve and constables, for the time being, and thence called "The Boroughreeve's Charities," are now administered by the Mayor, and styled "The Mayor's Charities."

Thus we see that the ancient vill and market-town, denied even the privileges of a free borough, has at length become the second city in the United Kingdom. The old manor, governed feudally almost ever since the Conquest—first by Norman hunters, as were the Greslets; then by brave warriors and sagacious councillors, as were the La Warres, heroes of Crecy and Agincourt, and of the Battle of Spurs; afterwards by the baronial Wests; and lastly by the knightly Mosleys, who ennobled themselves by trade, rose to the highest civic rank in England, and count three baronetcies amongst their tokens of royal favour,—this old manor has at length, after seven centuries and a half, cast off the fetters of its ancient feudality, and is now ruled by the freest constitution ever given to a municipality since liberty dawned in England. The little, straggling village of the olden time, having first its castle and mill at the south end of Deansgate, and subsequently its church and market, baronial manor-house, its pillory and stocks, its corn and fulling mills, at the northern extremity of that old highway,—its population consisting of two, or at most three hundred burgesses, their families and dependants (some of them the native serfs and neifs, the slave-like bondmen and bondwomen of their free neighbours),—has now become the greatest manufacturing place in the world; the centre and capital of the largest spinning and weaving works known in the annals of civilization,—a great hive of industry, enterprise, wealth and social power, such as could never have entered into the wildest dreams of a Norman Baron to conceive. If the ancient manor, with its village-rule and quaint customs, has passed away for ever, it has left in its stead a vast city, with half a million of people, busily engaged in the work of clothing the greater portion of the population of the world.

GLOSSARIAL GAZETTEER.

"Names of places in a great measure belong to the oldest and most primitive evidences of language, and they are of the highest importance in the history of nations and dialects." — (Dr. H. Leo's Local Nomenclature of the Anglo-Saxons.)

All local names, like all proper or personal names, must originally have had a peculiar and appropriate meaning. Of course to ascertain this meaning, where it is now obscure, we must first identify the language to which the original name belongs. In England there are three great varieties of language, which are, in different degrees and proportions, the sources of the names of places, whether of land or water. This is equally true of the natural and the artificial divisions of the land,—hill or valley, wood or plain, barony or manor, city, borough, market town or vill, village, hamlet, fold, or single homestead; or whether the water be river or lake, stream or mere, ditch or pond. These three sources, in their generally recognised order of time, are the British, Celtic, or old Welsh tongue; the Anglo-Saxon, including Anglian, Friesic, &c.; and the Scandinavian, including Danish, Norwegian, Icelandic or Old Norse, and Jute. Very few local names are derived from the Latin, or from the Anglo-Norman or old French languages. Before attempting to define the meaning of the various places named in the present work, we shall extract from the writings of authorities on the subject some striking passages as to the significance, in some one or more of these three families of language, of the names of places in England.

The Rev. A. Hume, D.C.L., LL.D., &c., in his Philosophy of Geographical Names (Liverpool, 1851), observes that "In every language the most prominent natural objects (such as mountain, river, plain, wood, island, lake, spring), and the most necessary artificial ones (church, fort, house, bridge, town, inclosure), are interwoven with those of common qualities (age, number, height, colour, size, position, direction), and the whole effect is produced. The number of places possessing the same name, or some slight modification of it, is very great. In the parishes, townships and villages of England, there are 16 simple words, which occur 445 times, or at an average of 28 times each. These are — Easton 13, Weston 32, Norton 36, Sutton 39, Aston 24,¹⁸ Barton 21, Buckland 20, Burton 29, Newton 45, Preston 23, Stoke 60, Thorpe 23, Upton 25, Woolton 20, Winterborne 20. A similar remark applies to terminations, several of which occur hundreds of times. From a minute examination of a portion of an English Gazetteer, a calculation was made respecting the frequency with which some of the commonest terminations occur. From this it appears that there are 24 which occur at an average of about 250 times each. They are — Bridge 48, Burn 48, Bury 420, By 273, Caster 48, Dale 48, Field 156, Fleet 48, Ford 324, Hall 60, Ham 672, Hill 60, Hurst 60, Kirk 48, Leigh 612, Minster 48, Stoke 48, Stead 68, Thorpe 180, Ton 2784, Well 84, Wick 204, Worth 192. From circumstances of locality, names of a certain class exist in groups, wherever they are found. Thus beck and fell, if not peculiar to Cumberland and Westmorland, are found most frequently there; and in several of the hilly districts dale is a common termination. In the south-west of Scotland, wald is common, and the limits of ancient forests may be traced by the word lyne. . . . Almost all the Fields — Sheffield, Macclesfield, Huddersfield, Wakefield, &c. — are found within a fixed area. In Essex many of the places are Halls. In Cornwall a very large number take their names from Irish saints."

BRITISH OR CELTIC LOCAL NAMES.

The Rev. John Davies, M.A., in a paper "On the Races of Lancashire, as indicated by the Local Names and the Dialect of the County," read before the Philological Society, December 21, 1855, from an examination of various records and the ancient Welsh literature, arrives at the conclusion that "besides the Cambrians who remained in the country as slaves, a large Celtic population was blended with the ¹⁸ Aston and Easton (and Easton might have been added) all mean the East tŷn or dwelling; the other three, the West, North and South tŷn.

Teutonic stock, and became 'as Saxons.' It is a necessary inference, that a Celtic element would gradually penetrate into the language of the conquering race, and affect it in proportion to the numbers and influence of those who adopted the Saxon cause, and became mingled with the Saxon population." From the Lancashire dialect he deduces two facts — "1. That a large Celtic population must have been left in the county after the establishment of the Anglo-Saxon rule; and 2. That this population was the Welsh or Cymraic race. Very few words are found that belong exclusively to the elder or Gaelic branch of the Celtic stock, and probably even these were common to both divisions of this class of languages at the time of the Saxon invasion." Mr. Davies then takes a number of the names of natural objects and of places in Lancashire, as mountains and hills, rivers and valleys, towns, villages and hamlets, and shows that, when analysed, they prove to be of Celtic origin, by their significance when thus resolved into the old Welsh or British tongue. He adds that "The number of Celtic names of towns and villages in Lancashire, that have survived the great torrent of Saxon invasion, is a proof of the strength and extent of the barrier that opposed it. The Celtic local names of the county are conclusive evidence of the fact that a Celtic race once inhabited it." Mr. Davies gives various examples showing that "many names of hills [in Lancashire] have been derived from a Celtic source, and that they belong to the Cambrian division of the Celtic class of languages. The names of the rivers and brooks of Lancashire are chiefly Celtic."

FRIESIC LOCAL NAMES.

Mr. Davies, after showing that the Batavians and Friesians were kindred tribes, often included in or synonymous with the general name of Saxons; and that the old Friesic tongue is nearer to modern English than any other branch of the German stock; — says that where any considerable number of Friesic words are found, we may infer a Saxon or Friesian immigration. Of this, he adds, Lancashire local names offer some remarkable illustrations. There are two Frieselands or Friesian-lands in the county; one near Blackrod, and the other in the south-east. They may possibly have drawn their names from settlements of Friesians out of the Friesic cohort that garrisoned for many years [about three centuries] the city of Manchester when a Roman station.

ANGLO-SAXON NAMES OF PLACES.

"Few local names in Lancashire (observes Mr. Davies) end with terms expressive of the union of unrelated families, in the formation of what we now call a town or municipality; — such as borough (Anglo-Saxon byrig, burg, a fortified town); thorpe, Old Norse, thyrping (an assemblage); thorp (a town) Fries. thorp (a town); or byr, by, properly the town or village, as distinct from the castle. They are usually formed from words expressing objects in natural scenery, as wood, shaw, lea, mere, hill, law (Goth. hlāw, a tumulus; Old High German and Old Saxon hléo, the same); holt (a wood, Fries. holt, Germ. holz) and moor; or of words indicating a single homestead with its inclosure, such as ham, worth, bodel, sall, cote (cot, a poor man's house), and ton, originally an inclosed place or homestead. Of exceptions, Bilborough is the only instance I know in the north of the county [Littleborough]; a few are found in the south, Bury, Duxbury, &c. [Musbury, Didsbury, Pendlebury, Roxbury in Oldham]. Thorp and Byr do not occur, I think. [Thorpe, a hamlet in the township of Thornham, four miles from Rochdale; and Thorpe Green, a hamlet in the township and parish of Brindle, six miles south-east from Preston. Gaw-thorpe Hall, near Padiham.] By marks the Danish towns, and is found about six or seven times."

As to DANISH or SCANDINAVIAN LOCAL NAMES, Mr. Davies observes that "the track of the Northmen, as permanent landholders in Lancashire, is in the north-east near the point where the great high road from Yorkshire leads to Colne; and thence across the county and along the whole of the west."

Finally, Mr. Davies draws the following (amongst other) conclusions: "That upon the whole, probably no county in England felt the effects of the Norman Conquest less than Lancashire. The old records show that the names of the ancient families were almost universally pure Anglo-Saxon, with a slight sprinkling of Celtic. There is a trace of the Norman in the south (as in Darcy Lever and a few other places); but along the whole of the east and north of the county the Saxon or Danish landholder seems to have held in peace the ancestral manor-house he had dwelt in before the Conquest. We may infer, therefore, that the race whose genius and energy have swelled the resources of England to so great an extent, is not much indebted to Norman influences. It is chiefly of Anglian blood, with a considerable mixture of Saxon and Scandinavian; blended, probably, in an equal degree, with that of the Cambrian race."—(The Races of Lancashire, by the Rev. John Davies.)

ANGLO-SAXON NAMES OF PLACES.

(From Mr. J. M. Kemble's Preface to vol. iii. of his Codex Diplomaticus Ævi Saxonici.)

The Anglo-Saxon (like most German) names of places, are nearly always composite words, that is, they consist of two or more parts: the second of these is generally a name of wide and common signification, as -ford, -fléot, -hám, -wíc, -tún; while the first is a kind of definition, limiting this general name to one particular application, as Oxna-ford, Big-fléot, Dómrá-hám, Sand-wíc, Stán-tún. The few words which are not compounds, are either contracted forms, as Bath, for æt hátum bathum (called the hot bath); Bury, for St. Edmund's bury: or they were such as were strikingly impressed upon the natives of a particular locality, although themselves of a general character; as Chester: or lastly, they are names so altered by the Saxons themselves from British originals, as to have lost their national form and character; thus Lunden, Eoforwíc.

The former portion of these compounded names may be classed under various heads: thus names of animals, as Fox-hyl, Oteres-sceaga, Befer-burne, Swínes-heáfod; of birds, as Lafercan-beorh, Eneda mere, Hafoces hyl, Hraefnes hyl; of trees, as Beorc-leah, Ac-leah, Æsc-leah; of fishes, as Fixa-bróc, Lax-pol; of minerals, as Sand-tún, Ceósel-burne, Salt-bróc.

Others again have clearly reference to mythological or divine personages; to names recorded in the old creed, or in the epos of our forefathers; and these furnish the most conclusive evidence that the mythology current in Germany and Scandinavia flourished here also. Thus we have Wódnes díc, Wódnes beorh, Wódnes byrig, Wódnes feld; perhaps also Wódnes treów, Wódnes stede, Wódnes ford; also the Wón-hlinc, the Wón-ác, the Wón-stoc; perhaps the Wótan-hlinc, the Wot-treow, &c. Of Thunor, we have Thunresfeld. Sæteres byrig, like Sæteres-dæg, seems to speak for the existence of some deity yet unknown to us. Behrtan wyl, leaves no doubt about Beorhte, the goddess of wells. Hnices thorn, appears to refer either to Woden in the form of Hnikarr, or to some supernatural being connected with that particular superstition. Scyldes treów is probably a reference to Woden in his form of Scyld, a name never to my knowledge borne by an individual. So Hnæf, Beówulf, and Grendél reappear in local names. When we consider that the names of animals which most frequently occur may all have some connection with the worship of certain gods, or with the old poem of Reynard, we find the traces of such connection in our local names by no means scanty.

The last general division that it seems proper to mention contains the names of individuals and families, as Offan hám, Cuthredes treów, Hearinginga hám, Billinga hó; and those of particular classes or traders or manufacturers, as Sealter bróc, tannera hól, ceorla gráf, æthelinga hám, witenas leáh.

The nature of the second word in these compounds is necessarily somewhat different. It is in short the description either of a natural feature of the country, a hill, a stream, a ford; or of an artificial construction, -feld, -acer, -ceaster, -tún, -burh, -hám.

LOCAL NAMES FROM THOSE OF COMMUNITIES OR FAMILIES.

(From Mr. Kemble's Saxons in England.)

In this able and learned work, the accomplished writer at some length shows that one of the smallest divisions of land, held by a community in common, was the mearc, mark, or march; a plot of land, marked out and bounded by defined signs, on which a number of freemen settled for purposes of cultivation, and for the sake of mutual profit and protection. It comprised a portion both of arable land and pasture, in proportion to the numbers enjoying its produce. In the second and more important sense of the word, the Mark was a community of families or households, settled on such plots or marks of land. The Mark was a voluntary association of freemen, who laid down for themselves and maintained a system of cultivation, by which the produce of the land on which they settled might be fairly and equally secured for their service and support. All the freemen of one Mark recognised amongst themselves a brotherhood or kinship, were governed by the same judges, led by the same captains, shared in the same religious rites, and were known to themselves and their neighbours by one general name, probably derived originally from some single family, or hero, occasionally claiming descent from the gods themselves. Thus Harlings and Wælsings, names connected with the great epos of the Germanic and Scandinavian races, are reproduced in several localities in England; Billing, the noble progenitor of a royal race of Saxony, has more than one enduring record; and Mr. Kemble believes that all the local denominations of the early settlements have arisen and been perpetuated in a similar manner. The Harlings or (Anglo-Saxon) Herelingas, are found in Norfolk and Kent, and at Harlington, in Bedfordshire and Middlesex. The Wælsings reappear at Walsingham (Norfolk), Wolsingham (Northumberland), and Woolsingham (Durham). The Billings, at Billinge, Billingham, Billingham, Billingham, Billingham, Billington, and many other places. These local denominations are for the most part irregular compositions, of which the former portion is a patronymic in -ing or -ling, declined in the genitive plural. The second portion is a mere definition of the locality, as -geat, -hurst, -hám, -wíc, -tún, -stede, and the like. In a few cases the patronymic stands alone in the nominative plural, as Totingas, Tooting (Surrey), Wócingas, Woking (Surrey); Meallingas, Mallings (Kent); Wetheringas, Witering (Sussex). In a still smaller number the name of the eponymus replaces that of his descendants; as Furnes burh, Finsbury; Wælses hám, Walsham (Norfolk), the progenitor of the Wælsings. In some local names, -ing denotes the genitive or possessive, which is also of the generative case, as Æthelwulfing lond (i.e. Æthelwulf's land), the estate of a duke Æthelwulf, not of a family called Æthelwulfings. So Folcwining lond and Wynhearding lond, imply the land of Folcwine and of Wynheard, not of families. Wool Bedington, Wool Lavington, Barlavington, are respectively Wulfbæding-tún, Wulfláding-tún, Béorlaving-tún, — the tún or dwelling of Wulfbæd, Wulflaf, and Beórláf. Changes for euphony's sake must be guarded against as sources of error. Abingdon (Berks) is not from Abingas, but Æbban dun, from Æbba (masc.) or Æbbe (fem.). Dunnington is not Duninga tún, but Dunnan or Dumnas tún. Mr. Kemble notices a surprising distribution of some particular names over several counties, as Æscings in Essex, Somerset and Sussex; Alings in Kent, Dorset, Devon and Lincoln; Ardings in Sussex, Berks and Southamptonshire; Arlings in Devon, Gloucester and Sussex; Banings in Hertford, Kent, Lincoln and Salop; Beadings in Norfolk, Suffolk, Surrey, Sussex and the Isle of Wight; Berings in Kent, Devon, Hertford, Lincoln, Salop and Somerset; Billings in Beds, Durham, Kent, Lancashire, Lincoln, Norfolk, Northamptonshire, Northumberland, Salop, Sussex and the Isle of Wight.

In an appendix (A) Mr. Kemble gives a long list of patronymic names, believed to be those of ancient Marks, of which the first part is derived from his own great collection of Anglo-Saxon charters the Codex Diplomaticus, and other original authorities; and the second contains names inferred from the actual local names in England at the present day. The total number of the latter is 627; but counting the same origin, repeated in various forms in different counties, the whole number reaches 1329; being thus distributed as to counties:—Lancashire 26, Cheshire 25, Kent 60, Lincolnshire 76, Norfolk 97, Northumberland 48, Suffolk 56, Sussex 68, Yorkshire 127. Of these, 190 (very nearly one-seventh of the whole) stand alone, without any addition of wíc, hám, tún, &c. In Lancashire there are four such (Billinge, Melling, Pilling and Starling). Of the 190, 140 are found in the counties on the eastern and southern coasts; and 22 more in counties easily accessible through our great navigable streams. These Mr. Kemble conjectures to have been the original seats of the Marks so named; and the settlements, with the terminations of wíc, hám, &c., to have been filial settlements or colonies from them. In looking over a good county map, we are surprised by seeing the systematic succession of places ending in -den, -holt, -wood, -hurst, -fald, and other words which invariably denote forests and outlying pastures in the woods. These were all in the Mark, and within them we may trace with equal certainty the háms, túns, worths and stedes, which imply settled habitations. Kemble lays down as a rule, that the ancient Mark is to be recognised by following the names of places ending in -den (neuter), which always denoted pasture, usually for swine. Denu (fem.) a valley—a British and not a Saxon word—is very rarely, perhaps never, found in composition. As an example he cites an ancient court called the Court of Dens, at Aldington, Kent; 25 -dens subject to it he enumerates as still existing, out of 32 it formerly included, and near these are 28 -hursts and 5 -folds. The following is Mr. Kemble's list of the various localities in Lancashire which seem to have been the seats of the old Marks:—

It could hardly be expected of Mr. Kemble that he would do more than indicate a few striking examples in each shire, as gleaned from looking over the county maps. The writer, after a closer inspection, some years ago, added considerably to Mr. Kemble's list of supposed sites of Anglo-Saxon Marks in Lancashire. In the following list, although some of the names are the same, no locality specified by Mr. Kemble is included:—

¹⁹ The names of these thirteen places may all — some of them certainly — have been derived from the Hollin or Hollins, the Lancashire name for the holly.

Taking Mr. Kemble's twenty-six names and the forty-six just enumerated, we have seventy-two names in Lancashire alone, supposed to be derived from the old Marks. Of these, twenty-three retain the patronymic alone, without any local termination:—Barking, Billinge, Billing, Brining, Chipping, Hacking, Hesking, Hinding, Holling, Houlding, Ippings, Melling, Pilling, Reding, Ridding, Shaving, Sheading, Slading, Starling, Stayning, Stowning, Tipping and Wening. These numerous local names are supposed to have existed from the settlement of the Saxons in Lancashire, about the fifth century.

Mr. Kemble suggests that a belt of places, having names terminating in syllables denoting a wood, or pasture in woods, will be found to surround and inclose a number of other places having terminations indicating settlement and habitation. But in a county presenting the peculiar features of Lancashire, the Mark, or boundary land, would less frequently be wood or forest, and more often moss and moor, hill-brow and clough, than in those southern counties which fell more immediately under Mr. Kemble's observation. Still the few instances in Lancashire where woods yet remain, seem to attest the accuracy of his views. Thus within Haslingden, Dearden Fold, Lower Fold, Baxenden, Bentley wood, Healey wood, Burnley wood, Stonehouse Fold, Hargreaves Fold, and Holine Fold—will be found Rawtenstall, Higher and Lower Booths, Crawshaw Booths, Habergham Eaves, &c. Within Todmorden, Walsden, Ramsden, and the moors and heights of Blackstone Edge, &c.—are found Blatchingworth (one of the old Marks), Littleborough, Hollingworth, &c. Perhaps the most remarkable instance in the county, however, is the township of Ainsworth, a little north-west of Middleton. It contains one thousand and twenty-one statute acres, and lies within a complete belt of woods, amongst which the following are copied from the ordnance six-inch maps:—Deeply Hill, New Close, Birtle Dean, Cleggs, Black Dad, Windy Cliff, Dobb, Gelder, Bamford, Carr, Jowkin, Ashworth, Holt, Rainshore, Blomley, Fordoe, and Green Booth woods, with various dens, as Naden Dean, Cheesden, &c. Within this belt lie Ashworth, Lee Holme and Wolstenholme, Old House, Grimescroft, Millcroft, &c.

We purposely abstain from quoting Dr. Heinrich Léo's Local Nomenclature of the Anglo-Saxons, because it is confessedly based on the two first volumes of Kemble's Codex Diplomaticus, &c., which comprise almost wholly local names in the southern counties of England. Nor do we cite Dr. Whitaker's observations on local names from his History of Whalley, as the names are chiefly those in that extensive parish, lying outside the boundaries of the manor and the barony of Mamecestre.

SCANDINAVIAN LOCAL NAMES.

(From The Danes and Norwegians in England, &c. By J. J. Worsaae.)

"The north, mighty in its heathenism, poured forth towards the east, the west and the south its numerous warriors and shrewd men, who subverted old kingdoms, and founded new and powerful ones in their place. It was by Danish and Norwegian fleets that Normandy and England were conquered, and kingdoms won in Scotland, Ireland and North Holland; whilst Norwegians settled on the Faroe Islands, and discovered and colonised Iceland. In all these voyages, proportionally few Swedes took part. [The Danes were the chief invaders of England, the Norwegians of Scotland.] From the close of the eighth century the numberless barks of the Vikings were found in all the harbours and rivers of England; and for about three centuries the Danes were the terror of the Anglo-Saxons. The massacre of the Danes in England by the Anglo-Saxons, on St. Bridget's Eve, 13th November, 1002, was confined almost exclusively to the south of England; since towards the north, and particularly in Northumberland, the population was chiefly of Danish and Norwegian extraction. After many sanguinary battles the Danish conquest of England was completed, and for about one generation Danish kings wore the English crown. Under the name of Northumberland was comprised (at least by the Danes and Norwegians) all the country to the north of the rivers Mersey and Humber, from sea to sea, and up to the Scottish frontier. Covered by the Danish "Five Burghs" [Stamford, Leicester, Derby, Nottingham and Lincoln, and also by Chester and York], it was here that the greater part of Danish England lay [and the Danes possessed as their northern capital the city of York, which they called Jor-vik, pronounced Yor-vik.] An Icelandic Saga, written one hundred and fifty years after the Battle of Hastings (1066) says that "Northumberland was mostly colonised by Northmen; for after Lodbrog's sons, who conquered the country, had again lost it, the Danes and Norwegians often harrassed it; and there are still many places to be found in the district that have names taken from the Scandinavian tongue, such as Grimsby, Hauksfiot [Hawkfleet] and numerous others. A close inspection of even a common map of England will soon show that there are not a few names of places in the north, whose terminations and entire form are of quite a different kind from those of places in the south. Even in Kent, Essex, Suffolk and Norfolk, Anglo-Saxon names of places begin already to be mixed with previously unknown names, ending in -by (Old Northern, býr, first a single farm, afterwards a town in general), -thorpe (O. N. Thorp, a collection of houses separated from some principal estate, a village), -thwaite (O. Sc. thveit, tved, an isolated piece of land), -næs, a promontory, and ey or öë, an isle; — as in Kirkby or Kirkby, Risby, Upthorpe, &c. As we approach from the south the districts west of the Wash, such as Northamptonshire and Warwickshire, the number of such names constantly increases, and we find, among others, Ashby, Rugby, and Naseby. As we proceed further north, we find still more numerous names of towns and villages, having in like manner new terminations; such as -with (forest), -toft, -beck, -tarn (Sc. tjörn or tjarn, a small lake, water) -dell, -fell (rocky mountain), -force (waterfall), -haugh, or -how (Sc. haugr, a hill), -garth (Sc. garthr, a large farm); together with many others. These endings are pure Norwegian or Danish. It is not very easy to point out the meaning of every name of a place that has a Danish or Norwegian termination; the original form having been partly corrupted by later differences of pronunciation, and partly changed by the ancient Scandinavians having often merely added a Scandinavian ending to the older [Celtic or Saxon] names, or at most remodelled them into forms that had a home-like sound to their ears. Still there are names enough of places whose signification is quite clear."

Worsaae compiled and printed a "Tabular View of some of the most important Danish-Norwegian names of places in England, extracted and collected from Walker's maps, London 1842." He gives the common endings of local names, viz. -by, -thorpe, -thwaite, -with, -toft, -beck, -næs, -ey, -dale, -force, -fell, -tarn, and -haugh; but does not include other Scandinavian endings, as -holm, -garth, -land, -end, -vig, -ho (how), -rigg, &c. These he enumerates in 21 English counties, of which we give the totals only: — In Kent, north-east of Watling Street,

6; in Essex 11; Bedfordshire 4; Bucks 3; Suffolk 10; Norfolk 44; Huntingdonshire 1; Northamptonshire 53; Warwickshire 3; Leicestershire 87; Rutland 8; Lincolnshire 292; Notts 36; Derbyshire 11; and Cheshire 6. The six northern counties, forming the ancient kingdom of Northumbria or North-humber-land, show an extraordinary number of these Scandinavian names:—Yorkshire, East Riding, 109; West Riding, 110, and North Riding, 186; total 405. Lancashire 49, Westmorland 158, Cumberland 142, Durham 23, and Northumberland 22. In the 21 counties Mr. Worsaae finds 1373 Scandinavian name-endings; to which the six northern counties contribute 799, the other 15 counties only 574. Add Lincolnshire to the six northern counties, and their aggregate is 1091, leaving only 282 for the other 14 counties. In Lancashire he finds the numbers as follow: -by 9 times, -thwaite 14, -with 2, -næs 2, -ey 2, -dale 13, -fell 7; total 49. The endings he has not found in the map of Lancashire are -thorpe, -toft, -beck, -force, -tarn, and -haugh. He has probably overlooked that portion of the lake district (Lonsdale North of the Sands, including Higher and Lower Furness) which is within Lancashire; and in that case these endings may have been included by him under Cumberland and Westmorland. But there are certainly in almost all parts of Lancashire many small inclosures called tofts, though they are not to be found in the county maps. Also many becks, all north of Lancaster, amongst which may be named the following: Bains-beck, Craig-beck, and Harton-beck, all falling into the river Hindburn; Corkley-beck brook, near Wetherlam (tautological in Sc. and A. S.); Tower-beck, into Coniston Water; Hole-beck into Morecambe Bay; Meer-beck, into the Duddon arm of the bay; Sand-beck and Fisher-beck, into the Lune, &c. The waterfalls or forces are not usually named in maps, but Force Bank (in Tatham) is in Greenwood's Map of Lancashire. Colwith Force is on the Lancashire and Westmorland border, and so is Skelwith Force. There are also many tarns among the hills of the north, as Seathwaite, Blind, and Lever's Tarns, near Coniston; the Three Tarns and Bletham Tarn, near Hawkshead; Beacon Tarn, near the south end of Coniston Water; Standen Tarn, near Dalton in Furness; Much Urswick Tarn; Tarn Green, on the Winster; Blea Tarn, near Scotforth; and Tarn brook, into the Wyre, near the Yorkshire border. Of names ending in -haugh, not many are to be found; the principal being Higher and Lower White-haugh, near Tockholes. But if, as Mr. Worsaae intimates, the Scandinavian haugh or haugr be the same with how, then there are several Lancashire places bearing this name, especially in the Lake district, as How-head and How-thwaite (near Coniston Water); How-barrow (near Cartmel); How-clough (near Chipping, &c. We must distinguish these from a similar name Haw or Haws (Scand. hals, a neck), which seems to have been overlooked by Mr. Worsaae. It means a narrow passage like a throat, or a narrow connecting ridge, like a neck. Haws Bridge, Kendal (a stream between walls of rock) is an instance of the former; and Esk Haws, Borrowdale, and various other mountain passes, of the latter meaning. In Lancashire are Haw, Haw Dunnerdale, and the neighbouring Hawses; Hawthwaite (near Broughton in Furness), Haw-coat (near Furness Abbey), Satter-haw; also Haws (near Bolton-le-Sands), Moor-Haws (Cartmel Fell), Sandscale Haws (near Duddon Sands), &c. Worsaae observes that the Scandinavian colonization has clearly been greatest near the coasts, and along the rivers: it had its central point in Lincolnshire, and in the ancient Northumberland, or land north of the river Humber. The table shows that the names ending in -by, -thorpe, -toft, -beck, -næs, and -ey appear chiefly in the flat midland counties of England; whereas farther north, in the more mountainous districts, these terminations mostly give place to those in -thwaite, and more particularly to those in -dale, -force, -tarn, -fell, and -haugh. This difference, besides the natural character of the country, may have partly arisen from the different descent of the inhabitants. It may reasonably be supposed that part at least of the last-mentioned names are Norwegian, viz. those ending in -dale (as Kirk-dale, Lang-dale, Wast-dale, Bishops-dale); in force (as Aysgarth-force in Yorkshire, High-force and Low-force in the river Tees, and in the stream called Seamer-water); in -fell (Old Norwegian ffall; as Mickle-fell, Cam-fell, Kirk-fell, Middle-fell, Cross-fell); in -tarn (Old Norw. tjörn, or tjarn, a small lake); and in haugh (as in Red-haugh, Kirk-haugh, Green-haugh, and Windy-haugh, in Northumberland). Exactly similar names are met with to this day in the mountains of Norway; whilst they are less common, or altogether wanting, the flat country of Denmark. Places whose names end in -tarn (pure Norwegian) are found only in the most northern counties of England, and those in -haugh (which must also from the form be Norwegian) are found exclusively in the present Northumberland, and within the Scotch border. Still the greater part of Scandinavian names and places in England are Danish. Of the 1370 names of places in the table, above 600 end in the Danish -by, whilst no other name exceeds 280, and even this number is reached only by the ending -thorpe, also certainly pure Danish. The number of places in the table could be much increased if we were to include all the Scandinavian appellations used by the common people in many parts of the north of England. A hill or small mountain is there called hoe or how (Höi in Jutland, Höw or Hyo); a mountain ridge, rigg; a ford, wath; a spring, kell; a holm or small island, holm; a farm (Danish Gaard) garth, &c. Thus on a very low calculation Mr. Worsaae computes in round numbers the clearly recognisable Scandinavian names of places in England at 1500.

GLOSSARIAL GAZETTEER.

In this Gazetteer of the names of places mentioned in the various old documents printed in this work, the plan pursued has been to give the modern name of the place first, — in small capital letters, if it be a parish, township, village or hamlet; in ordinary small letters, if it be only a fold, farm, field, or other small place within some known township, and then to indicate that township, and its parish. After the modern name, the various old forms it has borne, are given in chronological order. In the loose and fluctuating orthography of successive generations and periods, some clue may be afforded to the original signification of the local name, by the grouping together of these different forms, and at the same time indicating the most ancient. Instead, therefore, of referring to the documents in which such forms respectively occur, by name or initial letters, it has been thought better in each case to specify the year-date of the documents containing such forms. It will be seen that certain dates are those of particular records or documents; so that the year 1086 will be recognised as the date of the Domesday Survey (Chap. III.); 1230 as that of the Testa de Nevill (Chap. VII.); 1231 as that of the Salford Charter (Chap. XII.); 1262 as that of the Escheats, &c. (Chap. IX.); 1282, the year of several Inquisitions p. m. (Chap. XI.); 1301 the date of the Manchester Charter (Chap. XIII.); 1311 that of the great De Lacy Inquisition (Chap. XIV.); 1320 the Survey (Chap. XV.) and 1322 the Extent of the Manor (Chap. XVI.); 1351 the later date of the Lansdowne Feodary (Chap. XVII.); 1359 the year of the Preston Inquisition (Chap. XVII.); 1362 as that of the Inquisition p.m. on Henry first Duke of Lancaster (Chap. XVII.); and 1473 as that of the Rental of the Manor, under Thomas la Warre, 15th Baron of Mamecestre (Chap. XVIII.). There remains the Birch Feodary (Chap. XIV.), which has no date, and indeed seems to have been compiled from documents and records of various dates from the close of the 13th to the middle of the 14th century. It is therefore indicated by the letter B. As all the years quoted are of the 11th century or later, having therefore four places of figures, the first figure, invariably denoting "one thousand," is omitted in all these dates; so that 086, 282, 322, and 473, will respectively indicate the years 1086, 1282, 1322, and 1473 of the Christian era. The letters "s.d." denote the document cited to be without date, and in all probability, therefore, anterior to the year 1300. The letter I. prefixed to the year-date, denotes an Inquisition. In some instances, a few small places within the parish, township or village, are named with dates. Then the etymology and derivation of the local name are considered, — first in its separate syllables or parts, for most place-names are compounded of two or more elements; and next, as to the significance of the entire and compound name. The language from which a part or the whole of the name is believed to be derived is indicated by initial letters in parenthesis, as (A) Anglo-Saxon, (B) British, (C) Celtic, (F) Friesic, (N) Anglo-Norman, and (S) Scandinavian, including Danish, Norse or Icelandic, Norwegian and Sueo-Gothic, or old Swedish. The words of such languages, showing the significance of the name, are printed in Italic letters. A hyphen before or after a part of a word, shows which part is taken. Lastly the meaning of the entire local name is stated or suggested, according to authorities, or in the opinion or conjecture of the Editor. Generally, British and Celtic names are cited from the Rev. John Davies; Anglo-Saxon from the works of the late J. M. Kemble, of Dr. Heinrich Leo, or from Dr. Bosworth's "Anglo-Saxon Dictionary;" Scandinavian from J. J. Worsaae, and Anglo-Norman (of which there are very few) from Kelham's "Dictionary of the Norman or Old French Language." The Editor regrets that, from various causes, so large a number of the derivations are merely conjectural; and can only hope that this attempt may be more successfully carried forward by abler philologists hereafter.

Abbey, the, in Gorton. Abbaye del, 320. Abbaye, (N) the Abbey. There are no remains of any religious house; but an elevated part of the township still retains the name of "the Abbey Hey."

Acres, Aca's or Ackers the; fields in Manchester, on the site of St. Ann's Square and the adjacent streets. Aca the clerk, held one land, or piece of land, of the demesne of Mamecestre, 230. Accres the, 420, 422, 686. Ackers the, 569, 619, 622, 634, 679. Over Ackers, in the Deansgate, 559. A close called the Over Ackers, 586. Over and Nether Acres, 586. The Further Acars and Acres, 599. The Ackres middens, 593, 604. Acres middings, 670. A plot of ground called the Ackers midding, 679. Ackers stile and ditch, 601. Ackers ditch, on the North side the field, 637, 639. Ackers Ditch, 639, 686. Ackers Barn, 637, 639, 670. Acres, 660. Acres gates, 670, 772. Acres stile, 670. Old Acres, 732. Acres Court, the more easterly of two entries from Market Street to St. Ann's Square, on the site of Exchange Street, 732, 751. The late Dr. Hibbert-Ware, noticing the pronunciation about the close of the eighteenth century to be Ackers and not Acres, derives its name from Aca or Ace, a clerk to whom a Robert Greslet gave some land ["unam terram"] in Mamecestre. The doctor suggests that this land was the same with "the Four Acres," "the Nether Acres," and "Acres Field," which became the site of Aca's or Acres Fair, covering the present St. Ann's Square and the neighbouring lands. The Four Acres, White Acres, Over and Nether Acres, &c. seem to denote fields so named. It is more probable that the place has its name from Æcer (A) pl. æcras, fields, lands, any thing sown, acres; than from any individual possessor of one or more fields.

Addewellegh, site unknown, 320. This name occurs with other lands in pure alms, and is stated to be held by the Abbey of Whalley. It is not to be found in the Whalley Abbey Coucher Book. Can this name be a corruption of "Ad Whalley;" or is it a strange abbreviation of Cad-wal-leghe (Cadwal's ley)? See Cadishead.

Alders the, in Gorton. Olres del, 320. The plural of Alr, Alor (A), the alder tree (alnus). The Lancashire forms are Olres, Ollers, and Owlars. Dr. Bosworth says the alder tree is a sort of birch, called in the north of England Eller and Aller; and that it is quite distinct from Ellen the elder tree (Sambucus). In composition, Alr-holt is an alder-holt or grove.

Aldport, a district in the S.W. of Manchester, the oldest part of the ancient town, during Roman occupation. Alde-port s.d., 322. Alde and Ald Parc, 282. Al-, Ald-, and Alde- -port and -porte, 320, 322. Ald-port Nether (also called Lithake), 422. Alter-port Nether, 473. Alte-porte Over, 473. Alport Stead, 557. Ald-port Lodge, or New Park, 567, 588. Alporte Lodge, 599. Alporte Parke or Nether Alporte, 599. Alporte, 619. Alporte Lane, 662, 772. Opert Lane, 686. From Ald (A), old, and Port (A), town or strong place — the old town or fortress. The late Mr. John Just held that port sometimes meant the guarded passage over a ford, and that such was its application in the cases of Ald-port and Stock-port. There were two divisions of Aldport, — Over Aldport, a close of pasture in 473; and Nether Aldport, a park in 473. Park is from Pearroc (A), a place inclosed with paling.

ALKRINGTON, a township in the parish of Prestwich-cum-Oldham, five miles N.N.E. of Manchester. Alkinton, 230. Alkrington, 311. Alcryn-ton, 320. Alkerington, 322. Alkeryngton or Akkeryngton, 349. Alkrington and Alterington, (B). Ælcringas (A), the proper name of a family or tribe in the mark, and tún (A), an enclosed or fenced place, farm, dwelling; afterwards a cluster of dwellings, a town. The dwelling-place of the family of the Ælcrings. — (J. M. Kemble.)

ALLERTON, a township in the parish of Childwall, five miles S.E. of Liverpool. Aller-ton, 320. Alr, alor (A), the alder tree, and tún (A), a habitation or dwelling-place.

ALT, a hamlet and subdivision of Knott Lanes, in the parish, and three and a half miles north of, Ashton-under-Lyne. Alte, 320. Alt (B), an eminence; also high, lofty. In the same neighbourhood are Alt Edge, a hamlet four miles N.N.E., and Alt Hill, a small village three miles north, of Ashton-under-Lyne.

ANCOATS, anciently a hamlet, now a district, the N.E. part of the township of Manchester. An-cotes s.d., 230, 295, 302, 304, 305, 320, 322, 331, 332, 373, 405, 428, 432, 433, 544. Ane-kotes, 230. Hancotes, 318. An-cottes, 320, 322. Anne-cotes, 331. Ante-cotes, 473. An-cots, 514, 534, 535, 581. An-coates, 610. The following places are named as within Ancoats: Stanigate s.d., 305. Clay-Crofts s.d., 305. The Brod-grene s.d., 305. Brad-grene, 305. Bridge-furlong, 305. Ring-hed or Ring-herd del Shorteys, 305. Bex-wyke-forth [ford], 305. Smithy-stede, 305. Le Wal-banc, 305. The Kiln-londs, 305. The Holy-cayding, 302. Acri-deg, s.d., Medyl-croft, s.d., Stainlandis, s.d., the Short-horne, s.d., Short-croft, s.d., Shiter-flat, in the Long-Mere, s.d., the Knot s.d., Hard-acre, s.d. — The Rev. John Whitaker, on the authority of Bede, says that Anna was a common appellation for men among the Saxons. Coates, probably from Cotes (A), cottages, small dwellings. The cots or dwellings of Anna.

ANDERTON, a township in the parish of Standish, four miles S.S.E. of Chorley. Ander-ton, 230, 282, 319, 320, 322, 473. Derivation uncertain; perhaps Andrew's tún.

ANGLEZARKH, or ANGLEZARK, a township in the parish of Bolton-le-Moors, five miles S.E. of Chorley. Anlas-ar 320. Anlas-argh, 322, 473. Dr. Whitaker derives the last syllable of this word from Er, Ergh, Argh (S), Arf (Swed.), land; and he gives, as other instances of it in composition, Brett-argh, Batt-arghes (now Batterax), Ergh-holme, Stras-ergh, Siz-ergh, Feiz-er, and Goosen-argh. Most of these places were once in Anglo-Danish occupation. The Rev. John Davies regards the first part of the word Angles-argh as doubtless from the name of the tribe or people. The second (and he adds to the places above-named Kellam-argh and Mans-argh) he says is probably the Old High German Haruc, Old Norse hörgr (A), hearh, genitive hearges, a heathen temple or altar. The Old Norse hörgr shows that it meant primarily a woody hill or lofty grove.

APPLETON, a township with Widnes, in the parish of Prescott, six and a half miles W. S. W. of Warrington. Aple-ton, 320, 322. Apul-ton, 362. From Appel, Æpl (A), apple, and tún.

Aquonsbothely, in Horwich. Aquons-bothel-y, 222. Aquo S. Bothe-ley, 322. Aquon's? Accon's (a proper name) bothel, botel or botl (A), a dwelling-place, and ledh (A), a field. The field of Accon's dwelling. — It was a piece of wood-pasture, constituting with Little Hordern (an adjoining plot of moorland) one vaccary or cow-gate.

ARDWICK, a chapelry in the parish of Manchester, and adjoining Manchester township on the S. E. Atherd-wic s.d. Atherys-wyke and Ader-wyk, 282. Ard-wycke, 320. Ard-wic and Erd-wyke, 322. Arde-wyke, 411. Nether Ard-wick, 522. Erd-wic by Irwell, 534. Ard-wic, 544. Her-wic, 556. Ard-wick Inferior, 564. Ard-wick Lower, 598. In more recent times the township has been regarded as in two divisions, — Higher and Lower Ardwick. From Æthered (A), a proper masculine name, and wic (A), a dwelling-place of one or more houses; Æthered's dwelling. "Æthered's well" occurs in an Anglo-Saxon Charter in Kemble's collection.

Ashcroft, in Heaton Norris. Ashe-crofte, 320. This was a small hamlet in the N. E. of Heaton Norris, the site marked by the words "The Ash," a little north of Lancashire Hill, on Johnson's Map of the Parish of Manchester. Æsc (A), an ash tree, and Croft (A), a small enclosed field.

ASHLEY, a district in Manchester, part of the site of which is still named Ashley Lane. Asse-leche (then woody) s.d. Asse-leie, 320. Asse-elde (two acres), 367. Ash-ley and Asshe-bie, a close in Manchester, 421, 473. ? Est-ley, 473. Ashley Lane, 510, 594. The Ashe-leys, 596. Assh-ley Fields, 601. From Æsc (A), probably pronounced Esh, an ash-tree, and leag, leg, ledh (A), a field or ley; the Ash-field.

ASPULL, a township in the parish and three miles N.E. of Wigan. Asp-el, 230. Asp-ul, 230, 322. Asp-ull, 322. Asp-ull and Asp-oll, 320. Asp-hull, 351, 362. Esp-hull, 473. ? Aspin-all, Asmoll, and Asmall, 473. Hasp-ull, 557. Asp-all, 625. From Æsp (Æ), the aspen-tree, and hul (h), a hill. The Aspen-hill.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE, a parish and township seven miles east of Manchester. In many old documents the name "Ashton" alone occurs; and then it may be 1. the Ash-town, or 2. the East-town. It is not always easy to assign the name correctly; and "Ashton" without addition, may mean Ashton-under-Lyne, or Ashton-on-Mersey, or Ashton-in-Makerfield, or even Urmston (i.e. Orm-est-ton). Under No. 1 we place Hais-tun, s.d. Asshe-ton subtus Limam (or under-Lyme), 309, 320, 322, 341, 347, 359, 427, 473. Assh-ton, 320. Ash-ton, 311, 427, 473. Ayssh-ton, 473. Under No. 2,—Ast-on 230, 282. Orm-eston, 230. Amongst small places in Ashton are: Osel-lache and Osel-birche (part of the boundaries between Ashton-under-Lyne and Manchester), Oselves-croft, s.d. (? Oswald's or Ousel's), Ashton Mere or More, 429. Rygog, 374. From Æsc (Æ), the ash, a sacred tree among the Anglo-Saxons, and of very common occurrence in the boundaries of their charters.²⁰ — (J. M. Kemble.) ASTLEY, a chapelry in the parish and three miles east of Leigh. Aste-ley and Haste-ley, 320. Ast-ley, 322, 362. Est-ley, 473.

²⁰ Amongst local names, many are naturally derived from trees, and other products of the vegetable kingdom. In Lancashire and its borders, from the Ash (asc) are Ash-hurst, Ash-ton, Ash-ley, Ashworth, &c. From the Oak (ac) Acton and Agden, Oakden, Ogden, Oakenhurst, Oakenclough, Oakenroyd, &c. From the Alder (alr, alor), Ollerton, Owler Bottom. From the Elder (Elen), Ellen-brook, Eller-brook, &c. From the Birch (birce, byre) Birch, Birches, Birk-dale, Birch-ley, Birohen Bowers, &c. From the Apple (appel), Appleton. From the Aspen (Æsp), Asp-hull. From the hazel (hæsl), ? Hassall; Hazlehurst, the Hazles, Hazel-grove, near Stockport. From the Nut (hnut, hnot), Nuthurst. From the Sallow (*sali*g), Salford, Salley. From the Thorn (thorn), Thorn-ham, Thorn-ley, Thorn-ton, Thorny-thwaite, Thorney, Apes-thorn, &c. From Fern (fearn), Farnworth, Fearn-acres, Fernyhalgh, Fern-ley. From the Rush (rusce, rice, riec), Rusholme, Bushford, Rish-ton, Rixton, &c. From Sedge (sege, secg), Sedge-ley. From Moss (moos), Moston, Mosley and Mossley, Moss Yeat, Moss Side, Mus-bury, &c. From Grass (gare), Garstang, Greesingham. From Wheat, Whitacre, Whitefield, &c. Of local names compounded with Wood, there are too many for enumeration.

From East (A) and ley (A), the East Field or ley. It is probable that this place and West Leigh (now Leigh) were so named in respect of their relative geographical position.

Aston Hurst, in Blakeley. Aston and Asten Hurst, 322. From East (A), tún (A), and hyrst (A), a hurst, copse or wood. — (Kemble.) The late Mr. J. Just held that hurst or herst means an acclivity, commonly on the sides of a stream, covered with brushwood, affording fuel; whence hereta (A), a fagot or firebrand. The East-town Copse.

ATHERTON, a chapelry in the parish of Leigh, seven miles N.E. of Newton-le-Willows. Ader-ton and Hader-ton, 230, 362. ? Æthered's tún or dwelling.

AUDENSHAW, a division of the parish of Ashton-under-Lyne, four and a half miles east of Manchester. Ald-en-shade, s.d. Alde-wyn-shagh, 411. Alden-shaw, 523; Aden-shaw, 587. Among places named as in Audenshaw are Cetel's or Ketell's croft, s.d. Mychel-dike, s.d. Osuelve's lache and Osell lache, s.d. (? Oswald's or Ousel's). [For these last two names see also under Ashton-under-Lyne.] Goren and Gored broke, s.d. Banck-broke, s.d. God-head, s.d. From Aldewyn (A, a proper masculine name, meaning "old conqueror"), and Sceaga (A), a shaw or wood, a marsh. The late Mr. J. Just stated that shaw (both A and Dan.), means a cleared space or open ground surrounded by wood, and not the wood itself. Its usual meaning is a thicket, grove or small wood; and it is apparently from scead, scadu, a shade; so sceadu-geard was a shaded enclosurc, a grove or wood. "Under the shawe of the wood" (Morte d'Arthur) seems to mean under the shade, shelter or cover of the wood. As to the conversion of Aldewyn into Auden, it is in strict conformity with Lancashire euphony, which usually changes AL into AU or AW, at least in pronunciation, as Salford, pronounced Sawford; Salley, Sawley; Kersal, Kersaw. Indeed this deepening of A into AU is not peculiar to Lancashire, ex. gr. Raleigh Rauley; Galway, Gaulway.

Bank the, ? in Manchester; site unknown. Boncke the (a rod of land near the Pordu-rudinge), 320. Bancke the, or Knolls Bancke, a field in Strangeways, 601. From Banc (A), a bank or hillock.

BARLOW, a hamlet in the township of Chorlton-cum-Hardy, in the parish and five miles south of Manchester. Bar-lawe, 320. Bar-low, 322, 336. Bar-lowe Mosse, 557. From Bar (A), a boar, or Bar (A), bare, and lawe (A), a detached and conical hill, or hleowe (A), a small hill or tumulus. The Boar-hill or the bare little hill.

Baron's Hull and Yard, Hunt's Bank, Manchester, 422. The hill and the court-yard of the barons of Manchester, on the site of Chetham's Hospital and Library. They comprised, in 422, 1a. 32p. of land. From Hul (A), a hill. See also Hunt Hull.

BARTON-ON-IRWELL, a township in the parish of Eccles, five miles W.S.W. of Manchester. Bar-ton, 230, 262, 282, B. 320, 322, 346, 351, 359, 362, 432, 437, 473. Barton-super-Irwell, 322, 351. Barton in Salfordshire, 362. Barton Ford, 322. From Bar (A), a boar, also bare; the Boar or bare town. Swynton, the swine-town, is in the same parish. A Barton was also a manor house, or its demesne lands; and it was further a name for a poultry-coop. — (Halliwell's Dict.) The old family of Barton, of this Barton, bore, in their coat of arms, four boars' heads, in allusion to this place, where they were long seated, and whence they probably derived their name.

Bend-, Bent-, Berchen-, Bernet-, Borid-, Brere-, Gler-, or Pordu-riding. A ridding or cleared plot of land ? in Manchester or Salford, site not known. Brend- or Bent-ruding, 320. Bernet-riding or ruding, 322. Berchen-ridings, 322. Brere-rydinge, 320. Borid-ridinge, 320. Gler-ruding, 322. Pordu-ruding, 320. It is believed that all these various forms denote the same place. Whether it be the bent, or burnt, or birchen, or borid, or briary riding, cannot now be told. We incline to the Briary clearing, anomalous as that may seem. In the Collegiate Church charter of 1578 is a place named the "Greate Brearre-ridinges," and in that of 1635, the "Greate Breare Rydings," — both described as in Salford; and both charters name also the Little Brier Ridings or Riddings.

BESWICK, a small extra-parochial township adjoining that of Manchester to the east. Bex-wyk, s.d., 148, 461. Bex-wyke-forth (a ford over the Medlock near Ancoats), 305. Bex-wicke, 322. Beck-wic

("as far as the Medlock"), 424. Ber-wick (? error for Bexwick), 460. Bex-wicke ("in Manchester, lying upon the bank of Medlock water"), 461. Bex-wicke Bridge, 552. The Rev. J. Whitaker thinks it was Betti's wic; Betti being a common Anglo-Saxon appellation for a man, according to Bede. But it seems more probable that the name of the original possessor was Becca or Becca; the possessive of which would be pronounced and in time spelled Beck's- or Bex-, whence the transition to Bes- is easy and natural. There were two old Manchester families Beck and Bexwick or Beswick; possibly from a remote common ancestor.

BIRCH, or Birch Chapel, a hamlet in the township of Rusholme, in the parish and two and a half miles S.E. of Manchester. Byrches, 320. ? Bercles, 322. The Byrche, 596, 603. From Birce (A, pronounced Birch), the Birch tree.

BIRCLE or BIRTLE, a township with Bamford, in the parish of Middleton, four miles W.S.W. of Rochdale. Berkot-Hill, 311. ? Bercles, 322. This seems to show that Bircle is the better modern orthography. Birk is a Lancashire form of Birch, from Birce, Byrc (A), the birch tree.

Bird Shaw, ? near Bowker Ley, in Moston; site not known. Bruyd-schawe, 320, 322. Brid-shagh and Birde-schaghe, 322. Bryde-shaghe and Bruydshawe, 322. Bryndstone (? error "near Blakels Park"), 322. Bride-shagh, near Bouker-leghe, 322. Brid is a Lancashire form of bird. But the above may be only various spellings of Bradshaw, which see. The Bird or Broad Wood-clearing.

Black Brook the, rises in or about Levenshulme, and passes through Heaton Norris, &c., to Chorlton-on-Medlock. A modern name of obvious meaning. Polluted by manufacturing residua, the stream is to this day of black dye and foul odour.

BLACKROD, a chapelry in the parish of Bolton-le-Moors, four and a half miles S.E. of Chorley. Blake-rode, 230. Black-rode, B. From Blac, Blæc, Bleac (A), black or bleak, or Blake (Lancashire), yellow, and ród (A), cross, or rod (A), rood or rod of land.

Blake-acres; chantry lands in Manchester, site not known. Blake-acres, 320. Blake-acre, 473. The black, bleak, or yellow acres. The Yorkshire proverb "as blake as a paigle" means as yellow as a cowslip.

Blake-lache, ? in Blakeley Park; site not known. Blake-lache, 320, 322. Black-lache ("in the Park"), 322. Black-lache ("a close in Manchester"), 473. From Blake, yellow, and Lache, a northern word for a muddy hole or bog, a miry hollow. Its more modern spelling is Leach.

BLAKE-LEY or BLACK-LEY, a chapelry in the parish and four miles N.N.E. of the township of Manchester. Blakel-legh, s.d. Blake-ley, 262, 282, 311, 320, 430, 473, 501. Blake-lee, 282. Blake-le, 320. Blake-ly, 322. Blake-legh, 322, 343, 355. Blake-ly Park, 322. Blakel, 322. Blake-ley Fields, 430. Blacke-ley Field, 473. Blacke-ley, 473. Blake-ley, 623. The derivation of the first syllable (as in the three last names) is doubtful. If from blac, blac, bleac (A), it may mean black, dark, or gloomy; and the Rev. J. Whitaker adopts this meaning. If from blæce, it means bleached, pale, white; or bleak, cold, bare, naked. And it may mean dark yellow. Ley, from Ledh (A, liegar to lie), a lea; it originally denoted meadows lying fallow after a crop. — (J. M. Kemble.)

Blew-stone, or Mere-stone, in Reddish. Blew-stone ("at Reddish"), 322. This was the name of a field on the confines of Reddish; on a waste patch near which lay till lately a huge blue boulder; probably one of the old meres or boundary stones of the demeane or manor. (See Mere Stone.) From Bleo (A), blue. The Blue Stone.

BOLTON-LE-MOORS or GREAT BOLTON, a market-town, parish and township eleven miles N.W. of Manchester. Bothel-ton, 230, B. Bolton B. 341. From Botl (A), an abode or dwelling and tūn; or perhaps from Bothe (A), a shop or shed. The Rev. J. Davies says that Bold or Bodel was the Friesic and Old Saxon form of Bootle, and that the name of this place was written in Domesday Book, Bodel-ton. For centuries afterwards it kept the form Bothel-ton.

BOLTON, LITTLE, a chapelry in the parish of Great Bolton, separated from the north of Great Bolton township by a rivulet. Little Bolton, 351, 362.

Booths the, in Manchester market-place. Bothes, lez, 473. The old name for the shops or stores for goods in the Market-stead or place. Afterwards a building was erected, which, comprising shops, &c., on the ground floor, had a large chamber above, used for a court-house, sessions-house, and town hall. The whole building retained the old name of The Booths. From Bots (A), a small cot or shed; Botl (A), a dwelling.

Bosse- or Bossel- Clough, near Strangeways, between Chetham and Manchester; site not known. Bosse-clou, 320. Bossole- and Bossel-clou, 322. ? From Bos, Bose (N), a wood, or from Boschayle (N), a thicket or wood; whence our adjective "bosky;" and clofen (A), cloven. A wooded clough. A clough differs from a den or dene, in having no alluvial flat at the bottom; but merely a stream or water-course, with a steep acclivity on both sides, covered with brush-wood and low trees.—(J. Just.) Bottomley, ? in Blakeley, site not known. Bothum-le, 355. From Botm (A), a bottom, and ledh (A), a lea or meadow in fallow.

Bowkerley, ? in Moston, site not known. Bouker-leghe, 427. From Bowker (A), a washer, or Bowk, Bowked (A), crooked.

Boysnape or Boylesnape, a wood in Barton-on-Irwell. Boy-snape, Boye-snape, Boyle-snape, and Wyld-snape, 322. ? From Boys (N), a wood, and ? Snæd (A), a small bit. ? a small wet or marshy thicket, or wood.

Brade-lache, ? now Bradley-bent, at the lower end of Hollin-wood; site not known. Brade- lache, 320. Brod-lach ("two burgages in Manchester"), 588. From Brád (A), broad or large, and lache (Lanc.), a miry hollow. In Gorton, Droylsden, and the neighbourhood, Mr. J. Higson says lache usually implies a hollow containing water. But in wet seasons all hollows will have water in them.

BRADFORD, a township in the parish and two miles east of the township of Manchester. Thirty-one acres of Bradford are now inclosed in the Philips Public Park. In modern times Bradford is generally coupled with the adjacent extra-parochial township of Beswick. Brad-ford, 262, 282, 320, 322, 331, 332, 340. 347, 357, 358, 359, 363, 417, 424. Brade-ford, 282, 359, 361. Brad-ford wood, 322. Bradford manor, 535, 559. Bradford mill (water corn-mill), 359, 363, 417. From Brád (A), broad, wide, large, and Ford (A), a ford; i.e. the broad ford, probably as distinguished from the neighbouring narrow ford, which was superseded by Beswick Bridge.

Bradley-brook, between Clayton and Oldham. Brad-le-broke, 320. Brad-legh-broke, 322. Grad-ley-broke, 322. Brad-legh-brocke, 322. The broad-ley brook.

BRADSHAW, a chapelry in the parish and three miles N.N.E. of Great Bolton. Brad-shawe, 320, 322. Brad-shagh and Brad-sha, 322. Brade-schagh, 351. Brad-shaw, 473. From Brád (A), and scead (A), a wood-clearing. See also Birdshaw.

BRIGHTMET, a township in the parish and two miles E.N.E. of the township of Great Bolton. Bright-mede B., 351, 362. From briht (A), bright, and mæd (A, from mawan, to mow), a meadow. This name reminds the reader of the poet's "gay mead."

Brend-lache, or Brend-lack, "six acres of the waste of Salford, newly approved;" site not known. B. The burned lache or miry hollow. See Brade-lache.

Brend Orchard the, between Aldport and the old rectory of Manchester in Deansgate. It was also called Ose-Croft and Walle-grenes, which see. Brende-orcharde, 320. Brand-orchard, 322. Brand-, Brend-, Brond- and Brund-orchard, 320, 322. Brend-orchert, 320, 322. From Brend (A), burned. It was customary to burn the sods in order to enrich the soil. Orchard from wort (A), a vegetable or green, and yard or garth (A), an inclosure; literally a herb-yard or vegetable-garden.

Brere-hey, in Cuerdley. Brere-hey, 322. From Brær (A), briar, and hæg, haga (A), a hedge or inclosure. The briary-hey or inclosure. There was a Brere-riding in Butterworth.

BRINDLE, a parish and township four miles north of Chorley. Burn-ul, 230. Brun-hull, 262, 282, B. Bron-hull, 282. Burne-hulle, Burn-ell and Burn-ill, 320. Burn-hil and Burn-hull, 322. Burne-hill, 473. From Burn (A), a stream, or Brun (A), brown, and hul (A), a hill; the brown hill, or the hill by the stream.

BROCHOLES, a hamlet in the parish and two and a half miles N.E. of Preston. Broc-hal and Brok-hale, 230. Broke-hole, -holes, and -holles, 320. le Broc-hol, 322. Brock-holes and Broc-hels, 322, 341, 351, 473. Brock-hall, near Ribble, 473. From broc (A), a badger, and holes. The family of Brocholes bear three brocks or badgers in their coat of arms.

Brodned or Bredned, a plot of moorland in Horwich. Brod-ned and Bred-ned, 322. ? From Bredan (A), to weave, bend, fold or braid: making brodan as the past participle. The -ed may be an abbreviation of heved (A), head. The bent or folded head.

Brokes the; or, the Brochol; site not known. Brokes le, or le Brochol, 320, 322. From Bróc (A), a brook, or Broc (A), a badger. The Brooks, or the Badger-holes. There was a place called The Brokes, near Ordsall and Pendleton.

Broomyhurst, 120 acres of wood near Barton-on-Irwell. Bromehurst, Bromy-hurst, 320, 322. Bromi-hurst, 322. Bromy-hurst heath, 322. From Brom (A), broom, and hurst, hyrst, herst (A), a thicket or acclivity covered with brush-wood, and in this case with broom.

BROUGHTON, a township in the parish and two miles N.W. of the town of Manchester. Burghe-ton, 320. Burgh-ton and Burgh-ton de Salforth, B. Burgh-ton, 322, 341, 351, 362. The Burh (A), or burgh tún; the castle or fort dwelling.

Bull-oke the, south of Hunt's Bank, Manchester. 422. This was the oak to which the bull was chained for baiting. Bullock-Smithy was probably the Bull-Oak Smithy.

BURNAGE, a township in the parish and four and a half miles S.S.E. of the township of Manchester. Bron-age and Bron-adge, 320. Bronn-rigge, 322. Bronn-egge, or Broun-egge, 322. Gren-egge (P error), 322. From Brun (A), brown or Burn (A), a stream, and Ecg (A), an edge. The brown-edge, or the Burn or Stream Edge.

Burnhull, see Brindle.

BURY, a market-town, parish and township nine miles N.N.W. of Manchester. Bury, 230, 311, B. 341, 349, 351. Bura in Salfordshire, 362. From Burh (A), a town, fort, or castle.

BUTTERWORTH, a township in the parish and four miles E. of Rochdale. Butter-wort^h, 311. From Butter (A), butter, and worth (A), a farm, or estate, generally an acquired property. — (J. Just.)

CADISHEAD, a hamlet in the township of Barton-on-Irwell, eleven miles W.S.W. of Manchester. Cad-wale-sate, 230. Cadwal-sete, 230. Cade-walis-set, before 247 (Whalley C. B. pp. 519-521, and 253.) Cade-wals-hed, B. Cadwalle-head, 322. Cadwalla was the name of a British king, who with Penda, defeated Edwine, Saxon king of Northumbria, slew him at Hatfield Chase, A.D. 633, and "laid waste all Northumberland." The old orthographies of the place suggest, for the first part of the word, a proper name in the possessive case — Cadwall's, as the name of the owner of the place as early as 1230. Or, leaving Cad or Cade unexplained, the latter part of the word, which looks like Anglo-Saxon, may read wall-seat or well-head, meaning a spring. But Cad may be a corruption of Cold, and then we have Cold-well head. See Cold-wall clough.

Castle-Hill, in the grounds of Singleton Lodge, Prestwich, four miles north of Manchester. Castle Hill, 375. See also Fo-, How- and Low- -caster.

CASTLETON, a township in the parish and including the southern part of the township of Rochdale. Castle-ton and Caple-ton, 311. There was an old fort or castle here.

Causeway the, ? Peel Lane, near Manchester. Cawsay and Cause the, 320, 322. From Caussie (N), strewed with chalk and flint, — Causeway, a highway or bank for a footpath, raised in marshy ground.

Cawt, ? in Manchester; site not known. Cawt, 473. Etymology not known.

Cemetery the, or Burial ground, Manchester; site unknown. Cimiterium, 473. This mediæval Latin term, for Cœmeterium, a Christian burial-place, has for Anglo-Saxon equivalents Byrigen-stow, Leger-stow.

CHADDERTON, a township in the parish of Prestwich-cum-Oldham, seven miles N.N.E. of Manchester. Chathyr-ton, s.d. Chader-ton and Hader-ton, 230. Chathir-ton, 262. Cheder-ton, 282. Chatter-ton, 301. Chader-tone, 309. Chadre-ton and Chadre-den, 311. Chather-ton, 351, 362. Chadder-ton B, 542. Among places named as in Chathyr-ton, s.d., are: Lone-sege, Romes-den, Henne-rode, Ytheyt, and Blichis. The variations in orthography between Chad and Chath are probably due to the last letter being the Anglo-Saxon ð or th. Ceadde and Cedde (A), were forms of a man's name, and were pronounced Chad, Ched. ? The tún or dwelling of the Chada, the old Anglo-Saxon possessors.

Chadesworth, ? an error for Shoresworth, which see.

CHARNOCK. There are two adjoining townships of this name, both in the parish of Standish, — Charnock-Heath or Heath-Charnock, two and a half miles S.E. of Chorley, and Charnock-Richard, two miles S.W. of Chorley. In the latter is the hamlet of Charnock Green. Chern-ok, 351. Chern-oke, 362. ? From cerran (A, pronounced cherran), to turn or change, and ac (A), oak. The changed, turned, or perhaps blighted, oak.

Chat Moss, an extensive morass, chiefly in the parish of Eccles, near Manchester, stated to be five miles long from east to west, and three miles broad from north to south; having an area of six thousand statute acres. Chat Moss and Watt Moss, 322. It is supposed to have derived its name from its owner St. Chad, Bishop of Mercia, who was seated at Chester in 669; Ceaddē's Meos (A), Chad's Moss or morass.

Cher the, a parcel of land in Manchester. Le Cher, 473. ? From Ceor (A), the same as Ceorl, a churl or peasant. Perhaps the same place with "Le Choo," which see.

CHETHAM or CHEETHAM, a chapelry in the parish of Manchester, a mile and a half N.E. of that city. Chet-ham, 230, 320, B. 322, 341, 473, 486. Chet-am, 662. From Cedde, Ceot (A, pronounced Chet), a Saxon male name, and hām, home, habitation.

CHILDWALL, a parish and township four miles E.S.E. of Liverpool. Childe-wale, 230. Childe-welle, 230, 262, 282, 362. Childe-walle, 230, 262, 282. Childe-wall, 320, 322, 351, 473. Child-wall, B. 473. Childer-well, 362. From Cildes (A, genitive of Cild), the child's, or Oile (A), cold, chill, and weall (A), a well or fountain.

CHORLTON. There are two places of this name near Manchester, — a township in the city, formerly called Chorlton Roe and Row, now Chorlton-upon-Medlock; but the one chiefly noticed in this work is Chorlton-cum-Hardy, a chapelry in the parish and four miles S.S.W. of Manchester. Cherel-ton, s.d. Cherle-ton, 230. Chorle-ton, 320, B. 341, 346, 389, 473. Choller-ton, 320, 322, 574. Chorel-ton, 322. Chorl-ton, s.d., 148, 322, 334, 336, 419. Chorl-ton hagh, 334. From Ceorl (A), a churl, countryman or husbandman; and tún: the churl's abode.

Choo the, a close of land in Manchester, site unknown. Le Choo, Chow and Cho, 322. The Choe and Chor, 341. Choo and the Choo, 343, 473. ? From Oeo (A, pronounced Chow), the chough or crow; or from Sco, Sceo (A), Schou (F), a shoe. But this is mere conjecture, and there seems no fitness or connection in either term.

The Church-lode, Cuchen- or Kerken- -lode; in Cuerdley, site not known. Cuchen-lode and Kerken-lode, 322. ? From Oucen, Oucon

(A), quick, lively; and lode, lād (A), from lædan, to lead or carry, a ford, or a way. The two forms above occur in different MSS. of the same date. If one should have dropped an H, then they would agree, as the Church or Kirken lode; the ford, way, or road for carters (lodes-men) to the Manchester church.

Clayden, near Holt Town, Manchester; and Clayden Field there. Clai-den, Clai-dene and Cley-dene, 320. Clay-den, 473. Clay-den ("near Manchester"), 473. Clay-don, 585. Hope-woode-Cleye-dene ("a cottager's place in Clay-den"), 320, 578, 598, 635. Clai-dene-fielde, 320. Cley-n-feld, 349, 359, 369. Glayn-field, 434. Glin-field and Gling-feld, 473. Glayden-fielde, 567. Cley-den Hall ("in the town of Manchester, the house of Richard Cleyden"), 558. From Clæg (A), Klai (F), clay, and dene (A), a vale or a swine-pasture. The various corruptions of Clayden Field, noted above, show how orthography was tortured, when pronunciation from oral tradition was its chief guide.

CLAYTON, once a manor, a hamlet in the township of Droylsden, three miles east of Manchester. Clai-ton, s.d. Cley-ton, s.d. Clay-ton, s.d., 230, 320, 322, 330, 346, 360, 362, 401, 415, 425, 473. Clai-ton, 473, I. 501. Cley-ton or Clay-ton, 581. The following places are named as in Clayton: Har-den s.d., Crone-shagh-broke, 401. From Clæg (A), clay, and tún (A), dwelling.

Clement Croft, ? a close in Manchester, site not known. Clemens-crofte, 473. Clemence-crofte, 573. Clement's Crofte (bought by John Hartley of Robert Langley), 638. Clement, a proper name, introduced into this country with Christianity or later. Croft (A), a small enclosed field, still called a croft in Lancashire.

CLIFTON, a township in the parish of Eccles, five miles N.W. of Manchester. Clif-ton, 230, B. Clyf-ton B. From Olif, Clȳf (A), a cliff, and tún (A), habitation.

CLITHEROE, a borough, market town and chapelry in the parish of Whalley, ten miles N.N.E. of Blackburn. Clider-how, 147. From

Cled-dwr (B), the hill or rock by the water, and how (A), hill,—a later addition. — (Dr. Whitaker.)

Cnoles the. See Knolls.

Coldwall Clough, between Strangeways and Crumpsall. Colde-walle-clowe, 320. Cad-wal- (and wall-) -clou, and Cold-waller-clou, 322. This clough was one of the boundaries of the demesne in 322. ? The cold well clough or Cadwal's clough. If in the clough there was a wooded acclivity or hurst, Cadwal's or Cold-well hurst might become Cola- or Colly-hurst, which see; also Cadishead.

COLLYHURST, a hamlet in the township of Newton a mile and a half N.E. of Manchester. Coli-hurst s.d. Cola-hurst and Coly-hurst, 322. Cole-hurste, 459. Colyers ("a common so called"), 553. Colyhurst Foold, 556. Coly-hurste, 558, 577, 587, 594. Coli-hurst, 568. Coly-hurst, 585. Colly-hurste, 570, 587, 604. Coli-hurste, 596, 602. Colli-hurst, 603, 610, 618. Colly-hurst, 611, 616, 625, 651, 670. Colly-hurst foote, 626. Amongst places named as in Collyhurst are: The Quarry and Four Lane ends, 651. The Walke Lane and Four Lane ends, 666. ? From Col (A), a peak or sharp hillock, and hyrst (A), a wooded place. Or perhaps a corruption of Cadwall or Coldwall hurst.

COPFULL, a chapelry in the parish of Standish, six miles N.N.W. of Wigan. Copp-hul, 282. From Cop (A), a cope, cap or top, and hul (A), a hill; the hill cap or top.

Corderodes, between the Irk and Coldwall clough, site not known. Corde-rodes, 320. Cordi-rode, Card-wode, Cordi-rodes and -redes, 322. ? Coro-house, 473. ? From Cors (B), a marsh or bog, or Corody (i.e. an allowance from a religious house for the maintenance of one of the king's servants); and rode, royd or ruding, a clearing or ridding. The marshy, boggy road or ridding.

Corohouse, a close near the grange of Hulme, Manchester; site not known. Coro-house, 473. Orthography and etymology doubtful.

Croh-hus (A), is a saffron house or yellow dye house; Corn-hus (A), a granary. It may mean a corody-house.

Cornbrook, a stream which rises between Gorton and Openshaw, flows through Ardwick, Chorlton-on-Medlock and Hulme, and falls into the Medlock at the place named from the stream, Cornbrook, near Hulme. Corn-broc, s.d. Corne-broke, 320. Corn-broke, 322. Cornbrook, 322. From Cor-aun (B), the narrow stream or water.—(Revs. J. Whitaker and J. Davies.)

Cringle-brook, in Burnage Lane or Slade Lane, between Levenshulme and Heaton Norris. Cringel-broc, s.d. Kryngel-broke, 320. From Crymbig (A), crooked, or Crymbing (A), bending or curving. The winding brook.

CROMPTON, a township in the parish of Prestwich-cum-Oldham, ten miles N.E. of Manchester. Crompt-ton, 320, B. 351. Comp-ton, 362. Crompton is seven or eight miles north of Crumpsall; the origin of which latter name seems to have been the proper name Curme (A), and sal, sale (A), a hall. By metathesis Curme becomes Crume, and Crum-ton must be pronounced Crump-ton. Curme's dwelling.

CRUMPSALL, a township in the parish and two miles north of the city of Manchester. Curmi-sale, 262, 282. Cormi-sale, 282. Curme-sale and Curme-salle, 320. Curm-shall, -shal, and -shale, 322. Curm-shal moor or waste, 322. Curme-shale I. 427. Crone-shall, 473. Crume-sale, 478. Crume-shall and Crumi-shal, 502. Curm-shal, 501, 517. Crom-sall, 581. From Curme (A, proper name), and sal (A and S), sale, salle (N), a hall or mansion,—Curme's hall. Another instance of metathesis, by which Curme becomes Crume; as thorpe becomes throp.

CUERDLEY, a township in the parish of Prescott, four miles west of Warrington. [Or it may be, CUERDALE, a township in the parish of Blackburn, three and a half miles east of Preston.] Keuerde-ley, 282, 322, 347, 419, and Inq. 427. Keuerd-le, 282 and 320. Keuer-legh, Keuerd-ly, Keuerd-le, Keuerde-legh, and Keuerd-dale, 322. Kyrerde-le, 301, 370. Keurd-ley woods, 322. Cumers-ley ("within the wapentake of Derby"), 346. ? From Cuhyrd (A), a cow-herd, and ley. The cow-herd's ley.

CULCHETH, a township in the parish of Winwick, six miles N.E. of Warrington. Kulchit and Culchit, 230. Often corruptly called and written Kilshaw, whether as personal or local name. Probably the first part of the name Culc is the remnant of some Anglo-Saxon proper name, with heð (A), heath.

CUNLIFFE, a hamlet in the township of Rushton and parish of Blackburn, and three miles N.E. of Blackburn. Cunde-clive and Conte-clif, 282. Cunde-cliffe, 320. From Cund (A), known; also, a kind, sort, or likeness, or Cyna (A), cleft; and Clif (A, from Cleofian to cleave), a cliff. The well-known or cleft rock.

DALTON, a township in the parish and five and a half miles W.N.W. of Wigan. [There are two other places of this name in the county, one in the parish of Burton-in-Kendal, and the other a parish called Dalton-in-Furness.] Dol-ton, 230. Dal-ton, 230, 282, B. 320, 322, 351, 362, 473. Dal-wy, B. ? From Dæl (A), dal (S), a dale, and tún. The dale dwelling.

Dan-croft, ? a grange in Manchester, site not known. Dan-crofte, 473. ? Daniel's croft or field. Or it may be Dane or Dane's croft, or the Dean's (pronounced Dane's) croft.

Deansgate, a street in Manchester formerly from Ald-port, or Brend-orchard, to Smithy-bank, near Cateaton-street. Denes-gate le, 389, 430, 487, 490, 502. Deynes-gate the, 498, 502, 533, 552. Danysgate the, 525. Deans-gate, 555 (et passim), 593 ("an ancient way"), 611 &c. to 625. Deanes-gate, 572, 580, 594, 598. Denis-gate, 561. A pump in Deans-gate, 591. The fact that it is nowhere called Denis-gate till 1561 disposes of one hypothesis, that it was St. Dennis or Dionys' gate. It is more likely to have been the Dean's gate or way, than the Danes' gate.

Dene more, or Dean Moor, in the parish of Dean, two miles S.W. of Bolton. Dene-more, 320. From Den, denu (A), an enclosed vale or grove, or a swine-pasture; and mor (A), moor, waste, heath.

DENTON, a chapelry in the parish of Manchester, three miles S.S.W. of Ashton-under-Lyne. Den-ton, 282, 320, 322, 473, and I. 501. Den-ton waste, 322. From Denu (A), a vale, dale or den; often used as a termination in the names of places situated in a valley. Or it may mean a swine-pasture.

DIDSBURY, a chapelry in the parish and five and a half miles south of Manchester. Didis-burie, s.d. Diddes-burye and Dittes-burye, 320. Dites-bery and Dites-bury, 322. Diddes-burie, 473. Dides-bury, 591. Dites-bery moor, 322. Didis-ford (the ancient name of the Mersey ford between Didsbury and Northen), s.d. ? From Didde or Ditte (A), a proper name, and Burh, Byrg (A), a town or fort; or perhaps birgen (A), a tomb or burial-place.

Dog-Field, a close in Manchester, site not known. Dogge-feld, 320. Doge-feld, 349, 369, 473. Dog-fielde, 473. Dodge-meadows, 567, 626. Apart from its obviously-suggested meaning, it may possibly be from Doeg (A), a day, or from Docce (A), a dock plant. Feld (A), shows the original significance, a piece of land, the trees on which have been felled and the land levelled and enclosed from the wood. There is a Dog-ford near Oldham, and a Dog-house in Withington. There was a Dob-field in Ordsall or Pendleton in 634.

Draught-gate, tenements in Manchester, site not known. Over Draught-gate 427. Nether Draught-gate, 427. ? From Draf (A), driving (part. of drifan to drive), or from Dreah (A, part. of dreogan to work, to drag). The higher and the lower cart-way or driving-way.

DROYLSDEN, a township in the parish and four miles east of Manchester. Drils-den, s.d., circ. 290, 300, 414, 416, 425. Driles-den, or Drylis-den, or Dreveles-den, or Droyls-den, or Drils-den, 581. In old documents the following places are named as in Droylsden: The territory of Herde-low, s.d. Sunderland, s.d. Synderland, 425. Hasted-or Hustude-clogh, s.d. Cote-shut-gate, s.d. Staned-ings, s.d. A clough called Hore-done Hirne, the boundary between Drilsden and

Ashton-under-Lyne, 425. Ose-lache, 425. Long-lache, 425. Driles-den More, 429. From Dreol (A), a proper name, and denu (A), a swine-pasture. Dreol's den. — (Rev. J. Whitaker.)

ECCLES, a parish and village four miles west of Manchester. The village is in the township of Barton-upon-Irwell. Eccles, 230, 320, 341. Amongst places in Eccles are, Monithornes, 320, 322, and Dauntsey's Warthe, 704. ? From Eglwys (B), Eglise (N), Ecclesia (Latin), a church. The church here is very ancient.

EDGEWORTH, a township in the parish of Bolton, six miles N.N.E. of Bolton. Egge-wrth, 230. Egg-worth B., 535. Eger-garthe, 362. From Ecg (A), an edge, and weorth, worthig, wyrth (A), a land, farm, way, or estate. The edge of the farm or way.

Egburden or Egbertdene, two plots of moor in Horwich. Another place of this name is in Heaton-with-Haliwell. No. 1 Egbert-dene or Hag-head; also Egbe-dene, Egber-dene and Egbur-dene, 322. No. 2 Egbur-den or Wythen-rod, 322, 427. From Egbert (A), a proper name (derived from Ece, eternal, eght, equity, and beohrt, bright), and den, or dene (A), a vale. No. 1 may be Egbert's dene or swine-pasture; No. 2 may be really "the edge of Hordern."

Emo-taner-lane, ? in Manchester, site not known. 473. ? An error for Gonum-tonce-lane, which see. There was a tannery, with a Tanners' yard near Long Millgate, and a Tanners' Bridge over the Irk.

Esecroft or Osecroft, in Manchester, near Aldport. Ese-croft and Ose-croft, 322. From Est, Ost (A), the East, and Croft (A), a small field or inclosure. See also Ose-croft, Brend-Orchard and Wall-grenes, all names for the same place.

Esterley ? a free tenement in Manchester. Ester-ley, 473. The Eastern or Easter ley. See Astley.

Eston, see Ashton and Urmston (Orme-eston).

FAILSWORTH, a township in the parish and four miles N.E. of Manchester. Failes-worthe, s.d., B. Fayles-worthe, s.d., 581, 624. Failswithe, 230. Feyles-worth, 681. Among places named in Failsworth were the clough, s.d., and the rivulet, s.d. ? The possessive of Fuile or Fuyle (A), a proper name, and worth (A), a farm or acquired land.

FALLOWFIELD, a hamlet in the township of Withington, five and a half miles south of Manchester. The wood of Fallu-feld, 317. Fallow-feld, 535. Among places named as in Fallowfield are: Dyche-flat, a plot in the wood of Fallu-feld, 317. Huchun-bothum-lache [? Higgin-bottom-lache], 317. Hey-stone, 317. Mekel-dyche, 317. Fallow, from Fealga (A), a harrow, and fēld (A), field. Fallow meant land ploughed and harrowed, but left unsown. This Fallowfield must be distinguished from that a little north of Heaton Park. The township of Little Heaton was formerly called "Heton-super-Faghfeld," and till the eighteenth century "Heaton Fallowfield." — (Rev. J. Booker.)

FARNWORTH, a chapelry in the parish of Dean, three miles south of Bolton. [There is also a hamlet of this name in the township of Widnes, parish of Prescot, five miles west of Warrington.] Farin-worthe ("a vill"), s.d. Farn-worthe and Forn-word, 282. Farne-worthe, 320, 473, 591. Farn-worth, 322, 473. Ferne-worth, 557. From Fearn (A), Fern, with which this chapelry was once covered, and worth (A), a piece of land, farm, estate. From the growth of fern therein many places of England take their names, as Farrington or Farndon, Berks, the ferny-dun or hill; Farnham, Surrey, the ferny-home or dwelling.

FLIXTON, a parish and township, seven miles S.W. of Manchester. Flix-ton, 230, B., 320, 322, 346, 473. Flix-ton, 320. Flux-ton, 320, 322. Flyx-ton, 341. Possibly from Fleax, flex (A), flax, and tún.

Flowery Lache, a plot of land in Manchester, site not known, held in 1514 by Sir John Bothe of Sir Thomas la Warre. Flouri- and Flori-lache, 322. Flori-lache, 564. Flower-lach, 514. From flouron (N), fleur (French), a flower, and lache (A), a miry hollow.

Focastle or Fowcaster, ? an error for Lowe-caster, which see. Focastell, 320. Fow-caster and le Lowe-casters, 322.

Folds the, in Sharples, a township in the parish and three miles north of Bolton. Fouldes le, I. 427. Fouldis del, in Sharples, 473. Feldes del, in Sharples, 473. From Fuld (A), an inclosure for cattle, probably also with dwellings for the neat-herds; a cluster of houses; a sheep-pen, a stable. Or from Feld (A), a field or open piece of land. In 473 "a small meane manor, called Del Fields or Folds."

Foris le, a messuage in Manchester, site not known. Foris le, 473. The plural of Forus (Latin), which means both a market-place and a place where magistrates administer justice. The Cheap or West Cheap, the principal market of old London, was rendered in Latin by forum. Probably in Manchester the term foris applied to the building which consisted of booths or market-shops below and of a large room for the sessions of magistrates above.

Forty Acres the, a close of land in Rusholme, a township two and a half miles S.S.E. of Manchester, 473. There was also a "Forty Acres" in Gorton in 564.

Four Acres the, a parcel of land in Manchester, site not known, 473. Though this name in modern English is obvious, it should be remembered that Æcer (A), meant also and perhaps primarily a field, a piece of land irrespective of its area, any place sown; and even sown corn. A farmer or ploughman was called æcer-ceorl or æcer-mon.

FOXDEXTON, a hamlet in the township of Chadderton, parish of Prestwich, and two and a half miles west of Oldham. Fox-den-tone, 282. Fox-den-ton, 320. Fox (A), den (A), tún (A). The habitation by the fox's den.

Frith Ford the, over the Irwell, near Barton Ford. Frith Ford le, 322. From Frith (P B), a wood, or (A), free, peaceable; and ford (A), a passage or roadway, especially across water.

Gallows the, in or near Manchester, site not known. Galoz and Galese le ("a field near the," Manchester), 473. From Galga, gealga (A), a gallows, gibbet, or cross; a later form was Galwes (pronounced galooze). The old timber frame consisted of three posts, so placed that the horizontal cross-pieces at the top, from which the ropes were suspended, formed an equilateral triangle \triangle Three criminals could thus be hung at once.

Gate-cote- [or coter-] Field, in Chorlton-on-Medlock or Manchester, site not known. Gate-coter-feld, 320. Gate-cote-field, 366, 473. Cate-cote-field, 369. Yatte-coutes-Feldes and Gatley-Cout-Feldes, 567. ? From Geat (A), gate, and cota (A), a cottage; or from Gat, gat (A), a goat, and cote (A), a pen. Gat-ley is the goat-field.

Gavel Field, ? in Manchester, site not known. Gavel-feld, 349 or 359. ? From Gafol, gafel (A), tax, tribute, rent; gafol-land was land given on condition of paying some contribution. In later times a gavel was a sheaf of corn (not wheat) before being tied up. Cotgrave has Javeller, to swathe or gavell corn; to make it into sheaves or gavels.

Gler-ruding. ? an error for Brere-ruding, which see.

Gling-feld, 473. ? an error for Clayden Field, which see.

GLDWICK, a hamlet in the township of Oldham and parish of Prestwich, one mile S.E. of Oldham. Glo-dyke, B. ? From Gelodan (A), brothers; or Gleaw (A), prudent, strong, wise, as in Gloucester, formerly Gleaw-ceaster.

Gonumtonce Lane, in Manchester, site not known. Gonum-tonce-lane, 473. In one copy of the Rental of 473 it is called Emo-taner-lane; but the former is the spelling in the original roll. The first two syllables of both are exceedingly obscure. The third may be town's or tanners', and there was a Tanners' Bridge over the Irk.

Gore Brook. This stream rises in Audenshaw, and passes through Gorton, Kirkmanshulme, Rusholme, &c. Gorre-brocke, 320. Gore-brocke, 320. Gore-broke, 322. Gor (A), not only means gore, clotted blood, but also dirt or mud. The derivation, aided by tradition as to a combat with the Danes, is generally assigned to the former meaning, when "Gorton-brook flowed with blood;" but the latter meaning is quite as probable.

GORTON, a chapelry in the parish and three miles E.S.E. of Manchester. Gor-ton, 282, 320, 322, 422, 428, 473. Gorton Grene, 422. For derivation, see Gore Brook. Or the place may derive its name from another signification of the same word Gor (A), a triangular plot of land.

Goose Lache, ? in or near Withington, site not known; but it was one of the bounds of Platt. Gose-lache, s.d. Gosi-lache, 334. From Gós (A), goose, or Gost (A), gorse; the goose or gorsy lache or leach, or miry hollow.

Gotherwick, or Goderswick, a messuage in Farnworth or Manchester, site not known. Gothers-wicke and Gothers-wicke, 320. Getheswyke and Gothers-wyke, 322. Gode-wic, 428-9. Goders-wick, 473. God-dyres-wike ("a messuage in Farnworth"), 473. Gode-wike, 492. Goders-wic, I. 501. Gothers-wick, 556-7. ? From Godard (A), a proper name (of God, god or good, and aerd, nature), and wic (A), a habitation, — Godard's dwelling.

Granges, in various places. Grange a, in Manchester, 473. Grange a ("called Dan-crofte"), 473. Grange (N), a farm, barn, or granary; a small hamlet.

Greenlow or Grindlow, in Gorton. Grende-lawe ("chantry lands"), 320. Gren-low, s.d., 473. Grene-low, 473. Grene-low-lache, s.d. 317. Gren-law-more, 282. Green-lo-marsh, 322. Grene-low-mersh, 334. Green-low-marsh, 411. Grene-lo-in-erth, 322. Grene-lou-heth, 322. Grene-low-heth, 411. Grene-low-eth, 427. Grene-law-crosse, 334. Grene-law-acre, 334. Grin-low, 694. From Grene (A), green; and hláw (A), a heap, small hill, rising ground; a barrow or tumulus. These two elements are compounded with lache or leach, moor, marsh, heath, cross and acre.

Guild Houses or Yeild-Houses in Rusholme or Withington, near Goose-lache. Gylde-houses, s.d. Gilde-houses, s.d. Yheld-house ditch, 317. Yheld-hous-Mosse, 317. Yeld-houses in Rysholme, 535. There was also a Guild-house, in Manchester or Newton (named in Collegiate Church Charters), 578, 635. From Gild, geld (Δ), a society or brotherhood, with payment for mutual support (of gyldan, to pay), The chief if not the only guild in old Manchester was "the guild of the Blessed Mary," to which these houses may have belonged. For other notices of the Guild-houses see the Rev. J. Booker's History of Birch Chapelry.

Hag-head, a plot of moor in Horewich, also called Egbe-dene, which see. Hag-heved, 322. From Hæg, haga (Δ), a hedge, sometimes a small enclosed field, or even a house. Hawthorn is the haga-thorn, or hedge-thorn.

Hag Moss, or Hog Moss, site not known. Hag or Hog Moss, 322. From Haga (Δ), a hedge or inclosure. The Hedge or inclosed Moss.

Hall Field, in or near Manchester. (? Pool Street) site not known. There was a Halle Feld in Rusholme. Halle-feld, 322.

Halliwell, a township in the parish of Dean, two miles N.W. of Bolton. Hali-wall, 320. Halli-wal, Hali-well and Halli-wel, 322. Hali-wal, 349, 473. Halli-wall, 473, From Halig (Δ), holy and weall (Δ), a well or spring. The Holy Well.

Hall land the, a plot in Gorton or Manchester, site not known. Hall land, or land of the hall, 282. A Halland was a certain quantity of land, as in a grant of 325 occur "one halland with a plot of meadow;" "one halland, with meadow appertaining;" and "two hallands."

Hall or Hulme Moss, ? near Davyhulme Hall. Hal Moss and Hulme Moss, 322. Both Hall and Hulme will apply to Davyhulme, in the township of Barton, seven miles W.S.W. of Manchester. Méos (Δ), moss, or morass.

HALSALL, a parish and township three miles N.W. of Ormskirk. Hal-sale, 230, 362. ? From Hal (Δ), a proper name, and sal, sale (Δ), a hall.

Har or Hare Moss, site not known. Har- and Hare-Moss, 322. From Har (A), hoar, gray.

Harpurhey, a township in the parish and two and a half miles N.N.E. of Manchester Exchange. Harpour-hey, 320. Harper-hey, 473, 496, 572. From Hearpere (A), a male harper (fem. hearpestre). The Harper's hey or inclosure.

Hartwell Sike, in Heaton Norris. Hart-well-sicke, 320. Hert-mill-sich, 320. From Heart (A), the hart, and Sich (A), a furrow, gutter, or small water-course. The Hart-well rill. The hart is often compounded in local names with water, as Heort-ea, the hart-water, Hartle-pool, Heort-ford (Hertford), &c.

HARWOOD, a township in the parish and two miles N.E. of Bolton. [Great Harwood is a chapelry four and a half miles N.E. of Blackburn, and Little Harwood is a township two miles north of Blackburn; both in the parish of Blackburn.] Hare-wode, 230, B. 351, 362. Hare-wood, 322. Har-woode, 320. Har-wood, 473. From Har (A), hoar, gray, or Hara (A), a hare.

HAUGHTON or HALGHTON, a township in the parish and six miles S.E. of Manchester. Halgh-ton, 320, 359, 362. Halc-ton, 322. ? From Halig (A), holy, or Haugh, which Camden says is a northern name for a meadow lying in a valley, or Halgh, a modification of how (A), hill, with a strong Lancashire aspirate. Nut-halgh has become Nuttall, Nuthow, and Nutto. — (Dr. Whitaker.)

Heath the, in Cuerdley, Heth le ("in Keurdley"), 322. From Heth (A), a heath.

HEATON. There are several places bearing this name in the county; four townships in the hundred of Salford (for which see Note 8, p. 296). These are —

1. HEATON, township in parish of Dean, two miles west of Bolton.
2. HEATON GREAT, township in parish of Prestwich, four miles north of Manchester.

3. HEATON LITTLE, township in parish of Prestwich, five miles north of Manchester.

4. HEATON NORRIS, township and chapelry, in parish and six miles S.S.E. of Manchester.

1. Heaton, is often called in ancient writings Heton-cum-Halliwell, both townships adjoining and being in the same parish. It is also called Heton-subtus-Horewich and Heton-under-the-Forest, being within the ancient limits of the forest of Horewich. It is probably this Heaton that is meant in the following documents:—H. under, &c., 320, 322, 473. H. subtus, &c., 322, 351, 362. H. cum or near, &c., 427. H. cum Haliwal, 459.

2. Great Heaton, in Prestwich, formerly called Heaton Reddish (Rev. J. Booker's Prestwich). He-ton, B.

3. Little Heaton, also called Heton-sur-Faghfeld and Over Heaton-super-Faghfeld or Fawghfeld. Heton-on-Faugh-field, 523. Heyton-upon-Fagh-feld, 559. He-ton-in-Faugh-field, 571. Over-Heaton-upon-Fagh-feld, 578. Mr. Booker says that this township was called Heaton-Fallowfield till 150 years ago. We have not met with any proof of this, and should rather derive the name from Fah (A), shining, bright.

4. HEATON, or HEATON NORRIS, is the most frequently named in the old documents relating to the manor of Manchester. Probably the following all refer to this township:—Heton, 230, 282; its bounds, 320, 322, 349, and temp. Edward III. 422. Heton Norrays, 282, 359. Norres, Norreis, and Noreis, 320, 322. Heaton Norris, 349. Heton Norris, 427, 523. Heyton Norreyes, 320. Heaton Norres, 322. Heyton Nores, 559. Heton Woode (in Heaton Norris), 320, 322. Heton Mos (in Heaton Norris), 320, 322.

5. HEATON in Lonsdale, a township with Oxcliffe in the parish of Lancaster, two and a half miles W.S.W. from Lancaster.

Heton, 320, 322, B.

Heton-Strang-ways, 592 (site unknown).

The derivation of the common name of Heton or Heaton is from Hea (A), high, and tún (A). The Noreis, Norrays or Norres, was the name given to one of these townships from its early dwellers, a family of Norwegians or Northmen.

Heywood the, in Cuerdley, 322. From Haga (A), the hay or hedge, or h a (A), high. The inclosed, hag, or high wood.

HINDLEY, a chapelry in the parish and three miles S.E. of Wigan. Hende-ley, 320. In-ly and Inde-legh, 322. From Hynd (A), the hind, the female of the hart; or Hind (A), behind, or hinder. The hind, hinder, or back ley or field.

Hob- or Hole-Croft, a close in Manchester, ? afterwards the Walkers' Croft, Hunt's Bank. Hob-crofte, 473 ("a parcel of land in the middle of Hobcroft sufficient for twelve tenters"), 437. Hob is a contraction of the proper name Robin; crofte (A), a small inclosed field.

Hollinhead, ? in Tockholes; site not known. Hollin-hed, B. From Holen, Holeyn (A), the holly, "hollin" being still the Lancashire form; and Heved (A), head.

Holme's Bridge, in Manchester, site not known; 473. Some bridge over the Irk or the Medlock, named after its builder or owner.

Holt the, in Heaton Norris. Holt del, 320. Holt (A), a small thicket, or wood of timber-trees. The bird now called the woodcock, the Anglo-Saxons named the holt-hana or holt-hen.

HOOLE MUCH, a parish and township seven miles S.W. of Preston. HOOLE LITTLE, a township in the parish of Much Hoole, six miles S.W. of Preston. Hole, 230. From Hole (A), a hollow place, a den.

Hope the, an estate or small manor in Pendlebury. Hope the, B. Hope (? S.), the side of a hill, or a slope or low ground amongst hills.

HOPWOOD, a township in the parish and two miles north of Middleton. Hope-wood and Hoppe-woode, 320. Manor of Hopwood, 438. See Clayden. From Hoppe (A), a leap, or Hope (S), a slope, or hopu (A), the privet.

Hopeworth Forest, ? an error for Horewich Forest, which see. Hopeworth Forest, 282.

Hordern. Several places in the forest or moor of Horewich bore this name. Hordern Great, or Wild Boar clough, ("a plot of moor in Horwich"), 322. Hordern Little, or Hader-lee ("a plot of moor in Horwich"), 322. Hordern-Solines, or Harder-Solines ("a plot of moor in Horwich"), 322. Hordern- and Harder-solines, 322. Hardnerne-solynes, 322. Hordern-solynes, 427. From Hord (A), a hoard or treasures, and ærn (A), a secret or hiding-place, a store-house. Hordern, a store-house of money or treasure. Solen (A), plural of Sol, miry, dirty places.

HORWICH or HOREWICH, a chapelry in the parish of Dean, five miles W.N.W. of Bolton. Hope-worthe forest, 282. Hore-wich and Hore-wiche, 322. Hore-wich, 428. Hor-wiche, 411, 473. Hore-wyche Forest, 320. Hore-wich Forest, 322. Hore-wiche Forest, 320. Hore-wiche Leighe ("a plot of wood in Hor-wich") Hore-wich Wood, 322. From Hor, (A), hoar, gray, and wich (the Old High German form of wic (A), a dwelling. Though the names of many Lancashire places end in wick, but two or three terminate in wich (pronounced witch). It would seem that the Anglo-Saxon form wic and the Friesic wik greatly predominate, the Old German form being only found in a few places north of Manchester, as Prestwich, Horwich, &c. Mr. Jabez Allie, in his Antiquities of Worcestershire, gives many local names therein, ending in wick and wich; and observes that "almost all these places are connected with high ridges of ground, or dorsal elevations, which in ancient times would be considered the most advantageous places for residence." Certainly both Prestwich and Horwich are on high ridges of land.

HOUGH END or HOUGH'S END (pronounced Hooze end) a hamlet in the township of Chorlton-cum-Hardy, four miles S.S.E. of Manchester. Hough's End Clough. See Note, vol. ii. p. 430, as to its etymology. Sir Oswald Mosley in the Family Memoirs derives it from Hof (A), a house or dwelling, and Ende (A), a boundary; and it is a bound between the townships of Withington and Chorlton-Hardy. Another derivation is from the Danish Hoogh, a hill or rising ground. Mr.

Kemble gives Ho, Hoo, originally a point of land formed like a heel or boot, and stretching into a plain, perhaps into the sea. The most probable derivation is the end or corner of the little hill or mound.

Hules or Hules the, in Manchester, site not known. "The ditch called the Hules towards Broerhulton" [near Trafford], s.d. Hules the, 282. The plural of Hul, Hula (A), a hill.

HULME. Several townships and hamlets still bear this name, and others formerly bore it, in which it can scarcely be recognised. Omitting the Hulme near Winwick, as beyond the limits of our work, there are — 1. HULME, a township in the parish and adjoining the township of Manchester on the S.E. 2. LEVENS-HULME, a township in the parish and four miles S.E. from Manchester. 3. HULME, or HULME HALL, a hamlet in Reddish, in the parish and five miles S.E. from Manchester. This place is sometimes called "Hulme in Reddish," or "Hulme near Stockport," and in the Collegiate Church Charters of 578 and 635 it is termed "Hulme near Stopforde." 4. KIRKMAN'S HULME, a hamlet in a detached and insulated portion of the township of Newton, in the parish and three miles S.E. from Manchester. 5. DAVY HULME, a hamlet in the township of Barton, in the parish and seven miles W.S.W. from Manchester. This is often called in old documents "Hulme, near Flixton." 6. IRWELL HULME or HAM, now Irlam, a hamlet in the township of Barton and parish of Eccles, eight miles W.S.W. from Manchester; where there is a ferry over the Irwell. A mile south is another hamlet called Irlam Green, — Hulme (doubtful which), 418. No. 1. Hulme, B. 320, 334. Hulme, near Aldporte, 320, 322. Hulme, near Manchester, 292, 311, 341, 419, 473. Holme, 581. No. 5. Hulme, near Flixton, 311, 320, 322. Davy Hulme, 558. All these Hulmes or Holmes are from Hólm (A), a river island, a green plot of ground environed with water, and just rising above it; and consequently often overflowed. — (J. Just.) Hence, from being level and green, meadows, especially near rivers, are to this day called holmes or homes. — (Dr. Bosworth's Anglo-Saxon Dictionary.) Leven's holm, the Kirkman's or Church-man's holm, the Rush or rushy holm, Davy or David's holm, &c.

HULTON. There are three adjoining townships of this name, distinguished as 1. Over or Great Hulton, three miles S.S.W. of Bolton. 2.

Middle Hulton, three miles south of Bolton. 3. Little Hulton, a chapelry four miles south of Bolton. All three townships are in the parish of Dean. Hil-tone and Hul-ton, B. 320, 322. From Hul, Hula (A), a hill. The Hill tún or dwelling.

Hundersfield, an ancient chapelry and division in the parish and four miles N.E. of Rochdale. Hundres-feld, 311. Its old name was Honor's feld, the field of Honore, the Anglo-Saxon of the Roman name Honorius. — (Dr. Whitaker.) But it may have been Hundred's feld (A), the field of the Hundred; whether of so many men, or of the hundred-man or centurion, or of the division of a county.

Hunt Hull or Hill, now Hunt's Bank, from Manchester to Strangeways. Hunt Hull, 422. Hunt Hill, 473. Hunt Loode (lode or cartroad), 515. Hunt's Bancke, 552, 555. Hunt's Bank, 562, &c. Hunte's Banke, 604. Hunt's Bancke, 625. From Hunta (A), a hunter, and Hul (A), a hill. The Hunter's Hill. It was close by the Baron's Hull (which see), and was probably the place where the Norman baron, his friends and retainers, assembled for the hunt.

Ince, a township in the parish and two miles west of Wigan. Ins, 320. Ince and Yns, 322. ? From Ynce (A), an inch.

INCE BLUNDELL, a township in the parish of Sefton, eight miles north of Liverpool. Ines Blundell, 362. Probably Blondel, a Norman proper name.

Ingelfield, a field in Manchester, site not known. Ingel-feld, 427. ? From Ing, Inge (A), an ing, pasture or meadow; or Ingle, a corner.

Intacks, in various places. Intak one ("near a barn in Manchester"), 473. Another, "annexed to a burgage," 473. A third, "near a grange," 473. Intack [in-take] in the north of England means an inclosure, part of a common field planted or sown, when the other part is fallow. — (Halliwell's Dict.)

Irk, the river, which rises near Royton, about two miles from Oldham, and flows to Middleton and Heaton, and thence running in a southern direction, falls into the Irwell at Hunt's Bank, Manchester. Hirke and Ircke, 320. Irk, 322. Irke Brygge, 422. Irk Bridge, 473. Irk ("three fisheries in"), 473. "A Whitore pit in the Irk, near the Wheat-mill dam," 681. From Iurck (B), the roebuck, probably from bounding along a hill-course. Many streams in Wales were so called.—(Rev. J. Davies.)

IRLAM, a hamlet in the township of Barton and parish of Eccles, eight miles W.S.W. of Manchester. It was formerly called Hulme (which see); also Irwell-hulme and Irwell-ham, from which the present name comes by elision. Irwell-hume and Irwil-hulme, 320. Irwel-ham, 322. The holm (A), water-meadow, or hdm (A), dwelling by the Irwell.

Irwell, the river, which rises near Derplay Hill, in the township of Cliviger, a little above the village of Bacup; flowing in a western course till it meets, at Tottington Higher End, with a rivulet which takes its rise at Cridden Hill, and is by some considered to be the source of the Irwell. The united stream then proceeds southerly to Bury, and a little south of that town joins the Roch; deviating to the west it is soon increased by meeting the rivulet from Bolton at Farnworth. It then changes to a south-easterly direction, till, reaching Manchester, it receives the Irk (at Hunt's Bank) and the Medlock (a little north of Hulme Hall, and nearly opposite Ordsal Hall). Then, becoming navigable, it again runs in a south-west course, and flowing under the Bridgewater canal at Barton Bridge, finally pours its waters into the Mersey at Flixton, about nine miles from Manchester. It divides Manchester from Salford, the latter township being inclosed between the river and the Bolton canal in a sort of peninsula, of which Salford Crescent is the neck. Ir-well, 320, 322. Ir-wel, 322. Ir-well fishery, 282. From Ir (B), fresh, vigorous, and Gwili (B, becoming wili in composition), river or winding thing: the fresh winding stream (Rev. John Davies). From Ere (A), hoar, and weal (A), spring: the hoar spring.—(Dr. Whitaker.) The former seems the more probable derivation.

Jones' Field, Manchester, site not known. Jones Feld, de Hulton, 427. ? John's, Joan's, or Jones Field.

Keeper-Cliff, ? in or near Manchester, site not known. Kiper- and Kyper-clif, 262. ? From Cyperen (A), coppery; but more probably the English word keeper.

Keeper Field, ? in or near Manchester, site not known. Kepir-Feld and Keper-Feld, 232. Keper-feld and Hyper-feld, 322. Kyper-feld, 396. ? From Hype (A), a heap; also the hip or thigh; but more probably keeper.

KERSAL or KERSALL, a hamlet in the township of Broughton, or a township with Broughton, in the parish and three miles N.W. of Manchester. Kere-shel, s.d. Ker-shall ("a Cluniac cell"), 144. Ker-sal ("hermitage"), 199. Ker-shal ("hermitage"), 200. Kere-shale, 230. Kere-shall, B. "The lordship, manor, and cell of Kyr-sall or Kyr-sawe," 540. Ditto, ditto of Ker-sall, 548. Ker-sawe or Ker-sall, 537, 588. Ker-sall, 558, 587. Kerk-sawe or Kerk-sall ("manor"), 588. Kirk-sagh, Ker-stal or Ker-staw and Ker-sal More, 588. Amongst places named as in Kersal are: A close of one acre called Bottoms Wood, 616, 659. A close of 1a. 1r. called the Middle Michael Meadow [? mickle, large], 623, 659. A close called the Great Red Stone, 659. Kersal Mill, 702. A close of 2a. called the Shippon Flat, 612. The Great Field, 3½a., 612. Three closes near the Great Field, called the Bonkes, 612. A lane from Madge Well to Moor Yate, 623. Kersal, ? from Oyrice (A), or Kirk (S), church, and sal (A), hall, or cella (A), a cell. There was an old Cluniac cell here, dependent on the monastery of Lenton, co. Notts; and the residence of the Byrom family here has long borne the name of Kersal Cell. There was s.d. a Kirk-sagh near the Medlock, in Newton or Failsworth.

Kerr, Kerres, or Kerroc; ? in Cuerdley. Kerroc and Kerres, 322. ? Carr, Carrs, (A), and Carrock (Northern dialect), which see.

KEUEBDELEY, see Cuerdley.

Kirkmanshulme, a detached hamlet in the township of Newton [Heath], in the parish and three miles S.E. of Manchester. Cur-mes-holme, 320. Kir-mons-holme, 322. Kirk-mans-hulme, 590. ? From Cyric-man (A), Kirkman, Churchman, or Parson, and holm (A), a river meadow. In all parts of Lancashire old local names relating to church have the form K, not only those on the coast, which are clearly Scandinavian, but others inland; as in this instance, Kirkham, Kirkland, Chadkirk, &c.

Knolls the, ? in Strangeways, site not known. Cnolles and Cnoles le, 322. Knolles le, 396. Knolles ("a plot of land, wood and pasture"), 408. Knowles the, ("near the Walkers' Croft, Hunt's Bank"), 586. Knowles Bancke and Knowles Clough ("closes in Chetham"), 546. Little Knowles and the Bancke ("two fields in Strangeways"), 601. From Cnol, plur. Cnolles (A), a knoll or small hill, a top, cop, or summit. There was s.d. a Knol in Ancoats. An eminence in Higher Broughton is still called Stony Knolls.

LANCASTER, a borough, market town, parish and township, eleven miles north of Garstang and fifty-three from Manchester. Lancaster, 188, 199, 286. From Al (B), chief, and Afon, Aun, Un (B), a river. (Alun is the name of a river in Wales.) The castle on the chief river. (Rev. J. Davies.)

Lestold, a plot of meadow and pasture in Horwich. Lest-old, 322, Orthography questionable; derivation not known. See Lostock.

LEVENSHULME or LEVENSHOLME, a township in the parish and four miles S.E. of Manchester. Levens-holme, 320. Lyvenis-holme, 322. From Leof, Leofne (A), lord, master; or from Llefn (B), smooth; the lord's or the smooth river-meadow.

LEVER. There are three adjacent townships of this name near Bolton: 1. Great Lever, in the parish of Middleton, two miles south of Great Bolton; 2. Little Lever, in the parish and three miles S.E. of Great Bolton; and 3. Darcy Lever, a chapelry in the parish and three miles east of Bolton. It is No. 2 that is chiefly named in this work. Lofre Little, 230. Levyr and Levre, 282. Little Lever and Little Levre, 320. Lefre, 322. Little Lever, 322, 473. ? From Leofra (A), more precious or desirable. Or it may be a proper name. "D'Arcy Lever" is one of the very few Norman names in Lancashire. The Rev.

J. Davies says that Lever is probably from Lle (B), a place, and vaur (B), great, — the great place.

Litheak, one of the names of Aldport Park, or Nether Aldport, in Hulme, Manchester. Lithe-ak, 282. From Lithe (A), pliant, and Ac (A), oak; the lithe, pliant or supple oak.

LIVERPOOL, a borough, market town, parish and township, thirty-six miles west of Manchester and two hundred and five from London. Liver-pul, 207, 229. The derivations of this name are purely conjectural. ? From Lyr (B), the sea, the pool of the Mersey; or from Liver or Lever, a sort of cormorant; or from Lither (and there is a township of Litherland five miles north of Liverpool); and Pull (A), a pool.

Little Moss, site not known. Letel-Mosse, 320. Little Moss, 322. There are probably several small mosses in the county bearing this name.

Longest Hawton, ? site not known. Long-est Haw-ton and Long-est-how-baie, 322. Is this Long East-Houghton, in contradistinction to Westhoughton? Halgh (says Kemble) is a modification of how (A), a hill, with a strong Anglo-Saxon guttural.

LONGFORD, a hamlet in the township of Stretford, three and a half miles S.S.W. of Manchester. Long-forde, 320. The meaning is obvious.

LONGWORTH, a township in the parish and five miles N.N.W. of Bolton. Longe-worthe, 320. Long-worth, 322. The long worthig (A), farm, land or property.

LOSTOCK. There are two places of this name, — 1. A hamlet in the township of Barton and parish of Eccles, four miles S.W. of Manchester, and 2, a township in the parish and four miles west of Bolton. It is the former that is chiefly referred to. Lest-oc and Lest-ok, 230. Lost-oke, 320, 349, 362. Lest-oc and Lost-oc, 322. Lost-ock wood, 322. Lost-ocke, B. 473. Lostok, 351. Lostock, 322, 473. ? From ledh (A), a ley or field, and stoc (A), a place or trunk. Or, from lost (A), lost, and ac (A), an oak.

Lowcaster, or Castle Hill, in Singleton Lodge grounds, Prestwich, (Also called How-caster.) Lowe-casters le, 322. From Hlāw (A), a mound, natural or artificial. The hill-fort, castle or station.

LYDIATE, a township in the parish of Halsall, four miles S.W. of Ormskirk. Lyde-yathe, 230. Lyde-gate, 349, 362. ? From Lida (A), a pestilence; or Lic (A), a corpse, and geat (A), a gate. The corpse gate. The roofed gateway to a church-yard under which the bearers placed the bier, was and is still called the lych-gate or corpse gate.

LYME, LIME, LYNE or LINE the. Some unknown boundary line. Lima, 322, I. 427. Lyma, temp. John. Lime, 230, 322. Lyme, B. Lyme Park, 581. Linea, 322. Lyne, 473. For etymology and derivation see Note 28, p. 37, and Note 66, p. 74. It should be added that besides the more extensive Lyme Park in Cheshire, there was a Lyme Park in Werneth, near Oldham, where probably a solution of the name Ashton-under-Lyme should be sought. The Rev. Dr. Hume observes that in the south-west of Scotland the limits of ancient forests may be traced by the word lyne; and in Dr. Jamieson's Scottish Dictionary, to lyne is to measure land with a line.

MACKERFIELD, an ancient fee incident to the Barony of Newton, in which district are Ashton-in-Mackerfield, Newton-in-Mackerfield (or en-le-Willows), Culcheth, Golborne, Haydock, Winwick, &c. Maser-felde, in Anglo-Saxon Chron. and Bede A.D. 642. Maker-felde, 230, 362. From Mag-er (Gael), and feld (A), a great cultivated plain. — (Rev. Edmund Sibson.)

MANCHESTER, the second city in England, situated at the confluences of the Irk and the Medlock with the Irwell, one hundred and eighty-six miles N.N.W. of London, thirty E. of Liverpool, and fifty-three S.S.E. of Lancaster. For its supposed British and Roman names see Chap. I. of this work, in which will also be found notices of its Saxon name Mame-ceaster; while its Anglo-Norman and English name for centuries is that giving title to this book — Mame-cestre. Proofs of this occur on almost every page throughout the work.

Marshal Field, or Master-Field, in Manchester, site not known. Maister-felde, 320. Mare-shal field, Marstis-feld, Mancstu-hold (? error), 322. Marshal-feld, 514 [it was then held by Sir John Bothe of Sir Thomas la Warre]; 564. ? From Maister (A), the most or largest; the master; or Mare-schall (N), a horse-keeper. A William le Mareschal held a plot of land in Deansgate, and also a burgage in Manchester in 379. Whether the real meaning be the largest field, the master's field, or the marshal's field, must remain a question.

Medlock, the river, which rises in Saddleworth, Yorkshire, runs in a south-westerly direction, and after having been increased by several brooks, empties itself into the Irwell in Hulme, Manchester, near the Bridgewater canal, to which it is a feeder. Mede-lac, s.d., 334. Medeloke, 320. Mede-lake, 322. From Med (B), complete, full, and llwoch (B), loch (Gael.), lake or pool. The full lake or pool. — (Rev. J. Davies.)

MELLOB, a township in the parish and four miles N.W. of Blackburn. Meller in Blackburnshire, 473. From Maclawr (B), a mart or market. (Rev. J. Davies.)

Mel-shaw-Lache, ? between Stretford and Chorlton-Hardy. Mel-sche-lache, 320. Mel-sthel-lache and Mel-stho-lache, 322. Mols-frel-lache and Men-shal-lache, 322. Mars leach, 322. [This last was the recent name of a small stream passing through Chorlton-Hardy, and giving name to a hamlet therein, now called Martledge. Mr. J. Higson.] The varying and perplexing orthography will only permit the suggestions of the Mill-shaw, the Minshull, the Mickle, or the Mersey Lache.

Mersey, the river, is formed by the junction of the streams Etherow and Goyt, near Marple, Cheshire, whence it flows westward, and near Stockport is joined by the river Tame, and thence it becomes the boundary between Lancashire and Cheshire to the sea at Liverpool. Mersee, 320. Mer-sye, 320. Mer-se, 322. ? From Mercia or meres (A), boundaries; and ea (A), water. The water-mere or river boundary of the old kingdom of Mercia, on the north, separating it from the kingdom of Northumbria.

Mere Brook, which falls into the Tame near its confluence with the Mersey. Mere-broke, 320, 322. The boundary brook, it being one of the meres or bounds of the demesne or lordship of Manchester. [Mr. J. Higson, of Droylsten, says this is now called the Black Brook near its source, and Cringle Brook, lower down.]

Mere Clough, between Reddish and Heaton Norris. There is another Mereclough near Royton, named in a deed of 320. Mere-clou and Mere-clowe, 320. Mere clou, 322. From Méare (A), a mere or boundary, and Cleofa (A), a clough or cleft rock or hill.

Mere Shaw Clough, near the Irk and Alkrington. Mere-schaghe-cloue, 320. Mere-sham-ton (? error), 322. See Mere Clough. This would seem to be the clough of the boundary wood-clearing.

Mere-stone the, or Blue-stone, on the boundary between the demesne of Manchester and the township of Reddish. Mere-stone and Blew-stone, at Reddish, 322. See Blew-stone. The meaning obvious.

Mickle- Muckle- or Milk-wall- [or Nicker and Nicko] Ditch,—a brook which rises between Gorton and Denton, passing between Gorton and Reddish and Gorton and Levenshulme, and enters the Gore Brook near Birch Church. Michel-ditch, 320. Muchil-dich, 322. Mikel-diche, 320. From Micel, mucel (A, pronounced mickle, muckle), great, much, and Dic (A), a ditch, trench, or moat. The great ditch. This may have been the Milk-wall-ditch, and was corruptly called the Nicko or Nicker Ditch.

MIDDLETON, a parish, market town and township, six miles N.N.E. of Manchester. Midel-ton, 230, 341, 351. Midle-ton, 313, 338, 342, B. 432, 437. Myddle-ton, B. Middle-ton, 362. The middle tún or habitation; ? midway between Manchester and Rochdale.

Michel or Muchel Mede, in Cuerdley. Michel-mede and Muchel-mede, 322. The large meadow.

Middle Brook, ? in Manchester, site not known. Midle-broc, 587. Meaning obvious.

Middle Wood, in Hulton. Midel-woode, 320. Midle-wood and Middle-wood, 322. Middels- and Midles-wood in Hulton, 473. Meaning obvious.

Milkwall Slade, afterwards Slade, in the townships of Withington and Rusholme. Milke-wal-slade, 320. Milk-wall-slade, s.d., 577. Mylk-walle-slade, 580. Milke-walle-slade, 584. Milkwall-slade, 588, 616. The Slade estate (24a. in Rusholme and 20. in Gorton) was bought in 584 by Edward Syddall, yeoman, from Ralph Slade. The present house, Slade Hall, was built in 1585. From Slæd (A), a low, flat, marshy ground. The milky-well, or mickle-well, flat or slade.

Milne Furlong, ? site not known. Mila-fesharh (? error), 230. Milne-furlange, 230. From Miln (A), a mill, and furlang (A), furlong; formerly a square as well as a long measure of land.

Milne-Riding the, in Heaton Norris. Milne-ridyng and Mil-riding, 282. ? From Hredding (A), a ridding or clearing, especially of timber or land. The mill clearing.

Mill-ward-Croft. There were two crofts so named in Manchester, sites not known; one perhaps in Garrett. Miln-warde-crofte and Mill-ward-croft, 282. Muln-ward-croft, 322. Myl-warde-crofte, 473. The Mill-wardes Croftes were bought by Walter Nugent of Ralph Hulme, gent., in 611. From Mylen-weard, mylen-wyrd (A), one who takes care of a mill, and Croft (A), a small inclosure near a building. The mill-keeper's croft or little field.

The Misies or Musies, in or near Strangeways, Manchester. Misies le, 320, and 322. Musie le, 322. ? From Meos (A), or Mousse (French), a moss.

Monithornes, in Eccles. Moni-thornes, 320. From Monig (A), many, and thorn (A), in the plural; many thorns.

MONTON, a hamlet in the township of Barton and parish of Eccles, five miles west of Manchester. Maun-ton, 277. Mawyn-ton, 292. Maun-ton, B. 320, 322, 589, 599. Mounlon (? error), 322. Manc-ton, 322. The monks of Stanlawe, afterwards of Whalley, had a grange or farm in Monton in 277. Hence the name may have been Monk-tún; or it may be from Mawan (A), to mow.

MOSTON, a township in the parish and four miles N.E. from Manchester. Mos-ton, 320, 322, 427, 473, 501. The habitation by the Moss.

MOSS-SIDE, a township in the parish of and two miles S. from Manchester. [There is also a hamlet of this name in the township of Droylsden, four miles east of Manchester, on the western edge of Ashton Moss.] The Mosse-Side, 585. Many small places on the borders of the Lancashire Mosses have this name.

Moss Ditch, in Crumpsall. Mosse-dyche, 320. Moss-dich and Mose-dich, 322. The ditch from the neighbouring moss.

Mossy Halgh, in Farnworth. Mosi-halughe in Farnworth, 320. ? From Haugh, how, (Sc.), a hill. The mossy-hill.

Nether Draught-gate, site unknown. See Draught-gate.

Nether Wood, in Cuerdley. Netherwood, 322, From Nether (A), lower, down. The lower wood.

New Carr, a plot of pasture in Cuerdley. New Carr and New Morres, 322. Either meaning obvious.

New Field, in Heaton Norris. Newfelt, 320. Meaning obvious.

New Ham or Holme, ? site not known. Newhume, 320. Newham, 322. Either meaning obvious.

New Plecks, a plot of pasture in Cuerdley. New Plecks and New Plecke, 322. From Plæc (A), a street, open place, or plot.

NEWSHAM, a township with Goosnargh in the parish of Kirkham, nine miles N.N.E. of Preston. News-am, 230. From Nīwe (A), new, and hām (A), a home or dwelling.

NEWTON HEATH, a chapelry in the parish and two miles N.E. of Manchester. New-ton, s.d., 320, 359, 473, 577. Among places named in Newton, are:—Shite-fald-clogh, s.d. Black-lach, s.d. Kirk-sagh s.d.

NEWTON-IN-MACKERFIELD, formerly a borough, now a chapelry, in the parish of Winwick, five miles north of Warrington. Newton-in-Makerfield, 362. See Mackerfield.

Nicker or Nicko Ditch, see Mickle Ditch.

North Deyne or Dene, in Prestwich. North dene in Prestwich, 320. [Deyne Hall, the ancient residence of the rectors of Prestwich, was taken down in 1837.] The north dale or small vale or shelter.

Nuthurst, an estate in Moston. Nuthurst and Nuthurste, 320. Notehurst, 322. Nuthurst, I. 501, 623. Nuthurst Mosse, 320, 322, (P now Hale Moss). From Hnut (A), a nut, and Hyret (A), a little wood or thicket, inclosing nut trees, hip, and haw bushes, &c.; the nut wood or copse. Nutshaw (the nut wood-clearing), is the name of a hamlet in the parish of Whalley.

Oaken Ley, a plot of wood (afterwards six messuages), in Horwich. Oken-ley ("a plot of wood in Horwich"), 320, 322, ("six messuages in Horwich"), 473. Meaning obvious.

OLDHAM, a chapelry in the parish of Prestwich-cum-Oldham, seven miles N.E. of Manchester. Old-ham, B. 322. Old-ome, 320. From Alđ (A), old, and hám (A), a dwelling, Openshaw, a township in the parish and three miles east of Manchester. Opyn-sawe, Open-sawe, Opin-schawe, Opin-shale, and Open-sae, 282. Opon-schaghe, 320. Open-shagh, Ope-shawe, and Openeschaghe, 322. Open-shaw, 473, and I. 501. Open-schagh Moor, 322. The open shaw or glade in the wood.

ORDSAL, a hamlet in the township of Salford and parish of Manchester (formerly a mesne manor), two miles west of Manchester. Horde-shall ("manor of"), 251. Ord-shall, 302. Ord-sall and Urd-sale, 311. Oard-sall, Urd-sale, Horde-shall, B. Orde-shall, 304, 330. Ord-sall, 358. Orde-salle, I. 375. Ord-shall, 473. Ord-sal, 589. From Orde (A), a proper name, or Ord (A), a point or edge; the first or original: and sal (A), a hall. The hall of Orde, or at the point or edge [of the river Irwell].

Osecroft, near Aldport, Manchester, one of the several names for the Brend-orchard, Wall-Greens, or Ese-croft (which see). Ose-croft and Ese-croft, 322. Ouse-croft, 396. From Ost, Est (A), East. This East Croft was east of Aldport. If it be Ouse, it is the Saxonised Usa from Usc (B), water, a stream; the river croft; and it bordered the Irwell.

Over Draught Gate, in Manchester; see Draught-Gate.

Oxwell or Oxwall; the head of this place was between Manchester and Chetham. Ox-walle, 320, 322. Oxe-wall, 322. The Ox-well or spring.

PARBOLD, a township in the parish of Eccleston, four miles west of Standish. Par-bold, 230, 322, B. 351, 473. Pare-bolde and Pro-bold, 230. Per-bald, 282, 349, 362, 473. Per-blat, 320. Par-bald, 322, 473. ? From Pera (A), a pear, and bold, bolt, botl (A), village or house. Or from Paro (Old High German), a hilly grove, and botl, a dwelling.

PENDLEBURY, a township in the parish of Eccles, four miles N.W. of Manchester. Pen-nil-burie, 230. Penne-hul-bury and Pen-ul-bury, B. Pen-dil-burie, 320. Pen-ul-bery, 354. From Pen (B), a head or hill, Hul (A), a hill, and Burh, Byrig (A), a town, castle, or fort. The old significance of Pen being lost, Hul was suffixed by later dwellers; both terms meaning the same thing in different languages. The name as a whole, and freed from surplusage, probably indicates a fort on a hill or headland.

PENDLETON, a chapelry in the parish of Eccles, two miles W.N.W. of Manchester. [There is another chapelry of this name in the parish of Whalley, named from Pendle Hill.] Pen-il-ton, Pen-nel-ton, 230. Penne-hul-ton, B. Pen-hul-ton, 351. Pendle-ton, B. From Pen (B), a head or hill, Hul (A), a hill, and tún.

PENKETH, a township in the parish of Prescott, three miles west of Warrington. Penk-et, 230. Penk-eth, 362. ? From Penig, peninc (A), a penny; or Pang (A), poison, and heth (A), heath. Or the first syllable may be Pen (B), a head or summit.

Pentifox or Penlifox, a parcel of land in Manchester, site not known. Pent-i-foxe, or Pen-li-foxe, 473. Can this be some corruption of Pentice [i.e. Pent-house] or Pentecost?

Peyfin or Peyten Gate, near Reddish and Heaton Norris, site not known. Pey-fin-gate, 320. Pey-tenen-yate, 322. ? From Pefen (A), a proper name (as Pefens-ea, Peven's Isle, now Pevensey, Sussex); or from Penniga (F), to pay, q.d., a toll or pay-gate. Mr. John Higson, of Droylsden, states that this neighbourhood now bears the name of Pink-pank-lane; the second syllable of which seems merely a jingle in imitation of some lost form. One of the old spellings suggests Peat-Ingate. There were two Pin-gates, near Ordsall and Pendleton. But the derivation is altogether obscure.

PILKINGTON, a township in the parish of Prestwich-cum-Oldham, six miles N.W. of Manchester. Pilkin-ton, 230, 322. Pakin-ton, 230. Pilkyn-ton, 282, 359. Pilking-ton, 282, 320, 322, 346, 349, 362. Pylking-ton, 301, B., 351. Pilkering-ton, 311. Pilken-ton, 473. The tún (A), or abode of the Pilkingas, an old Saxon family or mark. Tradition says that a Pilkington fought under Harold's banner at the Battle of Hastings.

Pillingsworth Fields, ? in Blakeley. Pillings-worth Fields, 473. ? The land, farm or estate of a Pilling, and the fields appurtenant.

PRESTON, a borough, market town, parish and township, twenty-two miles south of Lancaster, and thirty-three N.N.W. of Manchester. Preston, s.d., 179, 328, 359, 362. From Preost (A), a Priest, and tún.

PRESTWICH, a parish with Oldham, and a township, four miles N.N.W. of Manchester. Prest-wyche, 230, 301, B. 341. Prest-wich, Prest-wick, B. Prest-wyke, 291. Of places named in Prestwich are North Deyne, 320; Roden (whence Rooden Lane), 340. From Preost (A), a priest; and there are various names of places in Lancashire into which this word enters, as Pres-cot, Pres-ton, Priest-Hutton, near Lancaster, and perhaps Prees-sall, near Garstang. Wich (Old Germ.) is equivalent to wic (A), wik (F), a dwelling or place of abode. The retention of this form, instead of the Anglo-Saxon or Friesic, shows that a different tribe stamped their speech upon the names of Prest-wich, Hor-wich, &c.

Pull or Pool Green, ? in Barton (where are Pull Moss and Pull-Fold). Pulle-grene and Pulle-grenes, 322. From Pul, pol (A), a pool, whence a reed was called a pull-spere. The Pool green.

Pyecroft, in Manchester, site not known. Py-croft, Pye-croft, 322, 514, 564. It was held in 514 by Sir John Bothe of Thomas Lord la Warre. ? From Pye (N), worse, or Pi, Pie (N), a well; or from Pye (A), the magpie, and croft (A), a small field.

RADCLIFFE, a parish and township, seven and a half miles N.W. of Manchester. Rade-clive, 086, 282, 320. Rade-clyf, 341. Rad-cliff, B. Rat-cliffe, 517. Usually supposed to be Red-cliff, from the red sandstone. But perhaps from Rade (A), a road or way, and clif (A), a cliff; the cliff-road, or road by the cliff. The old form was Clive, as Rade-clive; Cunde-clive, now Cunliffe.

Radley or Ridley Wood, in Horwich, site not known. Rade-ley and Ryde-ley, 422. Rydd-ley wood, in Horwich, 473. The ridded or cleared ley in the wood, or the wood by the cleared ley. There was a Radley or Rodley, near Ordsall and Pendleton.

Rakes the, ? in Heaton Norris. [There was also a hamlet called Rakes, in the township of Great Lever, a mile and a half south of Bolton.] Rakes the, 320. ? From Raca, race (A), a rake, or reac (A), a reek or smoke. But Rake, in the north of England, has several other meanings, as a rut, crack, or crevice, a mine or quarry, a narrow course or path. The last is perhaps the most probable meaning. A narrow, steep path near Keswick, by which the Countess of Derwentwater fled, is still called "The Lady's Rake."

REDDISH, a township in the parish and five miles S.E. of Manchester. Re-diche, 230. Redich, B. 523. Re-dyche, Redishe, and Re-dyshe, 320. Ry-dich, B. Redish 322, 578. Red-wyche, 341. Reddish, 559. It has been supposed that this was called the red ditch, from some battle between the Saxons and the Danes. But the old etymologies are more in favour of the reed or reedy ditch.

Rede-broke, near Crumpsall, site uncertain. Rede-broke, 320. Red-broke, 322. There was Red-broc near Werneth. The reed or reedy brook.

Ridding Bank, a close in Manchester, site not known. Ridding-banke, 433. Riddinge-bruke (? error), 473. The clearing bank, See also "Bank the," and Rydern Brook.

RIVINGTON, a chapelry in the parish and six miles N.W. of Bolton. Ru-win-ton, 230. Ruh-win-ton, 230. Ro-win-ton, 230. Roving-ton, Rovinge-ton, and Rugh-yn-ton, B. Roving-ton, 394, 408, 430, 475, 511, 521, 538. Places named in Rivington are Chapel Croft, 475. Little Roving-ton, 511. ? From Ruh (A), rough, and Winton (A), the old name of Winchester. Or from Rofen (A), riven, cleft. (Refian A, to rob or spoil). The high peak which appears to give the place its name was formerly called Ryven Pike; now Rivington Pike. Pic, Pig (B), is a pointed end or beak; Pike or peak has long meant in England the pointed or peaked top of a hill. So this hill's name doubtless meant the cleft or split summit or hill, and that of the town at its foot, the dwelling by such cleft peak.

RIXTON or RISHTON, a township in the parish and three miles E.N.E. of Blackburn. Rix-ton, 230, 362. From Rix (A), a rush. The rushy tún or dwelling.

ROCHDALE, a parish and market town, eleven miles N.N.E. of Manchester. Reced-ham, 086. Ratche-dale, 311. Rache-dale, 362. Roch-dale, B. Roche-dale, 341. ? From Roch, Roach or Rache, the river, of Racu (A), a flood. Or from Rakud (Old Saxon), a baronial seat. At the Domesday Survey a Saxon thane held Rochdale. The modern name is simply the dale or vale of the Roch.

ROYTON, a chapelry in the parish of Prestwich-cum-Oldham, two miles north of Oldham. Ry-ton, B. Ry-ton, Ruy-ton, 581. ? From Rige, Ryge (A), rye, or Rih (A), hairy, rough; and tún.

RUMWORTH, a township in the parish of Dean, a mile and a half S.W. of Bolton. Rum-he-worthe, 230. Rome-worthe, Reme-worthe, 282. Rom-worth, 351, 362, B. Rume-worth, Rum-worth, 320. Rum-worth, 322. Roms-worth, 346. Rom-worthe, 362. Rum-worthe, 473. ? From Rúm (A), roomy, wide, broad, open, spacious; and worthig (A), land, a farm or estate, &c. The broad land or farm. The wide street or way.

RUSHOLME, a township in the parish and two miles S.S.E. of Manchester. Ryss-ham, 316. Rys-um Bridge, 320. Ryss-um, Riss-um, 473. Ris-holm, 564. Ris-hulm, 546. Ris-ham, 581. Ris-holme, 588. ? From Risc (A), a rush; also the marshy ground where rushes grow (J. M. Kemble). Rusce (A), probably soft, marshy ground. (Ib.) The rushy holm, flat, or river meadow. A rivulet which rises in Audenshaw, runs in a south-westerly course through part of the parish of Manchester, and through the township of Rusholme, and falls into the Mersey near Stretford, bears the name of the Rush. There still exists Rush-ford.

Ryder Brook, ? in Manchester, site not known. Rydern-broke, 320, 322. There was a Ryton (Ruyton) Brook. ? From Ryden (A), the red rape or darnel; or Ruding, Ryding (A), a clearing.

SALFORD, a borough, market town and township in the parish of Manchester, from which city it is separated by the river Irwell, so as to form a western suburb of Manchester; anciently approached thence only by one bridge, called the Salford Bridge, nearly on the site of the Victoria Bridge. Now it is connected with Manchester by three principal and some smaller bridges. Sal-ford, 086, B., 320, 322, 341. Sale-forde, 230, 320. Sal-forde, 320. Salt-ford, 230, 282. Sal-fforde, 231. Sal-forthe, B. Sal-forth, 506. From Sal (A), black, dark-coloured; or from Salh, Salig (A), a sallow or willow; scarcely from Sealt (A), salt. The ancient orthographies seem to point chiefly to the willow ford, or the dark ford. Sal (Old High German), Sele (A), a seat or dwelling, a hall (Rev. J. Davies). But "Sal, as a prefix, never means hall or guest-chamber; but always a sallow-tree or willow, as Salford." — (Mr. J. Just.)

Salter-gate or Salters-gate, ? between Withington and Heaton Norris, site not known. [Mr. J. Higson, of Droylsden, says it is now Thorneley Lane; but ? whether Burnage or Slade Lane is not more in the line. There was also a "Saltes-gate, near Beswick and Bradford, s.d.] Salter-gate (the bound "between Withington and Heaton"), 320. Salter-yate and Salters-gate, 322. See Note 76, p. 428. ? From Saltern, (A), a salt-pit, or place for salt, and Geat, gat (A), a gate, cattle-way or entrance; or gath (A), a going. Or from Sealtene (A), a salter; the Salters' Road or the way to the salt-pits.

Salt-lode, ? in Cuerdley, site not known. 322. ? The way for carts laden with salt from the Cheshire wyches.

Samland, a plot in Manchester, site not known. Sam-land, 282. From Sam (A), semi, half. A half-land, — a land being that piece of unploughed ground which lies between the furrows in a ploughed field.

Schirer, water of, ? near Manchester, site not known. Schirer ("midstream of"), 334. From Scir, scyr (A), a divider, a shire or division. Or from Scira (A), pure, clear. Thus scyre water, a pure water; Scir burna (Sherburne), a clear river. It has been suggested that this may probably be the old name of Shooter's Brook.

Sharpen-ley, a plot of moor in Horwich. Sharpen-ley and Sharp-dale, 322. From Scearp (A), sharp, sour, and ledh, a ley or field. The sour-field. May not Sharples (q.d. Sharp leys) be another form of Sharpen-ley?

SHARPLES, a township in the parish and three miles north of Bolton. Chapples, 230. Sharp-les, 320, 327, 427. Sharp-lus, 473. For derivation see Sharpen-ley.

Shaw the, and Shaw Head, in Heaton Norris, site not known.

Schawe the, 320. Schawe-hede-le, 320. The head of the shaw, or wood-glade or clearing.

SHOLVER, a hamlet in the township and parish, and three miles N.E. of the town of Oldham. Chol-ler, B. ? From Sciol (B, pronounced shol), head, and vaur (B), great. — (Rev. John Davies.) The hamlet takes its name from a hill.

Shoresworth, an estate including a mansion and sixty acres in the manor of Ordsal and township of Pendlebury. ? Chades-worth, 230. Soresworthe, Shores-word, Shores-worde, 282. Schores-worth, 320, Shoresworth, B. 589. Showers-worth ("in the vill of Pendlebury"), 599. From Shore, Sore (A), a deep dell, issuing from a dene or bottom, and running very abruptly into the surrounding hilly ground, as at Helmshore. — (Mr. J. Just.)

Slive Hall, ? in Pendlebury, site not known. Slive-halle, 230. ? From Slifan (A), to cleave, to split.

SMITHELLS or SMITHILLS (also called Smithells Dean), a hamlet in the township of Halliwell and parish of Dean, five miles N.W. of Bolton. Smithells Hall is in this hamlet. Smyth-el, 320. Sultoc [? error], Smith-ell, 322. ? From Smæde (A), smooth; or Smith (A), a smith, carpenter or workman; and ledh (A), ley; or hill.

Smith Field, or Smithy Field, a close in Manchester, site not known. Smithin-feld, Smythe-feld, 322. Smith-feld, 427. Smithie-field, Smith-fielde, 473. From Smith, Smithe (A), smithy or smith's forge or workshop.

Sohacre, a plot in Manchester, site not known. Soh-acre, s.d. ? Soc-acer (A), the exempt or privileged acre; or, Sloh-acer (A), the slough acre; or perhaps Sour Acre.

Sporthe, or Sperthe, the, ? site not known. Sporthe le, Sperthe the, 282. ? From Sprit (A), sprouted, budded; or from spyrd (A), a measure of ground containing six hundred and twenty-five feet or one hundred and twenty-eight paces; the old Roman stadium.

SPOTLAND, a township in the parish, and forming part of the town, of Rochdale, to the north. Spot-land, 311. From the stream or river Spod or Spodden; the land by the Spodden.

STOCKPORT, a borough and market town, partly in Cheshire, and partly (Heaton-Norris, &c., north of the Mersey) in the parish of Manchester, in Lancashire, six miles south of Manchester. Stoke-port s.d. Stop-ford, 334. From Stoc, stocce (A), a stock, trunk, block or stick; also a place; hence Stoke, Woodstock, &c. The town-place. There seems also to have been a ford over the Mersey here.

STRANGEWAYS, a hamlet in the township of Chetham, parish of Manchester, and adjoining Manchester on the north. Strang-wich and Strang-wish, v.d. Strang-was, 320. Strang-ways, 322, 547. Strange-ways, 556. Strang-ways Halle, 546. Strang-waies, 541, 545, 590. Strang-ways ("manor, mansion and demesnes"), 514, 569. ? From Strang (A), strong, rigid, and wæg (A), way. The strong, stiff, or hard ways. "This name marked the line of a Roman road, meaning 'the way of the stranger.'" — (Rev. Edmund Sibson.)

STRETTFORD, a chapelry in the parish and four miles S.W. of Manchester. Stret-ford (a "vill") s.d. Strete-forde, 230. Stret-forde, 320. Stret-ford, 341. From Stræt (A), a street, way, or road, and Ford (A), a ford or way through shallow water. "Street" in any local name marks the site of a Roman road. At Stret-ford was an ancient ford over the Mersey.

Stretford Brook, in Stretford. Stret-forde-broke, 320. Stret-ford-broke, 322. This would be the brook by the ford at the old Roman road.

Sunderland, a small manor ? in Clayton, Droylsden. Sunder-land, 473. Synder-land, 564, 574. In Danish districts Sunder-land would mean the Southern lands; elsewhere, it denotes land sundered or set apart for special purposes.—(J. M. Kemble.) This must be distinguished from Cinderland (a name borne by several places in Lancashire), which is probably from Cynder (B), the principal or head land.

Tame, the river, rises in the wild moors of Saddleworth, Yorkshire, enters Lancashire at Mossley, and thence forms the boundary line from Cheshire, running in a S.W. direction through Staleybridge to Ashton-under-Lyne, Denton, Haughton and Reddish, and soon afterwards joining the Mersey at Stockport. Tame, 320. From Tam, Taw (B), Tame, Thame, a river or stream, whence the Thames, the Tamar, &c. The British words also mean quiet, still,—applied probably as characteristic of the stream so named.

TARBOCK, a township in the parish of Huyton, four miles S.S.W. of Prescott. [Little Tarbock is a hamlet within this township.] Thor-boc, 230. Tor-boc, 362. ? From Twr (B), Tor (A), a tower, rock, or peak, and beacn (A), a beacon. Probably a beacon tower.

Tenterleaher, a parcel of land in Manchester, site not known. Tenter-leaher, 473. ? From Teón, teohhian (A, to stretch, to pull, to draw; whence teltre, A, a tenter-hook), and ledher, ? fields; perhaps the tenter-fields or bleach-crofts.

TILDESLEY, a township in the parish of Leigh, twelve miles west of Manchester. Tildis-ley, Tydes-ley, 230. Tildes-legh, 362. From Tilian (A), to till. ? The tilled ley, The s is not accounted for, but the not distant township of Worsley was formerly called the Worked-ley, and was sometimes spelled Workeds-ley.

Tin Croft, ? in Manchester, site not known. Tinne-croft, Tynne-croft, 322. From Tin (A), tin, or Tynde (A), inclosed. The Tin croft or inclosed croft.

TOCKHOLES, a chapelry in the parish and four miles south of Blackburn. Tock-hole, B. ? From To-haccan (A), to hack in two, to cut down, and Hol (A), a hole or bottom. The cut or hacked hollows.

TONGE, a township in the parish of Prestwich-cum-Oldham, adjoining Middleton on the south. Tange, 230. Tong-more ("in Prestwich"), 569. ? From Tung (A), tonge (F), the tongue; or Ton, Tang (A), tongs; or perhaps the tún-weg or town-way. •

TOTTINGTON, a royal manor (of the honour of Clitheroe), consisting of Tottington-Higher-End, a township five and a half miles north of Bury, and Tottington-Lower-End, a chapelry two and a half miles N.W. of Bury, and both in the parish of Bury. Totin-ton, 230, 262. Toting-ton, B. Totyng-ton, 341. Places in Tottington in 307:—Toting-ton frith, Mose-bery Park, Roland clogh, Ragged Birch, Uggeden-broc, Holle-holme. From Totingas (A), the name of a community or mark, and tún (A), their dwelling-place.

TRAFFORD, OLD, a hamlet in the township of Stretford and parish of Manchester, two miles S.W. of Manchester. [Trafford Park and demesne, the ancient seat of the Traffords, is in the township of Barton and parish of Eccles, about five miles west of Manchester.] Traf-furthe, B. Trat-forde (? Stret-ford), B. Traf-forde, 320. Traf-ford, 322. ? From Treow, tryw (A), a tree; or Threo, thry (A), three; or Threat (A), a swarm, band, or troop; or Thrydda (A), third, and Ford (A), a ford. The Tree or Troop ford, or the three fords or third ford.

Turf Pits, the, between Heaton Norris and Reddish, "where the lane ceases to be the boundary."—(Mr. J. Higson of Droylsden.) Turre-pittes, the, 320. From Turf (A), turf or peat, and Pyt (A), a pit.

TURTON, a chapelry in the parish and four miles north of Bolton. Tur-ton, 230. Ter-ton, Tor-ton, Tur-ton, 282. Tur-ton, B., 320, 322, 473. Tour-ton, 322, 351. Places in Turton in 1297:—Birch-Wode, Red-clogh head, a fosse and a torrent. From Twr (B), Tur, tor (A), a tower, and tún. The tower-dwelling. Turton Tower is still a tall tower of four storeys, with an embattled parapet.

Twart Ford, or Twantir Ford, ? a plot of land in Manchester or Ardwick, site not known. Twantir-ford, 282. Twart-ford, 322. ? From Thweorh (A), athwart, crooked; the crooked or skew ford.

UNSWORTH, a hamlet in the township of Pilkington and parish of Prestwich, three miles S.S.E. of Bury. Undes-worth, 320, 322. ? From Unde (A), a proper name, in the possessive case, and weorth (A), a farm or property.

URMSTON, a township in the parish of Flixton five miles S.W. of Manchester. Est-ton [? Orme-est-ton, or Orme's ton], 230. Ormes-ton, B. From the Scandinavian proper name Orme, for Wurm, ? Orme's tún or Orm-East-town. There are also in Lancashire Orme's-kirk, and Orme's-gill, near Furness.

Walleby or Watteby, ? in Cuerdley, site not known. Watte-by, Wal-bye, 322. ? The Wall or Well ley or field.

Wall Greens, another name for the Brend Orchard, or the Ese or Ose Croft, Manchester (which see). Walle-grenes, 320. Walle-greene, 322. The first syllable, according to its derivation from one or other of several Anglo-Saxon words, may mean the wall, the well or spring, the weald or wood, or the field greens,—most likely the Well or Spring Greens.

Wall or Well Lode, in Cuerdley. Walle-lode, Walle-led, 322. The Wall or Well cart-road or ford.

Warche, Ward, or Warthe, the, ? a pasture in Cuerdley. [There was a Warthe, in Ordsall or Pendleton, in 634.] Warche, Warde, the, 282. Warthe, the, 320. Warche-ley-side, 322. Warch-bisi-bee (? error), 322. ? From Wearc (A), work; or Ward, weard (A), a guard or keeper. Derivation doubtful; but probably the same meaning as Garth, yard.

WARTON, a chapelry in the parish and three miles S.S.W. of Kirkham. Ware-ton, B. ? From War (A), seaweed, or Ware (A), merchandise, and tún.

Werneth, an estate or district (including the hill called Werneth Lowe) in Oldham. Wern-yt, s.d. Wern-eth, B. Places named as in Werneth, are:—the Red-broc, Stani-broc, the Bred-lew, Bradley, Bred-lew-clogh, and Lam-clogh, all s.d.; and Bright-dockce, 320. ? From weorn (A), decayed, and heth (A), heath; or “from gwern (B), a watery or swampy meadow; also the alder-tree, which grows in such places.”—(Rev. J. Davies.)

WESTHOUGHTON, a chapelry in the parish of Dean, five miles north of Leigh. West-halgh-ton, 320. West-halch-ton, West-hough-ton and West-hal-ton, 322. West-hough-ton, 473. Weste-hag-ton, 473. From *Hali*g, halic (A), holy, or Haugh (A), a valley-meadow. Probably called West Houghton to distinguish it from Little Houghton, a hamlet in the township of Worsley; or from “Long-Est-Halghton,” which see.

White Acres or Whitacres, eighteen acres of land in Manchester, site not known, (given by Albert Grelle to the Monks of Swineshead Abbey, Lincolnshire.) Wyth-acres, 230. Whyte-acre, 320. Qwyth-acres-ford, 334. ? From Withig (A), the withy or willow-tree. It may be the Withy-acres, the Wheat-acres, or the White-acres.
